CHAPTER I.

DOWN an old trail in the Ghost range, in northwestern Mexico, just across the Arizona border, a mounted prospector wound his way, his horse carefully picking its steps among the broken granite blocks which had tumbled upon the ancient path from the mountain wall above. A burro followed, laden heavily with pack, bed roll, pick, frying pan and battered coffeepot, yet stepping along sure footedly as the mountain sheep that first formed the trail ages ago and whose petrified hoof prints still remain to afford footing for the scarcely larger hoofs of the pack animal.

An awful stillness hung over the scene that was broken only by the click of hoofs of horse and burro upon the rocks and the clatter of the loose stones they dislodged that rolled and skipped down the mountain side. Not a breath of air was stirring, and the sun blazed down from the zenith with such fierce and direct radiation that the wayfarer needed not to observe the shadows to note its exact position in the heavens. Singly among the broken blocks and in banks along the ledges the cactus had burst under the heat, as it were, into the spontaneous combustion of flowery flame. To the traveler passing beside them their red blooms blazed with the irritating superfluity of a torchlight procession at noonday.

The trail leads down to a flat ledge which overlooks the desert and which is the observatory whither countless generations of mountain sheep have been wont to resort to survey the strange world beneath them, with what purpose and what feelings it remains for some imaginative writer of animal stories to inform us. From the ledge to the valley below the trail is free from obstructions and broader, more beaten and less devious than above, indicating that it has been formed by the generations of men toiling up from the valley to the natural watchtower on the heights.

Reaching the ledge, the prospector found that what seemed from the angle above to be an irregular pile of large bowlders was an artificial fortification, the highest wall being toward the mountains. Entering the inclosure, the prospector dismounted, relieved his horse of its saddle and his burro of its pack and proceeded to prepare his midday meal. Looking for the best place where he might light a fire, he observed in the most protected corner a flat stone marked by fire and near it in the rocky ground a pothole, evidently formed for grinding maize. The ashes of ancient fires were scattered about, and in cleaning them off his new found hearth the man discovered a potsherd, apparently of a native olla or water jar, and a chipped fragment of flint too small to indicate whether it had formed part of an Indian arrowhead or had dropped from an old flintlock musket.

"Lucky strike!" observed the prospector. "I was down to my last match." And, gathering some mesquite brush for fuel and rubbing a dead branch into tinder, he drew out a knife and, rapidly and repeatedly striking the back of its blade with the flint, produced a stream of sparks, which fell on the tinder. Blowing the while, he started a flame. When the fire was ready the man shook his canteen. "Precious little drink left," he said. "I wish that potsherd carried water as the flint chip does fire. However, there's lots of cactus around here, and they're natural water jars. My knife may get me a drink out of the desert's thorns as well as kindle a fire from its stones. And right here's my watermelon, the bisnaga, the first one I've found in months!" he exclaimed, going over to the edge of the cliff, above the level of which peered the fat head of a cactus covered with spines that were barbed like a fishhook. Its short taproot was fixed in a crevice a few feet below the parapet. Lying on the edge of the cliff, the man sliced off the top of the cactus and began jabbing into its interior, breaking down the fibrous walls of the water cells, of which the top heavy plant is almost entirely composed. In a few moments he arose.

"Now I can empty my canteen in the coffeepot, sure of a fresh supply of water by the time I am ready to mosey along."

He filled the pot, set it on the fire and then pressed the uncorked and empty canteen down into the macerated interior of the bisnaga.

While his coffee was boiling the prospector continued his examination of the fortification, beginning, in the manner of his kind, with the more minute "signs" and ending with what to a tourist would have been the first and only subject of observation—the view. On the inner side of the large bowlder in the wall he discerned the faint outline of a cross painted with red ocher.

Scraping with his pick beneath the rock to see if the emblem was the sign of hidden treasure or relic, he unearthed a rattlesnake. Before it could strike with a quick fling of his tool he sent the reptile whirling high in the air toward the precipice. But from the clump of cactus growth along the parapet arose a sahuaro, with branching arms, and against this the snake was flung. Wrapped around the thorny top by the momentum of the cast, it hung, hissing and rattling with pain and hatred.

The prospector looked up at the impaled rattlesnake with a smile. Reminiscences of Sunday school flashed across his mind.

"Gee, I'm a regular Moses!" he ejaculated. "First I bring water from the face of the rock, and then I lift up the serpent in the wilderness. The year I've spent in the mountains and desert seems like forty to me, and now at last I have a sight of the promised land. God, what a magnificent view!"

Dropping his pick, he stretched out his arms with instinctive symbolization of the wide prospect and expression of an exile's yearning for his native land.

"Over there is God's country, sure enough," he continued, giving the trite phrase a reverential tone which he had not used in his first expression of the name of Deity. "Thank him, the parallel with old Moses stops right here. Many a time I thought I would never get out of the mountains alive and that my grave would be unmarked by so much as a bowlder with a red cross upon it. But now before night I'll be back in the States and in three more days at home on the old ranch. I promised to return in a year, and I'll make good to the hour. I sure did hate to leave that strike, though, after all the hard luck I had been having. Sixty dollars a day and growing richer! But the last horn was blowing—no tobacco, six matches and nothing left of the bacon but rinds. Well, the gold is there, and the claim 'll bring whatever I choose to ask for it. And Echo shall have a home as good as Allen Hacienda and a ranch as fine as Bar One. Yes, it'll be Bar None, my ranch!"

Out of the sea of molten air that stretched before him, that nebulous

chaos of quivering bars and belts of heated atmosphere which remains above the desert as a memorial of the first stage of the entire planet's existence, the imagination of the prospector created a paradise of his own. There took shape before his eyes a Mexican hacienda, larger and more beautiful even than that of Echo's father, the beau ideal of a home to his limited fancy. And on the piazza in front, covered with flowering vines, there stood awaiting him the slender figure of a woman, with outstretched arms and dark eyes, tender with yearning love.

"Echo—Echo Allen!" he murmured, fondly repeating the name. "No, not Echo Allen, but Echo Lane, for Dick Lane has redeemed his promise and returns to claim you as his own."

As he gazed upon the shimmering heat waves which distorted and displaced the objects within and beneath them a group of horsemen suddenly appeared to him in the distance and as suddenly vanished in thin air.

"Rurales!" ejaculated Lane. "I wonder if they are chasing Apaches. That infernal mirage gives you no idea of distance or direction. If the red devils have got away from Crook and slipped by these greaser rangers over the border, they'll sure be making straight for the Ghost range and by this very trail. If so, I'm at the best place on it to meet them, and here I stay till the coast is clear." Turning to the red cross on the rock, he reflected, "Perhaps, after all, it's a case of 'Nebo's lonely mountain.'"

Lane had hardly reached this conclusion before he found it justified by the sight of a mounted Apache in the regalia of war emerging from a hidden dip in the trail below the fortification. Lane dropped behind the parapet, evidently before he was observed, as the steadily increasing number and loudness of the hoof beats on the rocky trail indicated to the listener.

Crawling back to his horse and burro, he made them lie down against the upper wall and picketed them with short lengths of rope to the ground, for he foresaw that danger could come only from the mountain side. Taking his Winchester, he returned to the parapet and, half seated, half reclining behind it, opened fire on the unsuspecting Apaches. The leader, shot through the head, fell from his horse, which reared and backed wildly down the trail. Other bullets must have found their billets also, but because of the confusion which ensued among the Indians the prospector was unable to tell how many of them he had put out of action. In a flash every rider had leaped off his horse and, protecting himself by its body, was scrambling with his mount to the protecting declivity in the rear. The prospector was sorely tempted to pump his cartridges into the group as it poured back over the rim of the hollow, but he desisted from the useless slaughter of horses alone, knowing that he could be attacked only on foot and that every one of his slender store of cartridges must find a human mark if he would return to the States alive. "They've got to put me out of business before they can go on," he ruminated. "An Apache is a good deal of a coward when he's fighting for pleasure, but just corner him, and, great snakes and spittin' wildcats, what a game he does put up! I must save my cartridges, for one thing's sure—they won't waste any of theirs. They're not as good shots as white men, for ammunition is too scarce with them for use in gun practice, so they won't fire till they've got me dead to rights. Let me see. There's about a dozen left in the party, and I have fifteen cartridges. That's three in reserve for my own outfit if some of the others fail to get their men. Those red devils enjoy skinning an animal alive as much as torturing a man, and you can bet they won't save me any bullets by shooting Nance and Jinny."

Reasoning that the Indians would not dare to attack by way of the open trail in front and that it would take some time for them to make the detour necessary to approach him from above, since they would have to leave their ponies below and climb on hands and knees over jutting ledges and around broken granite blocks, Lane coolly proceeded to drink his coffee and eat his lunch of hard bread and cold bacon rind. After he had finished he gave a lump of sugar to each of his animals and pressed his cheek with an affectionate hug against the side of his horse's head.

"Old girl," he said, "I'm sorry we can't take a parting drink, for I'm afraid neither of us will reach our next water hole. But you can count on me that the red devils won't get you."

Then, going to his pack, he undid it and took out a double handful of yellow nuggets and a number of canvas bags. These he deposited in the pothole and, prying up the flat stone of the fireplace, laid it over them and covered the stone with embers.

"It's a ten to one shot that they finish me," he reflected, "but the wages I've paid for by a year of hard work and absence from her side stay just as near Echo Allen as I can bring them alive and, if there's any truth in what they say about spirits disclosing in dreams the place of buried treasure, with the chance of my getting them to her after I am dead."

HANDSOME OFFICES IN THE CITY BUILDINGS

Anyone having occasion to call on Chief of Police Thompson or Publicity Commissioner Duggan in the city buildings, is at once struck with the attractive appearance of the entrance way and the offices. It is actually a treat, and the contrast between past and present conditions is at once obvious.

The stairway leading to the offices and the City Council chamber, has been repaired and repainted. New and handsome office secretaries and other furniture are shown off to good advantage in the renovated offices, which have felt the hand of the carpenter, painter and paperhanger. The office of the chief of police is on the right hand side as you go up the stairway, and that of the publicity commissioner on the left. The former has an adjoining room, which will be used for consultation purposes.

Alterations and improvements will be next made to the police station.

ANOTHER C.P.R. TRAIN ON TORONTO TO OTTAWA LINE

World.

That the Canadian Pacific Railway has decided to develop the possibilities existing for passenger traffic to the north of the city was officially announced last night. Incidentally, Toronto is given a train service with Montreal.

Beginning Monday night, a passenger train will leave West Toronto at 945 p.m., and North Toronto (Yonge street) station at 10 p.m., arriving in Montreal at 7 o'clock next morning. A companion train, leaving Montreal at 10.45 p.m., will reach North Toronto at 7.50 a.m., and West Toronto 15 minutes later. The train will run nightly except Sunday.

According to the arrangement, the service is "in order to better accommodate the citizens of Toronto, especially those residing in the west and north. In as much as those trains will not have to depend on any connection, they will leave sharply on time, and the service will no doubt be greatly appreciated."

These trains will carry coaches and sleepers to and from Montreal and Ottawa.

The result of the experiment will likely go a long way towrad deciding the C.P.R. in its suspected designs of establishing a large passenger station and freight yards to the north of the city.

Meantime the Montreal train will leave the Union Station nightly, but half an hour later that is at 10.30 p.m., instead of 10.

DOUBLE DROWNING TO-DAY

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER MET DEATH IN OTONABEE RIVER

LAUNCH WAS UPSET

Wife of Mr. William Laing 588 Sherbrooke Street and Daughter Hazel, Were Drowned in River at Dangerfield, Near Stewarts Landing-- Mishap to Steering Gear Caused Launch to Collide With Steamer Otonabee -- Body of Mrs. Laing Recovered.

Mrs. Laing, wife of Mr. Wm. E. Laing, 588Sherbrooke street, and her three-year-old daughter, Hazel, went down to death at 11 o'clock this morning in the waters of the Otonabee, at Stewart's Landing, seven miles the river.

NEWS RECEIVED.

The first news of the fatality reached the city shortly after eleven o'clock. Beleghem's undertaking wagon was notified to go to the street railway wharf to take charge of the bodies of two persons who had been drowned a few miles down the river. As the news began to spread people began to assemble at the wharf to wait for the arrival of the steamer "Otonabee," which was supposed to be bringing in the victims of the sad affair. Until the steamer arrived nothing definite could be ascertained.

A PICNIC.

The "Otonabee" had been chartered to-day to take the employees of the Peter Hamilton Company down the river on their annual excursion. Mr. Laing, husband of the drowned woman, is employed in the Peter Hamilton Company as is also one of his sons. Mr. Laing owns a launch, and he decided to take some of his family in it, and accompany the steamer.

SIX IN LAUNCH.

There were six in the launch, Mr. and Mrs. Laing, two sons, Everett and Douglas, and their two little daughters.

The steamer went down about seven miles to what is known as Dangerfield bridge. Here she tied up. The return trip was commenced after a stop of a couple of hours at this point.

HOW IT HAPPENED.

When the steamer started home the party in the launch kept pace with her, running almost parallel to it. Those on the boat watched her approaching, and some of them shouted to them not to come too close. By this time they were only a few yards away from the steamer. Just here the accident occurred.

RUDDER FAILED TO RESPOND

Mr. Everett Laing, who was steering, commenced to steer away from her, but something went wrong with the rudder, and she failed to answer to the wheel. With a terrific bump, as is testified to by the mark on the side of the "Otonabee," she struck her just in front of the gangway, near the bow.

BOAT TIPPED.

Instantly the boat turned turtle, and, eye witnesses say, that it turned over two or three times. All the occupants were left struggling in the water.

GOOD FORTUNE FOR SAVED.

An empty skiff was attached to the launch, and to this fact it is probably due that more of the party were not drowned.

MR. LAING GOT IN BOAT.

Mr. Laing managed to get into this boat. The exact details of how Mrs. Laing and the little child were drowned were unobtainable, but the boy, Everett, managed to save one of his sisters.

FUTILE EFFORTS.

Efforts to save Mrs. Laing and the other little girl were quickly made, but without avail. Mrs. Laing's body was quickly recovered and placed on the "Otonabee."

ENGINE REVERSED.

As soon as the captain of the "Otonabee" saw the launch upset he reversed her engines and brought her rapidly to a halt. The crew of the "Otonabee" rendered all possible aid, but the accident had occurred so quickly that they were able to do but little. The little girl's body was not recovered at the same time as her mother's.

THEIR SAD WARNING.

Another son, Roy, was down the river in a canoe, and knew nothing of the affair until he met the steamer returning home, bearing the body of his mother. Rueben Laing, a clerk in the G.T.R. freight office, was also unaware of the dreadful tragedy for some time after it had occurred. He immediately went down to the scene of the accident to assist in the efforts being made to recover the body of his little sister.

FRENZIED HUSBAND.

When the steamer pulled in at the wharf and the body of Mrs. Laing taken off a large crowd had assembled. Mr. Laing and his son were almost frenzied with grief, and were unable to give a coherent account of the affair. Everett was positive that he turned the wheel turning it away from the boat. He was of the opinion that the weeds in that neighborhood had interferred with the working of the rudder, thus rendering the launch unmanageable.

WAVES HGIH.

The waves caused by the Otonabee, were so high that the boat was turned over like a flash. The skiff in tow, however did not capsize, and while most of them managed to grasp it, Mrs. Laing and little Hazel were unable to do so and sank. Everett made the most determined efforts to save his mother, but when her body was recovered life was extinct.

CAMPING DOWN RIVER.

It appears that as many of the family as could get off work had been camping down the river about a mile from the foot of Park street. Mr. Laing, having the day off, thought he would take the rest of the family down on the trip.

The other children presented a pitiful appearance as they stepped off the steamer at the wharf. The little seven year old girl was crying bitterly.

Mr. Laing was unnerved with grief and appeared to be half dazed. Everett and Douglas bore up well and were the only ones of the family who were able to give an any way intelligible account of the fatelity. Everett Laing is a young man, while Douglas is about fourteen of fifteen years of age.

SECOND DROWNIG ACCIDENT RECENTLY.

This is the second drowning tragedy within two weeks that has plunged homes into grief. Coming right on the heels of the drowning of Arthur Hunt, the news of the second occurrence has aroused a widespread feeling of sympathy and regret, and to the bereaved Mr. Laing and the rest of the sorrowing family, the sympathy of hundreds of people will be extended in this, his terrible trial.

STEAMER NOT TO BLAME.

Those in charge of the steamer "Otonabee" are not to blame for the lamentable affair. Their best efforts were put forth to rescue the six people struggling in the water. On the arrival of the steamer at the street railway wharf General Manager Pinchin was at once notified of the accident, and he gave orders for the steamer to return with grappling irons to the scene of the drownings to recover the body of the child. The boat left the wharf about two o'clock.

MANY INQUIRIES.

As the news of the drownings reached the city many inquiries were made at the Review regarding the affair, and general regret was expressed. One rumor had it that three of the party had been drowned, but this is not correct.

The late Mrs. Laing was a lady well known and esteemed by all. She had been an active worker in the Knox Presbyterian church, and a member of the Ladies' Aid Society.

IN SOCIETY

British Columbia Sunset

One of the smart functions of a bright and busy week was the tea given by Mrs. Balmer McAlister on Tuesday afternoon at her lovely home at Edmonds. The hostess wore a striking Paris gown of figured silk in a dull shade of pink, veiled in black marquisette and exquisite diamond ornaments. She received her guests in the large living room, a most artistic spot, decorated in a lovely combination of blue and green and fragrant with quantities of peas astors and delicately shaded carnations. In the dining room, the table was most attractive, centred with a beautiful cloth of Venetian point lace, and decorated with large and smaller brass baskets of many hued nasturtiums, their lovely tones being carried out in the dainty refreshments.

Mrs. Charles G. Pennock and Mrs. Oliver Campbell, both of Vancouver poured tea and coffee, and Mrs. Gracey of New Westminster presided at the punch bowl, while a number of the younger friends of the hostess were most attentive in looking after the comfort of the guests. A pretty girl in a pale lemon colored frock and huge picture hat, rendered several piano selections adding much to the pleasure of the occasion.

SPORTING NEWS

WHEN TOMMY BURNS WORE FALSE MOUSTACHE

Tommy Burns, the heavyweight champion of the British Empire, will play outside home for the Vancouver lacrosse team against New Westminster in the Labor Day match at Recreation Park. President Con Jones of the Vancouver Club to-day secured Burns' consent to the proposition. Burns is to receive the trifling sum of $1,000 for his afternoon's work, which is not quite up to his record for ring engagements, but sets a new figure for salaries in Canadian lacrosse.

Burns is now in the city and will take in to-morrow's game at New Westminster. He will go back to Seattle to-morrow night and will move up here with his family on Monday. He will train all week with the Vancouver team and as he is in pretty good condition at the present time he should be fit to go the hour and twenty minutes at top speed.

The champion will be pitted against Tommy Gifford, the sturdy cover-point and captain of the Newwestminster team. He used to play lacrosse in the east and figured in a couple of games in Australia. He showed at practice a couple of months ago with the Vancouvers that he has not forgotten how to handle a stick and he will get a chance to show all he knows on the holiday.

PLAYED IN EAST.

The announcement that Tommy Burns will play lacrosse with the Vancouver team on the holiday recalls some of Burns' earlier experiences in the Canadian national game. Tommy learned to play lacrosse with his native team at Hanover, Ont., and also to make furniture in the furniture factory there. The latter pursuit led him to Preston when a youth and when the Galt Lacrosse Club was organized in 1897 a permit was secured for Burns to play goal for the new team, which was lucky enough to land the C.L.A. championship in its first year. Then Burns was known by his real name of Noah Brusso. Nobody knew him as Tommy Burns at that time.

Noah played in goal, and the lacrosse he played was of the strenuous variety. He could not resist the temptation of straying from the citadel and mixing in the fray when the ball neared the Galt nets, and often got himself disliked by the crowd for his wandering tendencies, which endangered the team's chances of success. Perhaps there was no player on the team who was more frequently ruled off for fighting. Whenever an opponent would hit him with his stick he would drop his lacrosse and sail in with his fists, and before he was pulled away the other chap's countenance was frequently the worse for wear.

Among his team mates were Bobby Pringle, of Ottawa; Mat Brush, the veteran; Donald Hall, once of Cornwall, and Bobby Stewart, he of the long locks.

In the following year the old Woodstock Beavers were reorganized, and Noah afterwards drifted westward, locating in one of the Woodstock furniture factories and incidentally playing lacrosse. Here his pugilistic tendencies more frequently evinced themselves for he played on the home.

After a year or two in Woodstock Brusso went to Detroit, where he broke into the fighting game.

WORE FALSE MOUSTACHE.

It was in the City of Straits that the famous episdeo of the false moustache occurred. Detroit, was anxious to organize a lacrosse team, and did so. A game with Chatham was arranged on the understanding that the team was to be composed of bona-fide fide amateurs. Brusso was now a "pro.," having fought for money, and the only way to bring him into the game was to disguise him. This was effectually done by a black moustache. It was not put on securely enough and in the progress of a little pugilistic mix-up with one of the Chatham team the attachment came off, and Noah Brusso stood revealed. This put an end to Detroit's lacrosse ambition. Tommy laughs when he recalls the incident.

In the old days Brusso was a slightly built fellow, and did not tip the scales at more than 130 or 135 pounds. The Tommy Burns of to-day weighs 200 pounds. Burns played lacrosse for Seattle when Lionel Yorke had the team. He was a home man then and weighed around 165.

RUGBY

Ben Simpson is in the city to-day, after a vacation at Stoney Lake. Ben will be in Ottawa to-morrow to attend the semi-annual meeting of the Interprovincial Rugby Union, with other officers of the Hamilton Tigers.

TENNIS

A team from Lindsay is playing the Y.M.C.A. this afternoon.

BE A BOOSTER

Charles Curtis.

What are you doing to boost the MEET?
Are you telling your friends
As you meet on the street,
Peterborough's lucky.

You can do a whole lot every day,
Tell the bunch to be there,
And get in on your share,
GOULDING'S coming.

Hand the dope to the people
Put them wise to the deeds
This is what the MEET needs
Mention TAIT.

Tell them all about BARBER'S big jump,
Say that Knox, the half-mile,
Will be there with his smile,
JACK NEAR too.

Speak of TRESSIDER, CEBERT and BROCK, Say it isn't a case where you bite,
But a time when you yell all your might,
Hand it out.

Boost it every old place you may go,
Tell your boss, tell your girl,
Tell your sis, Min and Pearl,
To be there.

BE A BOOSTER

To John Penman, a manufacturer of Paris, Ont., is due the annual Penman games. In 1904, when sports were at a low ebb, he donated a shield for competition in the various branches of the Young Men's Christian Association. His purpose was to encourage and elevate amateur athletics and allowance was made for a number of events to be competed for by athletes outside the Y.M.C.A. The West End Y.M.C.A. won it the first year, and have successfully defended it since, with Toronto Centrals and Hamilton, always pushing them to the limit.

As an evidence of interest, which is manifested in outside cities, the West End and Central Y.M.C.A. are running an excursion here for the games. The Centrals hope to take the honors home with them.

This morning Mr. J. J. Thompson received word from Montreal to the effect that nine entries would be sent. Each is a Y.M.C.A. member and therefore eligible to compete.

Each Y.M.C.A. association pays the expenses of their representatives and in one case from Toronto $500 was subscribed for this purpose.

Do the lovers of good clean athletics in Peterborough, of which there are many, realize the honor which is associated with this Meet? Have they taken into consideration that some of the best athletes in Canada will be here? Will they patronize the games and thereby encourage those in charge to continue in the work. The Review hopes so.

SINGLES CHAMPION?

Mr. F. D. Kerr. Was Eliminated from Race by Sandy Hall Scores Were 6-3, 3-6 and 6-4

Who will win the gentlemen's singles of the Peterborough Lawn Tennis Association. The interest at present is at fever heat. Last night Mr. F. D. Kerr, of the Golf Club, who has held the honors for the past eleven years, was defeated by Sandy Hall of the Y.M.C.A. club, and is out of the race. The scores were 6—3, 3—6 and 6—4.

Landry, also of the Y.M.C.A., meets Meyers, winner of the Consolation, and the championship will rest between that winner and Hall.

Mr. R. J. Devey refereed last night.

Did the King Pepper Him?

London, Sept. 2.—King George, known as the best hunting shot in England, is believed to be the one who accidentally shot Lord Kilmarnock during a hunt Wednesday at Ballater, near Balmoral Castle.

It turned out, however, that the wounds were slight, and, aside from possible scars, his lordship will be none the worse for his experience.

A Plucky Boy.

Toronto, Sept. 2.—Walker Rockwood, a small boy from the Mimico Industrial School, fell at noon at the model playground at the Exhibition grounds and broke both forearms. Dr. H. L. Smith of Detroit and Dr. Follett fixed him at the emergency hospital on the grounds, and shortly after one o'clock he was out on the grounds again, enjoying himself.

Jury Blames Officials.

Newark, Ohio, Sept. 2.—In a final report made yesterday the Licking County grand jury places the responsibility for the lynching of "Dry" Detective Carl Etherington on July 8, on the then mayor of Newark, sheriff of Licking County and chief of police of Newark, all of whom have since resigned or been deposed.

LOCOMOTION'S PROGRESS.

Edinburgh Cannot Decide Who Was Inventor of Pneumatic Tire.

The dispute arose about a statue. Who invented the pneumatic tire? To whom should Edinburgh give honor in bronze or marble—to R. W. Thomson, who patented an air filled tire in 1845, or to John Dunlop, who invented the pneumatic tire in 1888? The dispute carries the imagination back over one of the most astonishing episodes in industrial history.

It was in 1845 that Thomson patented the idea of affixing a "belt" filled with compressed air to the rim of a carriage wheel, and, although his invention never came into practical use, he showed great knowledge of the good effects which would follow from the use of the pneumatic tire.

Forty-three years later John Dunlop, without any knowledge of the Thomson invention, patented a pneumatic tire. The safety bicycle had then come into vogue, but its wheels were shod with solid rubber tires. Mr. Dunlop's little son possessed a tricycle, and as the Dunlops then lived in Belfast and the Irish roads were of very bad surface this veterinary surgeon applied a rubber tube filled with compressed air, and it afforded such comfort to the rider that Mr. Dunlop brought the idea before adult cyclists, and some enthusiasm was aroused. But Mr. Dunlop would have hardly been more successful in 1888 than Thomson in 1845 had not another man appeared on the scene.

Harvey du Cros was at that time a prominent figure in Irish sporting circles, and his sons were famous for their prowess in cycle racing. With true business instinct Mr. du Cros saw the immense possibilities of the pneumatic tire for cycles, and he threw himself heart and soul into the work of making this crude invention practicable. His early efforts were greeted with derision.

Then Mr. du Cros took a band of Irish cyclists, including his sons and R. J. Mecredy to England, and they gained sweeping victories with the pneumatic tire on the racing track. But for the enterprise and ability of Harvey du Cros Mr. Dunlop's invention might have lain dormant for many years.

Had this been the case the whole progress of modern locomotion from motoring to airmanship would have been checked, for we can trace the direct influence of the air-filled tire in all the astonishing developments of the last twenty-two years. So from the bad state of Irish roads, from the solicitude of a fond parent to make smooth progress for his son's cycle over rough roads, Thomson's idea was recreated, and this time the right man was at hand to develop the idea.

No one questions the honest motives of those who advocate local option, or prohibition—not even we who brew Regal Lager. But the temperate folk who use Regal Lager as a daily beverage, for the health's sake know how mistaken is the idea that so pure a tonic a drink is an intoxican.

DELFT EMBROIDERY.

Smart Effects For Use In Summer Cottages.

Delft embroidery is new and is most attractive in its cool dullness of tone for the summer room. It is nearly all worked in dull blue of several shades upon a sort of coarse butcher's linen so nearly white that it can scarcely be called cream.

All of these bags are faced with the lighter of the three shades of blue and drawn up with corresponding ribbons.

It must be remembered that the choice of color is as important a factor in this work as is the design if the finished product is to resemble delft ware.

Varying but slightly in idea and general effect, the two bags show each a different little Dutch figure, one of them knitting, the other merely a face and both of them done in a combination of stitches, including outline, solid, skeleton, cat stitch and laid work.

They are used to their best advantage in the carrying out of each part of the design, as are also the several shades of blue.

Dutch figures similar to these are carried out in a whole line of art needlework, including larger bags for the family mending, laundry bags, bedroom hangings and couch cushions.

A prominent feature throughout the whole lot of this delft blue fancy work is the standing or seated figure of a woman knitting. She is characteristic of her country—a thrifty housemother providing for her family by primitive means.

All of these figures are treated by that method known to the decorative artist, a method that outlines its most impressive parts with a single darker line. In this case it is accomplished by outlining.

One of the bags is intended for darning, one for knitting, and like designs may be applied to all sizes of workbags or to many pieces of linen for use in the bedrooms of summer cottages.

The Guest Towel.

One of the prettiest designs in bedroom towels seen for a long time is called the guest room towel. It is of soft damask, woven in a dainty scattered design of sweet peas, a deep border of the flowers appearing at the ends, which are hemstitched.

The size is 20 by 38 inches and the price 35 cents each.

A novelty in bath towels is a bleached Turkish towel, with a red jacquard border that will not run in the washing, but will come from its tubbing looking like new. It costs only 25 cents and measures 20 by 44 inches, a reasonable price.

The crossbar dimities and the self checked lawns are responsible for some of the daintiest looking pillowshams designed especially for summer use.

A rather large checked lawn, decorated with water lilies above a scalloped border, is thirty-two inches square and costs 85 cents. The scarf, 18 by 34, is the same price.

A second design is a grouping of daisies and bowknots set on above a pretty scroll pattern edge buttonholed, the material crossbar dimity. This is thirty-two inches square and costs 50 cents. The scarf is the same price.

Another pretty idea is a pillowsham of fine dotted swiss hemstitched to a wide border of sheer crossbar. Price 85 cents.

For the Tea Drinker.

Those women who are fastidious in regard to their tea will be interested in a new teapot that seems to have reached perfection. It is simple too. Inside the pot there is a tea ball, its chain passing through the knob on the cover of the pot. This ball is filled with tea and is drawn up into a hollow in the cover.

Freshly boiled water is poured into the pot, and the steam arising from it moistens the tea. After a few minutes the ball is lowered into the water, then raised when sufficient strength has been extracted—all this without lifting the lid of the pot.

Price in polished copper or nickel, $5.

Is Your Loaf Like This?

If your flour is of the right quality, it ought to produce uniformly good bread. When the loaf comes out of the oven it ought to be appetizing and inviting in appearance. The crust should be crisp, tender and sweet as a nut. The pores of the bread should be regular showing uniform expansion by the yeast and every loaf should be light, plump and should expand over the top of the pan. Bread made from Ogilvie's always comes up to the highest standard of excellence when made right. It is always uniform and good to look at as well as good to eat.

Summer and winter, day after day, month after month, "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" is milled by exactly the same process from exactly the same standard uniform grade of the best Red Fyfe wheat. And this uniformity is guaranteed by rigid safeguarding tests at the mills before the flour is shipped out.

A petition is being circulated asking the electors of the centre subdivision to allow Mrs. Long to transfer her license from the American hotel to suitable premises in the above subdivision. The American House was not being refitted according to requirements, hence the move.

IS HOME FROM THE CONVENTION

Chief Howard has returned from attending the Fire Chiefs' Convention at Syracuse. When seen this morning he was very enthusiastic about it and had many interesting things to tell. The chief withdrew from running for the office of Vice-President at the request of the Canadian delegation, as they feared if he accepted it would necessitate his resignation from the office of secretary, which he now holds.

Several new features, which add to the completeness of modern appliances for fire fighting were discussed. The gasoline fire engine promises to displace the steam engines in the near future. Experiments have been made with it, with such success that the manufacturers of the steam engine are beginning to see the necessity of withdrawing.

On the whole the chief reports the convention to have been one of much value to all attending.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—The following letter speaks for itself. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, naturally enough, represents the triumph of Roman Catholicism in Canada. He has much personal charm, and the acumen of a diplomat. It is doubtful if any man in Canada could better serve the ends, intentionally or unintentionally, of the Roman Church. The present militant, aggressive and almost ferocious attitude of the Hierarchy, the world over, is being well served in Canada, as this letter shows. A more important use of national honors can scarcely be imagined. The church anathematizes and condemns non-Catholics to the flames of hell. It proscribes them as a pestilence and a menace. In the face of such an attitude towards them how can Laurier bow all Canada before the Church and ask its blessing upon the condemnation of a large part of his people! The flame is not far from bursting forth, but will it be quenched before righting the wrong done? Not if Laurier and his conferes can help it.

Ottawa, Aug. 30.—A leading Anglican of the Archdiocese of Ottawa makes vigorous protest in The Citizen this morning against the manner in which the whole machinery of the federal government is being used to boom the eucharistic congress at Montreal. He says;

"Two ecclesiastical dignitaries, representatives of two great divisions of the Christian church, are visiting Canada. One is the Bishop of London, a subject of King George and a representative of the state Church of England; the other is Cardinal Vannutelli, a subject of the King of Italy and a representative of the Church of Rome.

"The Bishop of London, on his arrival in this country, met with a fitting reception from the Anglican body, but, very properly, received no official recognition from the Canadian Government.

"With Cardinal Vannutelli a different course is pursued. The government, representing all Canadians, without regard to sectarian differences, has delegated one or two of its members to welcome the Italian on behalf of the people of Canada, the troops maintained by the taxation of Catholics and Protestants alike, are ordered out to serve as his bodyguard, and the government steamer Lady Grey is placed at his disposal. What is the cardinal to Canada, or Canada to him, that he should be singled out for such honors?"—Toronto World, Aug. 31.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—The Examiner says it is unfair. It may be selfish, and even bad policy, but not unfair. I have been over on a cattle boat, and there is nothing in it, embargo or not. The present conditions have allowed a vested interest to be created, and it would be unfair to change. Does the Examiner desire further trouble in Ireland; and I would ask if there is a cattle trade across the line and to other foreign countries? England is by far the best customer of Canada. Selfish!

The Way He Scored.

Sir Charles Todd was for many years at the head of the Adelaide observatory and was the chief of the South Australian weather bureau. Once when visiting one of the smaller towns of the colony he called on a man who had gained a local reputation as a weather prophet. Without disclosing his identity Sir Charles said to him:

"I dabble a little in weather predicting myself. Would you mind telling me how you arrive at your conclusions?"

"Oh, that's easy enough," was the reply. "There's an old cove in Adelaide called Todd who puts in the papers what he thinks the weather's going to be, and I always put just the opposite to what he says, and that's the way I score."

READ THE REVIEW'S NEW SERIAL STORY

"The Round Up," Which Commences In This Issue

There's a bunch of cowpunchers in this story it will do you good to meet, and for good measure there's Slim Hoover, sheriff, whom nobody loves because he's a fat man. And there are other characters of the great southwest—women of charm and interest, desperadoes and soldiers—whose doings on the stage have called forth much favorable comment from the public and the critics. They are woven into a plot of dramatic interest, colored by characteristic actions and sayings of typical women and men of the land of the rattlesnake and the Gila monster, the long horned steer and the lowly, despised sheep. The incidents of the tale will hold you; the women and the men will attract you. They are different from those of other yarns of the west, that is ever "ready for a fight or a frolic."

LAURIER'S TOUR CONCLUDES; RETURNS AN OPTIMIST

The Premier Winds up His Great Trip With a Retrospect of His Original Formation of the Present Government With its "Cabinet of Premiers."

Medicine Hat, Alta., Sept. 3.—On the conclusion of the meeting here yesterday afternoon, which was attended by 3,000 people, the greatest political tour which Canada has ever seen passes into history.

Political tour it has been, for, as E. M. Macdonald, the party champion from Nova Scotia, said: "Some opposition newspapers profess surprise that Sir Wilfrid and has colleagues are talking politics. I wonder what they thought we would talk about? Are they afraid of the comparison we have made, and will continue to make?"

Sir Wilfrid, in his speech, avoided any lengthy discussion of weighty questions. He deplored the fact that Medicine Hat had gone back on the Liberal faith, and hoped the condition was only temporary, and it would return to its former love at the next opportunity.

Sir Wilfrid dwelt retrospectively with the circumstances under which he called together the "cabinet of premiers." After mentioning the names of Sir Oliver Mowat and Hon. A. G. Blair, he said, with reference to the Ministry of the Interior: "I wanted a strong man: I wanted a man from the West. I found that man in Clifford Sifton." After that subsequent events had justified his choice. When Mr. Sifton resigned he found Hon. Frank Oliver ready to take up the work along the same lines as his predecessors. Referring to the condition which obtained when the Liberals came into office, the Premier said: "We determined to change those conditions by opening up this country."

What the result has been was apparent to all. The 70,000 American settlers who came into Canada last year had brought $70,000,000 of wealth in with them. "Under these circumstances," he exclaimed, "is it any wonder that the whole west has improved, and Canada is feeling bigger than ever?"

There was some difficulty, the Premier continued, in assimilating the foreigners who came to Canada, on account of her democratic institutions. He had met many Americans an the trip, and had asked one and all if they were satisfied, and the answer always was "Yes; we are satisfied, and are proud to become Canadian citizens and British subjects."

GASOLINE LAUNCH EXPLODES

Sandwich, Sept. 3.—Two young men had a dangerous experience Thursday night near the Pittsburg Coal Co.'s dock, when their gasoline launch became ignited from an explosion, and they were forced to jump into the river to save themselves from the burning gasoline.

The launch was in five feet of water when, without a moment's warning, an explosion occurred, and the little boat was enveloped in flames. One young man's neck was slightly burned. Both waded to shore in the shallow water. The boat is a total wreck. The loss is about $900. The men refused to give their names and got away as soon as possible.

DROWNED WHILE CARRYING NEWS

Cobalt, Sept. 3.—While carrying the news of the death of a friend to Elk Lake City, Alfred Easy was drowned in the Montreal River. The friend was William Payne, caretaker at No. 2 of Booth's lumber camps, who fell dead i na fit. Easy found him, but how long he had been dead he could not tell. He set out with a canoe to take the news, and later his (Easy's) upturned canoe told of his own death.

Found In St. Clair River.

Sarnia, Sept. 3.—The dead body of a man about 65 years of age, was found yesterday morning floating in the St. Clair River below Courtright. A purse containing 50 cents was found on the body, but there were no marks or papers to indicate his identity. The remains were taken charge of by Coroner Dr. Hayes, and, if unclaimed within twenty-four hours, will be buried here. No inquest will be held.

HIGH PRAISE FOR COLEMAN

Sheffield, Sept. 3.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—At the British Association meeting Prof. Coleman of Toronto, in his Presidential address to the geological section, dealt with the history of the Canadian field to bring together, as he said, our knowledge of the most ancient chapters of history in North America as disclosed by recent field work.

Prof. Bonney, proposing a vote of thanks, said it was a great advantage to workers in the narrow island to get so admirably expressed views of one who had the privilege of examining a great continent. Hardly ever had there been a more interesting address to the section. Sir Archibald Geikie, who seconded the vote, said he had hardly ever listened to a more luminous and pleasant address. He hoped this was not to be Prof. Coleman's last visit.

To his British confreres in the report by Dr. Marron on new exposures discovered in ancient rocks in Yorkshire, Dr. Spencer of Toronto spoke of a similar series of fossils he had investigated in Canada.

QUEEN'S OWN WERE INSPECTED

London, Sept. 3.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Gen. Smith-Dorrien, with Gen. Maxse, watched the Queen's Own evolutioning for two hours Thursday in glorious sunshine.

Gen. French inspected the regiment on Monday and the Duke of Connaught on Wednesday.

Next week the Q.O.R. participate in the inter-divisional and command manoeuvres. Then comes a holiday in London, when the lord mayor lunches them at Guildhall.

On the 18th they enter the army manoeuvres, remaining in the field till they take the train for Liverpool.

The officers faced piles of invitations to dinner, but they solved the problem by dining in contingents at various messes each night.

DIDN'T LIKE HIS PREACHING, SO THEY WHIPPED HIM AND BURNED HIS CHURCH

Parkersburg, W. Va., Sept. 1.—The story of the whipping of a preacher by white-caps and the burning of his church building by them because they did not like the faith he preached has just been brought here. A mob of about fifty whitecaps dragged Rev. Scott Williams, a Holiness preacher, from his home at Dry Ridge, near Grantville, Calhoun county, early in the morning, and whipped him severely.

Two of his neighbors, Albert and Wesley Poling, went to his rescue, but the crowd whipped them al o. Then the Holiness tabernacle, in which Dr. Williams says the whitecaps told him that he must leave the country within ten days or they would kill him.

Bitter feeling has arisen bethe citizens and the following of the holliness faith as the result of meetings, and these outrages and the Hol ness people have said that Dr. Williams may remain there as long as they do. Williams says he will remain. His wife is ill because the whitecaps tied a pillow over her head and almost smothered her to keep her from making an outcry.

BANDIT KILLED BY A STONE

Colorado Springs, Col., Sept. 3.—In a desperate attempt to hold up westbound Colorado Midland train No. 3, four miles west of Divide, early yesterday, an unknown bandit was instantly killed by a rock thrown by Engineer Frank Stewart after he had shot the engineer in the leg.

The highwayman crawled over the tender as the train slowed up at a siding to meet the eastbound train. As he stopped the train, Stewart turned to see his fireman, Paul Bachman, standing with his hands above his head and heard the robber say: "Put up your hands or I'll blow your head off."

The robber then forced both men to leave the engine and marched them before him to the express car.

"When we got to the express car," said Stewart, "my fireman dashed under the car and crawled to the other side. The robber leaned under the car to shoot at him and when he took his eyes off me, I struck him with all my strength with a rock I had picked up as I jumped off the tender. Before the rock hit him he whirled and shot at me, the bullet striking me in the leg. I guess my blow finished him for he never moved after the rock hit him. I must have fainted then."

INTERNATIONAL TAX COMMISSION

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 3.—Allen Ripley Foote, Columbus, Ohio, was re-elected president of the International Tax Commission at the closing session of the conference yesterday. Among other officers elected are:

Vice-president for Dominion of Canada—Col. A. J. Matheson, Ontario.

Corresponding secretary, U.S.—A. C. Pleydell, New York City, secretary New York Tax Reform Association.

Corresponding secretary, Canada—G. R. Geary, mayor of Toronto.

Daring Woman Aviator.

Ostend, Belgium, Sept. 3.—Miss Helene Dutrieu, the French aviatoress, established a new record for women pilots in distance and altitude with a passenger yesterday.

With a companion in her aeroplane Miss Dutrieu flew from this city to Bruges and returned, a total distance of about 28 miles. At Bruges she circled above the famous belfry of Leshales at a height of 1,300 feet.

CARDINAL LEGATE AND PARTY VISIT STE. ANNE

Mgr. Vannutelli is Taken on Government Steamer Lady Grey to Scene of Congress—Quebec En Fete During His Stay There.

Quebec, Sept. 3.—The cardinal legate and his party, which included the Archbishop of Montreal and other distinguished prelates, left Quebec yesterday afternoon for Montreal via Three Rivers and Sorel, by the Government steamer Lady Grey. The Minister of Marine, Hon. L. P. Brodeur, welcomed the party on board.

The legate had obviously been delighted with his stay in Quebec, and as he stood on the gangway of the Lady Grey on the point of departure, he expressed his thanks to the assembly, and gave them his blessing. On the King's wharf, whence the departure was made, were the papal Zouaves, including many veterans of the Italian campaign, acting as a guard of honor.

The large and brilliant assembly that gathered to bid his eminence Godspeed in his journey to the Eucharistic Congress at Montreal included Archbishop Begin, chief pastor of the Diocese of Quebec, and other dignitaries. The laity were represented by Mayor Drouin, corporation officials and other prominent citizens.

The day in Quebec had been spent less strenuously than the previous day. The morning opened with early mass at the Basilica, which was packed to overflowing the legate being celebrant, assisted by Archbishop Begin. After breakfast the party journeyed in motor cars to the shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupre, which much interested the visitors. The afternoon was taken up with seeing the Plains of Abraham and the other historical landmarks.

On Saturday morning the legate and party will disembark at Three Rivers, where mass will be said at 6 a.m., and a welcome will be tendered by the Bishop of Three Rivers, who will accompany the party to Montreal. A stop will also be made at Sorel, where a welcome will be tendered by the Bishop of St. Hyacinthe, who will also journey to Montreal.

During his stay in Quebec the cardinal visited the Catholic Temperance Congress at Laval, where he received an ovation from a great gathering. He thanked them for the splendid welcome, and declared, amid laughter, that temperance was a cardinal virtue. He congratulated the gathering on the work the temperance societies were doing for the uplifting of humanity, and in closing he gave the assembly a blessing in the name of the Sovereign Pontiff.

During the two days of the legate's visit Quebec has been crowded, the hotel have been besieged by a constant stream of visitors, and accommodation has been at a premium and difficult to obtain.

HECTOR FABRE DIES IN PARIS

Ottawa, Sept. 3.—Hector Fabre, Canadian commissioner to France, is dead. He had been sick for some time and the cable announcement yesterday morning was not unexpected. He represented Canada at Paris for a great many years.

Hon. Hector Fabre, C.M.G., had been commissioner-general for Canada in France since 1882. He was born in 1834 and was educated in Montreal. He had been connected with Canadian journalism for many years, being editor of L'Ordre at Montreal, 1862; Le Canadien, Quebec, 1864; L'Evenement, Quebec, 1867-82. He was a Senator from 1874 to 1882, and was created a C.M.G. at the close of the Indian and Colonial Exhibition at London in 1886. In 1894 he was created officer of the Legion of Honor for services rendered to Canada in France. He published a book, "Chroniques," in 1370.

"FILL THEM FULL OF LEAD"

Hammond, Ind., Sept. 3.—"Fill full of lead everyone apprehended in the act of attempting to wreck a train."

This order was issued yesterday from detective headquarters of the Nickle Plate Railway, as the result of four recent attempts to wreck Nickle Plate trains between Hammond and Hegewisch. The Chicago-New York flyer was nearly ditched near Hegewisch Thursday, rail bands and straps having been removed from two rails.

D. R. A. Winners.

Ottawa, Sept. 3.—The following are the winners of the Canadian Rifle League prizes, which were shot for at the D. R. A. meeting: Hon. the Minister of Militia's prize, $50—Col.-Sergt. James Freeborn, 13th Regt., Hamilton. President's prize, candelabra—Governor-General's Footguards, Ottawa. Vice-President's prize, cup—Lieut. A. J. Meiklejohn, 43rd Regt., Ottawa.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Dr. James Cowan, a pioneer of Portage la Prairie, is dead.

The garment workers' strike in New York has been settled.

A little girl was killed by a rattle snake at Ann Arbor, Mich.

The Queen's Own had a 12-mile route march from Aldershot yesterday.

The Government has decided to admit sugar used for making wine free.

A young man was accidentally killed by a companion while hunting near Philadelphia.

Mrs. William E. Lang of Peterboro and her young daughter were drowned by the upsetting of a launch.

The lock-out of masons at Winnipeg has been settled by arbitration, and the men will return to work next week.

The demand for men in the West is still keen, although ten thousand harvesters have already gone up this season.

The Militia Department refused the request of the eucharistic congress committee at Montreal to allow troops to take part in the ceremonies.

WOMAN CAUGHT THE BURGLAR

Buffalo, Sept. 3.—Mrs. Oscar Haffa wife of a musician in the 65th Regiment, captured a burglar early yesterday. Aroused from sleep by a noise in the parlor under her bedroom, she quietly crept downstairs, stole up on a man, who was standing over a lantern, and suddenly pinioned his arms behind him. Assisted by one of her young daughters, she held the struggling intruder until the arrival of a police officer, summoned by another daughter. The man, locked up on a charge of burglary, said he was George H. Robertson, 30 years old, of Tonawanda.

Haffa is with his regiment at the Toronto Exhibition.

HEART STOPPED FOR HALF AN HOUR BEFORE HE DIED

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 29.—Medical circles and psychological students are interested in the peculiar phenomena accompanying the death in a private hospital here of Theodore P. Bailey, assistant manager of the Philadelphia offices of the General Electric Company.

Blood poisoning followed a delayed operation for appendicitis apparently caused Baily's death at 11.45 last Saturday morning. At that moment all pulsation stopped, his eyes became glazed and closed, his limbs rigid, and his body cold.

But for 27 minutes he continued to talk to his wife and daughter by means of the deaf and dumb alphabet.

Several physicians to-day professed to see nothing improbable in the story, though they admitted it was unusual for a person to be able to talk after his heart apparently had lost all action.

LOCK-OUT IN BRITISH SHIPYARDS

London, Sept. 3.—Lock-out notices were posted at all the federal shipyards at noon yesterday advising the members of the Boilermakers' Society that their services would be dispensed with after yesterday. Fifty thousand men are directly affected.

The trouble is due to a strike on Thursday of the riveters employed at the Walker Shipyard at Newcastle-on-Tyne. The employers claim that this constituted a breach of agreement and declared that those locked out will not be allowed to resume work until the Boilermakers' Society guarantees a fulfillment of the terms of the national agreements for the prevention of strikes and lock-outs.

MOUNTED POLICE FOR HUDSON BAY

Halifax, Sept. 3.—Lieut.-Col. Fred White of Ottawa, comptroller of the Northwest Mounted Police, has been in Sydney for two days past, arranging for the shipment of supplies to Hudson Bay for the use of the police in that section, and for the work of the Hudson Bay Railway. It seems that the opening of the Hudson Bay district will mean much to Sydney during the construction stages of the road. Sydney is nearly 400 miles nearer Hudson Bay than Quebec, and the supplies of coal and steel are practically certain to go from Sydney.

NEW VESSELS LAUNCHED

London, Sept. 3.—The plans of the Allan Steamship Co. for the improvement of its Canadian service provide for the construction of three turbine steamers, each 700 feet in length, registering 20,000 tons and having a speed of 22 knots an hour.

It appears that the existing agreement between the Allan line and the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. for carrying the mails will not be renewed, and the Allan people propose to have their new ships ready in 1912, when the mail contract expires, so that they will be in a position to carry all the transatlantic mails in their own vessels.

CONVENTION CONCLUDES

Union of Municipalities Elect Mayor of Halifax President For the coming Year.

Toronto, Sept. 3.—J. A. Chisholm, mayor of Halifax, was yesterday elected president of the Union of Canadian Municipalities by acclamation. The convention concluded at noon and the delegates took in the Exhibition in the afternoon. The meeting decided to hold the convention next year at Quebec.

There was a division of opinion on the question of export power, but the following resolution was passed: "That in the sense of this convention the water powers of the country are a national asset which should be preserved for the benefit of Canada by building up Canadian municipalities and that no perpetual or long term rights of exporting power from such sources should be granted, and that, where temporary rights of export are allowed, there should be clear advantage to the public interest or the public revenue."

Another resolution was passed in regard to level crossings, it being the opinion of the meeting that they were dangerous to the traveling public.

The officers elected were: Mayor J. A. Chisholm of Halifax, president (acclamation); Mayor G. R. Geary of Toronto, first vice-president (acclamation); Mayor J. A. F. Bleau of St. Boniface, 2nd vice-president; Mayor D. Milne of Medicine Hat, third vice-president; W. D. Lighthall, K.C., ex-Mayor of Westmount, hon. secretary-treasurer (acclamation).

THOUSANDS HOMELESS IN GOTHAM

New York, Sept. 3.—One thousand and one hundred cases of eviction were on the docket of the second district municipal court yesterday. Idleness, hunger, misery and sickness walk the east side, because of the cloakmakers' strike. It is estimated that 5,000 women and children are homeless because of yesterday's proceedings alone. Thousands of other cases are in preparation.

The magistrate gave all the unfortunates from two days to a week grace, but it was only a makeshift, for they have no money and no expectations of money.

THE BOYS BLEW IN THE MONEY

New York, Sept. 3.—Recorder McGovern, in Hoboken yesterday, held two boys, one ten years old, and the other fourteen, in $200 bail each, on a charge of grand larceny. The prisoners were Henry Bier and Geo. Abram. The theft of which they are accused was committed on Bier's father, Morris Bier, who is proprietor of a bakery. The boys took 6,800 pennies and $18 in other money, and went to Coney Island. They had rid themselves of all their wealth when they were arrested.

Fatal Motor Boat Explosion.

New York, Sept. 3.—Miss Maides Carroll, a 16-year-old girl of Middletown, N.Y., and David Bolton of Hoboken, were drowned and five others nearly lost their lives Thursday afternoon, when a motor boat in which they were cruising on the Hackensack, sunk after the gasoline tank had exploded. The two bodies have not been recovered.

WANTS TO FLY TO THE EXHIBITION

Rochester, N.Y., Sept. 3.—John J. Frisbie of this city announced yesterday, through his manager, Chas. W. Nelson, that if arrangements can be made with Dr. J. O. Orr, general manager of the Toronto Exhibition, that he would fly from Ontario Beach to the fair grounds, either the latter part of this week or the first of next.

Molten Metal Killed Him.

Chicago, Sept. 3.—Thomas Powers was burned to death and several others were seriously injured in the Illinois Steel Co.'s mills in South Chicago early yesterday when a giant ladle of molten metal was overturned. The man was directly beneath the ladle when the hot liquid mass showered down upon him.

WE REPAIR WEAK MEN

ONE SECRET OF OUR SUCCESS. Every case submitted to us receives the personal attention of our Medical Staff, who consider the symptoms, complications and chronicity, and then decide as to the disease and curability. Specific remedies are then prescribed for the case and are compounded by our own chemist in our own Laboratory. Such appropriate treatment cannot fail to cure, as specific medicines are selected to cure the symptoms that trouble you. We have no cure-all medicines like most specialists use who send the same medicines to all patients alike and cure none. We have treated patients throughout Canada for over twenty years and can refer to any bank as to our responsibility.

We Guarantee Cures or No Pay. We Treat all Diseases of Men and Women.

A NEW RELIGION

There's a new religion out. There's a new religion born on an average of about one a month. Grow long hair, look wise, get some foolish women interested, invent some crazy idea, give it some new name, pass the collection plate regularly, and it's as easy to form a new religious body as steal candy from a child.

Charles Frederick Bluska is the newest Saviour of the race. Bluska's religion is "A Heart and a Home." This is very beautiful. He says—

"If you are sick, pray direct to God yourself, and you will get relief, but you must not believe in Christian Science, Unitarianism, Spiritualism, or any other church on earth, but only in the living power of God in Christ to heal you. Every man who votes in a state which hangs, electrocutes and kills people commits a sin, because he takes part in that, which kills his fellowman for which he and his family will suffer."

Will some one please pass the collection plate.

THE CZAR

The Czar and Czarina are on a visit to Germany and are guarded by eight hundred police and four thousand soldiers. It must be pleasant to be nice and popular like that. He's not to blame, it's his ancestors who wore the crown before him. The Siberian mines are hell enough to-day, but they are not half so hellish as they were years ago. The police are brutal now, but not half so brutal as they once were. The cable, the fearless correspondent, the great papers with national influence in other civilized companies, the photographer, the mute, and often horrible story of the camera, these have revealed Russia, and Russia, exposed, has tamed. But in Canada, the most unlikely spot is heaven in freedom compared to Russia's most inviting place. We live in Canada, in Russia the masses exist. Guarded by eight hundred police and four thousand soldiers, the Czar visits—King George needs no special guard, but then, he is no Russian.

The pioneer minister is a hero. His is the hard bed, the long ride, the winds and the rain, the poorly lighted church. He is listened to, he is appreciated. He is an apostle indeed. and so is the country doctor. Yes, they go hand in hand. The doctor in the city drives over good roads. He has an automobile or a carriage. The doctor in the country keeps no hired man. He is his own hired man. He washes his own buggy. He harnesses his own horse. He drives not a few blocks over smooth roads, but many miles over roads that are rough, and through blinding storms all hours of the day and night. Has he returned from a long drive? Has he just retired and is he just commencing to forget it all in sleep. There is a noise at the front door.

"The missus is sick." So lighting the lantern he hitches up or jumps into the waiting vehicle and away he goes. Yes, the doctor everywhere is a philanthropist. Much of his work is done for love of humanity, and not for reward. In Listowel there is a new made grave, and the words on the stone are, "Sacred to the memory of Dr. J E. Sawdon." Sawdon contracted small pox while treating lumbermen in the camps along the North Shore. He died and was buried the same day. A hero? Yes a hero, and one more worthy of respect than the man who aided in capturing a redoubt in the country of the enemy and was shot. The doctor died trying to save a life. The other man died trying to blot one out.

MEDIUMS

Boston, Sept. 2nd.—The leading psychists of America gathered in Boston and at Lake Pleasant, Mass., the stamping grounds of the spiritists, are eagerly watching for a spirit message from the late Prof. William James, of Harvard, their departed leader. Learned men are holding meetings here with leading mediums with whom Prof. James worked during his lifetime, and at Lake Pleasant constant vigil is being kept day and night by the late stayers at the annual encampment. Mrs. Minnie M. Soule, of Boston, a medium with whom Prof. James had remarkable results, is expected to be a favored recipient from the land of spirits when Prof. James sends word to his co-workers.

Mrs. Soule declared she has no doubt that the late professor will try to talk with his friends on earth.

It is learned that Professor James promised to speak to his friends after death, if such a thing were possible.

We cannot scoff at spiritualism when men like Prof. William James were believers, and Lombroso and Lodge, and Flammarion as well. Much is fake, but behind it all there are many truths and mysteries

There is much spiritualism in the Bible. That Witch of Endor was a first-class spiritualist, and had she been living to-day would no doubt have had her picture in the paper an made much money as a medium. Joseph was a clarivoyant, so were Paul and John. Many of us ridicule spiritualism because we have never investigated it or if we did, we came in contact with a fakir. Not long ago, not more than a million miles from Peterborough, a woman lost her watch. Her friend, who is a clarivoyant, told her where she could find the watch. She went and she has the watch.

THE GLORIOUS LAND OF THE FREE

New York, Sept. 1.—"Lazarus had the right to eat the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table. I can't see why the rich should object to our eating our own crumbs at his gate. Here we are, all of us weary, looking for work that will buy us those crumbs."

Three hundred bedraggled men and women, their faces pinched and drawn, showing by their every movement the strain under which they have been laboring for the last three weeks, tried to parade up fashionable Fifth avenue early to-day. When ordered to disperse by the police, one of their leaders made the above reply. They were striking coat and shirt makers, and their parade was intended as a protest to fashionable New Yorkers against their treatment at the hands of their former employers.

They did not get far. Members of the aristocratic Knickerbocker Club, and of the mansions along Fifth avenue, south of Thirty-second street, hurriedly telephoned to the police that they were "being disturbed" by the parade.

These people were arrested, and some of them sentenced to jail because they didn't have the three dollars to pay the fine.

They were victims of the sweat shop, working sixteen and eighteen hours a day for a pittance. Yes, a pittance, when the price of even canned meat is considered; a pittance when the price of cold storage eggs and ancient butter, to say nothing of oleomargarine, is looked at. A pittance for living in an unsanitary room at high rent. Just a pittance. Why strike? How could they do otherwise? And because they wanted the millionaires to see just how thin, how gaunt, how wretched they were, they were arrested. Arrested in Christian America, where, in 1776 their forefathers fought for liberty of rule. Yes, liberty, and now the descendants fight, not powder and shot and shell, not for liberty of rule, but for life. But million-dollar palaces are going up in the land of the free with great regularity. Women still have maids for their dogs and cats, loving the dog, loving the cat even better than their starving neighbor. Palaces for the rich in this glorious land of the free; hells for the sweat shop workers and the dwellers in the tenements. One rich New Yorker has seventeen automobiles. But what odds if a few do suicide from want, or if ten or fifteen thousand little children die from neglect in New York every year? 'Tis the land of the free, can't they do as they like with our money.

"James, order the automobile." "Here, butler, open another bottle of champagne."

COAL LANDS FACTS COME TO LIGHT

Interesting facts have been divulged in a newspaper quarrel. The Toronto News has been steadily driving in the fact that Sir Wilfrid Laurier in pretending to be a free trader is guilty of gross insincerity and hypocrisy; that as a matter of fact he and his party, since getting into office, have steadily practiced protected protection, and have "stood pat." This line of attack has proved intensely disagreeable to the Globe, which incessantly preaches free trade and pretends that the Canadian Liberals are a free trade party, while steadily supporting a protectionist and "stand pat" government. Stung by the exposure, the Globe has begun making personal attacks on J. S. Willison, editor of the News, and formerly editor of the Globe. In one of these attacks the Globe declared that Mr. Willison sat on a Tory platform and gave silent consent to Roblin's ruffian slandering of his successor on the Globe for what he himself, as he grudgingly was compelled to confess, was alone and wholly responsible." The reference is to Mr. Roblin's charge that the owners of the Globe speculated improperly in coal lands along the line of the Crow's Nest Pass.

Thus attacked, Mr. Willison revealed some facts concerning the Crow's Nest Pass affair. "It was true," says the News, "that the editor of the News, who was formerly the editor of the Globe, advocated the construction of a railway into the Crow's Nest country. But he certainly did not advice the Globe's owners to buy coal lands along its route. Much less did he advocate a grant of three and a half millions of dollars to the Canadian Pacific Railway to give rail connection with their holdings."

Further on the News says, "When the globe's owners bought the coal lands they did not communicate the fact to the editor of the paper until later, when he had learned of the transaction from outside sources. He had no knowledge of their purchase of the British Columbia Southern Railway charter or of its sale to the Canadian Pacific Railway Company until certain charges were made by other newspapers. When the facts were disclosed the writer, recognizing that British Columbia had been guilty of an improvident alienation of public property, insisted that part of the coal lands should be handed over to the public, that the price of coal at the mine should be fixed by Act of Parliament, and that in consideration of the subsidy arranged to be granted to the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, freight rates should be reduced. He insisted, also, but unsuccessfully, that the clause in the Canadian Pacific charter, which exempts its rates from public regulation until the earnings reach ten per cent. on the capital invested should be abrogated."

1. Mr. Willison, of the Globe, from motives of public policy, advocated the building of a railway through the Crow's Nest Pass.

2. The owners of the Globe secretly acquired coal lands along the route. They concealed this transaction from Mr. Willison.

3. When Mr. Willison learned, after public criticism of the deal had commenced, of the move made by the owners of the newspaper, he did his best to have the bargain improved in the public interest.

4. Now the owners of the Globe charge the editor whom they deceived with being responsible for acts which they had concealed from him, by which they profited, and which have been condemned by the Canadian people.

The Globe shows in a singularly mean light in the affair.

The Round-Up

A Romance of Arizona

Novelized From Edmund Day's Melodrama

By JOHN MURRAY and MILLS MILLER

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

Taking the useless bowlders from the edge of the cliff, but carefully, so as not to expose himself to the fire of the Apaches, he piled them on top of the upper wall in such a fashion as to form little turrets. He left an opening in each, through which he could observe in turn each point of the compass whence danger might be expected and could fire his Winchester without exposing himself. Then he began going from post to post on a continuous round of self imposed sentinel duty. "If I could only climb the sahuaro," he thought, "and fly my red shirt as a flag to let the rurales know I've flanked the enemy, it might hurry them along in time to put a crimp in these devils before they get me. But it'll have to be 'hold the fort' without any 'Oh, say can you see!' business. Anyhow, I'm flying the rattlesnake flag of Bunker Hill, 'Don't tread on me!' Whether the rurales see it or not, I've saved their hides. If the Apaches had got to this fort first, gee, how they would have crumpled up the greasers as they came along the trail!"

Rendered thirsty by his exertions, Lane remembered the canteen in the bisnaga, which he had forgotten among his other preparations for defense. He cautiously reached his hand over the ledge and secured the precious vessel, but as he was withdrawing it, ping, came a bullet through the canteen, knocking it out of his hand! As it fell clattering down the side of the ledge he groaned: "Good shooting! They've probably left their best marksman below with the ponies. No hope for escape on that side. Well, there's some consolation in the thought that they'll undoubtedly finish me before I get too thirsty. Glad it wasn't my hand."

Although the period he spent waiting for the attack was less than an hour by his watch, it seemed to Lane so long that he had hopes that the rurales would appear in time to rescue him. His spirits rose with the prospect. Looking about him at the walls, the fireplace and the red cross, he reflected, "I am not the first man, or even the first white man, that has withstood an attack in this place." In imagination he constructed the history of the fort. Here, in ages remote, a tribe of Indians, defeated and driven to the mountains, had constructed an outpost against their enemies of the plain, but these had captured the stronghold and fortified it against its former occupants. Later a band of Spanish gold seekers had made a stand here against natives whom they had roused against them by oppression. Or, perhaps, as indicated by the cross, it had afforded refuge to the mission fathers, those heroic souls who had faced the horrors of the inferno-like desert in their saintly efforts to convert its fiendish inhabitants.

The leader, shot through the head, fell from his horse.

With his mind occupied by apprehensions Lane looked at the rattlesnake upon the sahuaro, whose struggles by this time had diminished to a feeble movement of the tail.

"Poor old rattler!" he thought. "I wish I could spare a cartridge to put you out of your misery."

At length as Lane peered up the mountain side he saw a brush on a ledge a little to the left of the trail quiver as if stirred by a passing breath of wind. He aimed his Winchester through a crack in the wall at the spot, and when a moment later an Apache rose up from the ground and leaped toward the shelter of a rock below Lane fired, and the savage fell crumpling. Like an echo of the explosion a rifle on the right spoke, and a bullet struck the rock by Lane's head. He marked the spot whence the shot came and quickly ran to another part of the wall. From here he saw the edge of an Indian's thigh exposed by the side of the bowlder he had noted. Crack went Lane's Winchester. The leg was suddenly withdrawn, and at the same moment a head appeared on the other side of the rock, as if the Indian had stretched himself out involuntary. Crack again, and Lane had got his man.

"Two shots to an Indian is expensive," thought the prospector; "otherwise this game of tip-jack would be very interesting."

There was a cry in the Apache tongue, and suddenly nine half naked bodies arose from behind rocks and bushes extending in an irregular crescent above the fort and rushed forward ten, fifteen and even twenty yards to the next cover. Lane did not count number or distance at the time, but he figured these out in his next period of waiting from the photograph flashed on his subconscious mind. At the time of the rush he was otherwise occupied. Crack, crack, and two of the Indians fell dead in midcareer. Crack, and a third crawled, wounded, to the cover he had almost safely attained. Crack, and an eagle feather in the head of the fourth Indian shot at was cut off at the stem and fell forward on the rock behind which its wearer had dropped just in time to save his life. There was an answering volley from the rifles of the remaining Apaches, which was directed against the lookout of loose stones from which the prospector's fire had come. One of the bullets penetrated the opening and plowed a furrow through Lane's scalp, toppling him to his knees. He scrambled quickly to his feet and, hastily pressing his long hair back from his forehead to stanch the bleeding wound, sought the protection of the middle lookout. He congratulated himself.

"Lucky for me they didn't follow the first rush immediately with a second. Now I know to wait for their signal. Six and possibly seven of them are left, and they will storm my works in two more attempts. Here they come!"

The call again sounded. Six Apaches leaped forward, and from the rock that concealed the wounded warrior a shot rang out in advance of the first discharge from Lane's Winchester. The Indian's bullet scored the top of the turret and filled the eyes of the man behind it with powdered stone. The prospector, already dazed by his wound, fired wildly and missed his mark. Quickly recovering himself, he fired again and again, severely wounding two Apaches. These lay clawing the ground within twenty yards of the wall. The four remaining Indians were safely concealed at the same distance, protected no less by the fortification than by the loose bowlders behind which they crouched for the final spring. Lane realized the fact that his next shots to be effective must be at a downward angle and to fire them he must expose himself.

"This is my finish," he thought to himself. "Better be killed instantly than tortured. I hope all four will hit me. Goodby, Jinny"—crack went his rifle. "Goodby, Nance"—crack again.

At the two shots, surmising that the prospector had shot himself and his horse, the Apaches did not wait for the signal, but sprang forward and climbed upon the wall before Lane had had time to mount it. Two of them he shot as they leaped down within the inclosure. As he reversed his Winchester to kill himself with the last cartridge he noted that the two remaining Apaches had dropped their rifles and were leaping upon him to take him alive. He brought his clubbed weapon down upon the head of one of them, crushing his skull. At the same instant Lane was borne to the ground by the other Apache, who, seizing him by the throat, began throttling him into insensibility. In desperation Lane bethought himself of the cliff and by a mighty effort whirled over upon his captor toward the precipice. The ground sloped slightly in that direction, and the combatants rolled over and over to the very edge of the cliff, where the Indian, for the first time realizing that the prospector's purpose was to hurl both of them to destruction, loosened his hold upon the prospector's throat that he might use his hands to brace himself against the otherwise inevitable plunge into the valley below. In an instant Lane's hands were at the Indian's throat, and in another turn he was uppermost and kneeling upon his foe at the very verge of the precipice.

Both combatants were now thoroughly exhausted. Lane concentrated all his remaining strength in throttling the savage. But just as the tense form beneath him grew lax with evident unconsciousness and the head fell limply back, extending over the edge of the cliff, his own head was jerked violently backward by a noose cast around his lacerated neck.

When Lane recovered consciousness he found himself lying on his back, bound hand and foot by a lariat and looking up into a grinning face that he recognized.

"Buck McKee!" he gasped. "This is certainly white of you considering the circumstances of our last meeting. Did you come with the rurales?"

"No; I come ahead uv 'em! In fact, Dick Lane, you air jes' a leetle bit off in yer idees about which party I belong to. When you cussed me fer a thievin' half breed an' run me off the range an' tole me to go to the Injuns, whar I belonged, I tuk yer advice. I'm what you might call the rear guard uv the outfit you've jes' been havin' yer shootin' match with—or I wuz the rear guard, fer you've wiped out the whole battalion, so fer as I can see. Served 'em right fer detailin' me, the only decent shooter in the bunch, to watch the horses. I got one shot in as it wuz. Well, as the last uv the outfit I own a string of ten ponies. All I need now to set up in business is to have some prospector who hain't long to live leave me his leetle pile uv dust an' nuggets an' the claims he's located back in the mountains. You look a leetle mite like the man. It'll save vallible time if you make yer dear friend Buck McKee administrator uv yer estate without too much persuadin'. You had some objection oncet to my slittin' a calf's tongue. Well, you needn't be scared jes' yet. That's the last thing I'll do to you. Come, whar's yer cache? I know you've got one hereabouts, fer I foun' signs uv the dust in yer pack."

Lane set his teeth in a firm resolution not to say a word. The taunts of his captor were harder to bear in silence than the prospects of torture.

"Stubborn, hey? Well, we'll try a little 'Pache persuadin'." And the renegade dragged his helpless captive up to the thorny sahuaro and bound his back against it with the dead horse's bridle. McKee searched through Lane's pockets until he found a match.

"Last one, hey? Kinder 'propriate. Las' drink from the old canteen, las' ca'tridge, las' look at the scenery an' las' will an' testyment. Oh, time's precious, but I'll spare you enough to map out in yer mind jes' where them claims is located. The rurales won't be along fer an hour yet if they hain't turned back after our other party."

McKee pulled off Lane's boots. "It hain't decent fer a man to die with 'em on," he said. He then kindled a fire on the stone, beneath which, if he but knew it, lay the treasure he sought. He returned with a burning brand to the captive. For the first time he observed the snake impaled on the sahuaro, writhing still, but feebly. "Hello, ole rattler!" he exclaimed. "Here's somethin' to stir you up." And he tossed the brand upon the top of the cactus.

Taking another burning stick from the fire, he applied it to the soles of his victim's feet. Lane writhed and groaned under the excruciating torture, but uttered no word or cry. McKee brought other brands and began piling them about his captive's feet.

In the meantime the sahuaro had caught fire at the top and was burning down through the interior. A thin column of smoke rose straight above it in the still air. The rurales in the valley below, who had reached the beginning of the ascending trail and were on the point of giving up the pursuit, saw the smoke and inferred that the Apaches, either through overconfidence or because of their superstitious fear of the mountains, which they supposed inhabited by spirits, had camped on the edge of the valley and were signaling to their other party. Accordingly the Mexicans renewed the chase with increased vigor.

As McKee bent over his captive's feet, piling against them the burning ends of the sticks, the rattlesnake on the sahuaro, incited by the fire above, struggled free from the impaling thorns by a desperate effort and dropped on the back of the half breed. It struck its fangs into his neck. McKee, springing up with an energy that scattered the sticks he was piling, tore the reptile loose, hurled it upon the ground and stamped it into the earth. Then he picked up one of the brands and with it cauterized the wound. All the while he was cursing volubly—the snake, himself and even Dick Lane, who was now lying in a dead faint caused by the torture.

"Curse such a prospector! Not a drop of whisky in his outfit! I'd slit his tongue fer him if he wasn't already done fer. I must keep movin', movin', or I'm a dead man. I must hustle along to the mountains, leadin' my horse. Up there I'll find yarbs to cure snake bite that my Cherokee grandmother showed me. The rurales will have to get the other ponies, but some day I'll come back after Lane's cache."

HOW ONE WOMAN REGAINED HEALTH

Utterly Helpless and Friends Did Not Expect Her to Get Better

The great fame of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is due to the fact that they have restored to active health and strength hundreds of people when all other treatment had failed to cure, and who had come to believe themselves hopeless, chronic invalids. The case of Mrs. Henry Britton, 1284 Alexander avenue, Winnipeg, Man., adds another striking proof to the truth of this assertion. Mr. Britton writes as follows concerning his wife's long illness and ultimate cure through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. "It is a simple thing to recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and yet it is difficult to express fully one's heartfelt gratitude for such a marvellous remedy, as they have restored my wife to health and strength after the best efforts of the medical fraternity had failed. For years prior to our coming to Canada, and since that time up to about three years ago, my wife had been subject to severe illnesses from what the doctors said was chronic anaemia. She was utterly and entirely helpless, and so weak that she had to be lifted in and out of bed for weeks at a stretch. The trouble was aggravated by recurrent rheumatism and heart trouble. She had no appetite or strength for anything. I employed the best medical attendance and nurses procurable. The doctor gave her tonics and ordered beef tea and wine. The tonics and medicine would relieve her for a time, and then she would slip back once more into the old state—but worse if anything. Then we began giving her advertised remedies, but all seemed of no avail. One evening while reading a newspaper I happened to see an advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. It told the case of a young woman who had been a great sufferer from anaemia, and who testified to having been cured through the use of these Pills. The case seemed to describe very closely the symptoms of my wife, and although I had pretty nearly lost all hope of her ever being well again, I decided to get a supply of the Pills and urged her to use them. My wife was thoroughly disheartened, and said she expected it was only another case of money thrown away. However, she began taking the Pills, and I thank God she did, for after she had used them for a time, she felt they were helping her. From that time on her appetite came back, her color began to return, and she who had been looked upon as a helpless invalid began to take a new interest in life. She continued taking the Pills, and through them her health continued to improve, until at last we were able to heartily congratulate her upon her complete restoration to health. Some three years have since passed, and in that time she has never been bothered in the slightest degree with the old trouble. Her cure has astonished everyone who knew how ill she had been, and we acknowledge with heartfelt thanks our gratitude to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills which literally brought her back to health from the brink of the grave."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure such cases as this in just one way—they actually make new blood, which fills the depleted veins and brings new strength to every nerve and every organ in the body. Nearly all the everyday ailments of life comes from poor or watery blood, and it is because Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new blood that they cure anaemia, indigestion, headaches, sideaches and backaches, rheumatism, neuralgia, general weakness and the ailments that growing girls and women do not like to talk about, even to their doctors. If you are weak, sick or ailing, no other medicine will cure you so quickly as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THIRD OPERATION PREVENTED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chicago, Ill. — "I want to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I was so sick that two of the best doctors in Chicago said I would die if I did not have an operation. I had already had two operations, and they wanted me to go through a third one. I suffered day and night from inflammation and a small tumor, and never thought of seeing a well day again. A friend told me how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped her, and I tried it, and after the third bottle was cured."—Mrs. Alvena Sperling, 11 Langdon Street, Chicago, Ill.

If you are ill do not drag along at home or in your place of employment until an operation is necessary, but build up the feminine system, and remove the cause of those distressing aches and pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

MORE MONEY NEEDED
(DEFICITS OF $2,509,54)
FOR SMITH ST. BRIDGE

The Board of Works is in a quandry. There is a deficit of $2,509.54 over the appropriation for the new Smith street bridge, now awaiting the finishing touches.

The Board did not relish the information when the chairman, Ald. Hicks, announced their position at the meeting last night.

At the same time, however, there is not a dissenting voice, when the character of the work, as carried out by the contractors, is described as being well done.

"The trouble is," said Ald. Hicks, "we have been making the mistake of figuring too close on our estimates."

Mayor Morrow felt that the Board should have been acquainted with the fact of the work costing more money just as soon as it was found out by the city engineer. Had there been a bungle made in the figures.

The engineer explained extra work was done to secure the best possible bottom, and that preliminary expenses in the matter of debentures, advertising, printing, etc., had cropped up unforseen.

He had gone over his figures and found them to be all right.

BOARD OF WORKS WAS BUSY TILL MIDNIGHT

Estimate and Report on Septic Tank, at Corner of Dublin and Waterford Street to be Made—Sewer Works Inspector Wants More Money—Other Business

The Board of Works went a little beyond the limit at their meeting last night. It was just twelve o'clock, and then their work was not all finished, hence another meeting to-day at twelve o'clock, to decide whose tender will be accepted for the pumping station and sewage system in the south end of the city.

THAT LINE AGAIN.

Mr. Sid Crowe, East City, asked that the pavements to be laid on east side of Douro and Rogers streets, be constructed outside the tree line.

The City Engineer thought the inside line preferable. He was asked to make a report, before pavement work is undertaken in that section.

THE SEPTIC TANK.

Mr. J. C. Shook and Mr. Dickson Davidson, representing the Dickson Co. On motion Mr. Shook was heard. He asked regarding the septic tank, for an outlet sewer at the corner of Waterford and Dublin streets.

Mr. Shook's proposition was to give the city three lots, with the exception of 18 feet, if the city put in the septic tank. The location of this property is north of Dublin and west of Waterford streets.

In the event of the proposition maturing, a small park will be laid out by the city.

Mr. Shook had an estimate from the Cameron Septic Tank Co., of $1,200 for the installing of the tank required.

Ald. Duncan thought it a good opportunity to provide a small park for the city. There was also splendid facilities for bathing. While it was a question whether or not the city could afford another park, another view of the matter was should the opportunity be allowed to slip away.

Chairman Hicks thought the cost would be from $1,100 to $1,400.

Mayor Morrow wanted something definite in the estimated cost.

The motion of Ald. Duncan and Hicks to the effect that the offer of the Dickson Company be accepted and that the tank be installed, providing the cost did not exceed $1,200, and also that the Engineer's report, be in accordance with this amount, was carried. Plans will be sent the Provincial Board of Health for approval.

Repairs were asked for on Charles and Birdsall streets. The Street Commissioner will look after the matter.

An application for financial assistance on behalf of Mrs. P. Warner was read. The lady fell on the sidewalk and was rather severely injured. She is not making any claim against the city and at the present time is in poor health. Referred to Legal Committee.

Mr. Brumwell, Water street north, wants a tile drain extended 150 feet. He also requests a water table and the road graded. The matter was sent to the City Trust Commissioners.

A sewer wanted on Bethune street between King and Sherbrooke streets will be granted, on a petition being properly signed.

OIL RUBIDGE STREET.

E. B. Fowler, Rubidge street, and twenty-five others asked that the street be oiled no more.

The Board failed to favor the request and the order will be "Oil Rubidge street."

A sidewalk is desired on Engleburn and Dale avenue.

A five foot reserve will be conveyed to the city, and the Engineer thinks the sidewalk could be laid on this reserve. Providing a properly signed petition is forthcoming, and the Engineer's report is favorable, the walk will be laid.

INDEFINITE.

Mr. F. Bartlet, inspector of sewers, asked for a wage of $4 per day instead of $3, as is the case now. He claimed to be saving the city considerable money by doing extra work, and that the sewers were being constructed cheaper than before.

The Board decided to wait for figures, after the work is completed, and then take action.

Ald. Graham thought the complaint from Robinson street, regarding the water which accumulates thereon should be attended to. It will.

A sidewalk on Hunter street north, between Concession and Rogers streets which is asked for will be granted.

Martin Neary, asked for the appointment of a sewer inspector. No action was taken.

Conroy's offered $150 for a second-hand portable engine, the property of the city. It was accepted.

The matter of oiling George street north of the C.P.R. station was left in the hands of the Street Commissioner.

ANOTHER STORY OF AN ALLEGED WATCH THEFT

Witnesses Identify Prisoner in Court as the Companion o John Kelly—Warrant Issued for Witness Who Failed to Appear in Court — Case Adjourned.

Considerable of the particulars of another charge of watch stealing were told at the police court this morning, but the case was adjourned to Tuesday, when one witness for the prosecution failed to respond to his name.

A warrant for his arrest was issued.

Joseph Reynolds is the young man charged with the theft of the watch from John Kelly, who came to the city on or about August 17. The night of the day following, when, according to his own statement, he was in an intoxicated condition, the watch was taken from his pocket as he lay asleep in the loft of a stable.

The missing article has not been recovered.

Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the prisoner, and declined to elect or plead.

KELLY'S STORY.

Kelly, who lives in Hastings county, could not identify the prisoner as the man with him on the night of Thursday, August 8th. He had left the Montgomery House with a young man and was taken to a stable, the location of which he could not give. He had been drinking. He went up into the loft, and on awakening the following morning the young man and the watch were missing.

PRISONER THE MAN.

James Ward, a bartender at the Montgomery House, said prisoner was with Kelly at the hotel between eleven and twelve o'clock. He could not say that Kelly was intoxicated. The hotel had been closed for the night and the two had their conversation with him at the door. Accommodation for Kelly was refused and his companion said that he would take him away to another place. He couldn't say which direction the men walked.

CORROBORATION.

Mr. Montgomery said the man with Kelly at the door of the hotel was the prisoner in court. On leaving they took an easterly direction.

James Kimble, another bartender at the hotel, also stated that the young man with Kelly at the door was the prisoner.

OFFICER'S EVIDENCE

P. C. Newhall testified that Reynolds, after being arrested, asked what he was being arrested for. He was not told then, but was informed at the station. Prisoner said he never had a watch. When asked what he had done with that watch he was showing on the English church grounds, he answered that he had lost it. The fob, he said, was down at the house. Some time after prisoner said "I never had a watch since last winter when I lost my little black gun metal one."

Questioned as to where he got the fob, he replied that his girl gave it to him, and that he was not going to answer any more questions, claiming he had told all about the umbrella and didn't have to answer any questions about the watch.

He then jumped out toward the gate leading from the station office, but was caught by the neck and placed in the cells.

Another witness stated that Reynolds had shown him the watch. He asked Reynolds where he got it and was answered that "it was one he had." A fob was attached to it, and witness had seen it before. He did not remember the date of their meeting.

VOTING FOR THE OPERAS

A novel method for deciding their repertoire in various cities has been tried by the Aborn English Grand Opera Company, which is to come to the Grand Opera House for an engagement of one night only, Wednesday, September 28th.

Several hundred postal cards with return attachments are mailed to the theatregoers of each city in which the Aborn singers are to appear, requesting a vote for first, second and third choice of operas, and giving a list of twelve works to select from. The recipient is asked to mark the operas he or she likes best and to return the card to the Aborn executive offices in New York. This plan has been found most effective, and on the average over three-quarters of the cards sent out are returned, showing that there is a keen interest in grand opera in English all over the country. It is several years since an organization of this kind has been on tour and that the Aborn English Grand Opera Company is filling a long-felt want is evidenced in the large audiences they are attracting everywhere. As soon as a sufficient number of the votes from this city are in, the selection of operas will be announced, probably in a week or ten days.

Don't forget the Sacred Heart T.A.S. excursion to Stoney Lake on Labor Day. Tickets are limited. Procure them early if you don't want to be disappointed as they are selling fast. For sale at H. A Boy's Needs Grow Just as the Boy Grows — We Fill This Need

It is said that the boy from infancy to maturity represents in his development the various stages of the civilization of the human race. However that may be, the stage that is making mothers think just now is his capacity to wear out his clothes.

In close connection with this a little talk on yarn may be much to the point. Did you ever consider the varying strengths of the different yarns. This can easily be tested. Try it to-night after tea. Take a yard of stocking yarn, make a loop at both ends, put your finger through the loop at one end, fasten the other end to a weight, do not jerk the thread, lift it gently until it gradually lifts the weight from the floor.

By this test you will find that 2 lb. will break a poor home made yarn; a good home made yarn will lift 5 lb. and a Scotch fingering yarn will lift 11 lbs., thus showing the latter to be twice as strong as the best home made yarn.

The reason for this is, the Scotch fingering yarn is combed and the home made yarn is carded; when yarn is carded they put in all the wool that is on the fleece, but the combing machines can only use the long fibres, the short fibres fall through the combing machines to the floor, they call these short fibres "noils," and they are usually sent over to the carding machines, thus weakening still more the carded yarn. We have boys' stockings made from this strong Scotch fingering yarn in all sizes for 25c per pair.

Double Thread Worsted Stockings at 40c and 50c.

NOT DUPLICATED IN OUR CITY

"Ole Olson," the quaint and natural comedy drama in which the Swedish dialect character was first made use of for stage purposes, will be played at the Grand Opera House, Saturday next, Sept. 10th, matinee and night. This play has taken its place as a fun maker by the side of the German, Irish and Yankee dialect plays, and "Ole Olson" is equally as interesting and pleasing as any of this style of dramatic work. The story of the course centres around "Ole," and the cool and unruffled manner in which he baffles the schemes of the villian never fail to get rounds of applause, dealing as it does with the tribulations of a young widow and the efforts of a faithful young Swedish man whom she has befriended, to lighten her bruden, is told with the natural simplicity that is heart appealing. The development of the Swedish immigrant from the uncouth and awkward to the Swedish-American citizen of the last act, is carried along on lines of mingled comedy and pathos that have "The simple annals of the poor" ever in mind.

A SAD SIGHT WILL BE SEEN IN THE CITY ON LABOR DAY, WHEN TWO HEARSES WILL GO TO THE CITY OF THE DEAD LEAVING THE SAME HOME

A double funeral will pass through the streets of Peterborough on Mondat afternoon at three o'clock, when the remains of the two victims of the saddest drowning fatality that has occurred in Peterborough for many years, will be laid to rest in Little Lake cemetery.

A service will be conducted at the residence of the family, 588 Sherbrooke street, at 2.30 by the Rev. H. J. Keith, of Knox church, of which the late Mrs. Laing and her daughter were regular attendants.

Further particulars of the tragedy have been obtained since yesterday's report, the facts of which lead to the supposition that Mrs. Laing's death was due to the shock and not to drowning. Mr. Laing was able to grasp his wife, and in climbing into the skiff he lost his grip on her, and, although her body was recovered within a few minutes, life had fled.

Everett Laing was able to save one of his sisters, but the body of Hazel, the seven year old child had gone down. The body was not recovered until about the middle of the afternoon, and was brought to the city from the street car wharf by Belleghem's understaking wagon and taken to the home about ten o'clock last night.

The body was recovered by some people who were campting in the neighborhood, assisted by people from the city, including Mr. Wallace Armstrong, and one of the brothers of the little girl. The latter two were in a canoe assisting in the search, and were the first to discover the body, as far as can be ascertained. The crew of the "Otonabee" also assisted in the search.

MACHINE PHONE CO. ASK FOR 21 YEARS' FRANCHISE

City Users Would be Connected With County Within a Radius of Ten Miles Without Extra Charge—City Solicitor to Prepare Agreement

The committee of the whole Council was waited upon last evening by Mr. F. D. McKay, of Brantford, manager of the Canadian Machine Telephone Company regarding a franchise agreement between the city and the company. Mr. McKay asked for a 21 year franchise and an agreement to be determined in connection with the rates. The present franchise was for ten years, and will end in another three years and a half.

The company is anxious to improve their system here. They are prepared to spend considerable money and will begin operations just as soon as an agreement is reached. Mr. McKay went over the ground as well as time would permit, and in doing this gave facts in connection with the systems at Brantford and Lindsay, particularly the former place, to show the aggressive manner in which the company was working. In the city of Brantford nearly nine hundred 'phones were in use, and usere were connected with outlying points in the county of Brant, without extra charge. This latter condition would be arranged in an agreement with Peterborough.

When asked the limit of the distance in the county, Mr. McKay answered that the company would be agreeable to ten miles. He wouldn't care to go any further than that, but pointed out that every opportunity tending toward the progress of the company would be taken advantage of.

Several of the aldermen discussed various matters with Mr. McKay, and it was moved by Ald. Turner and Hicks that the solicitor prepare an agreement between the city and the company providing for a 21 year franchise, providing they guarantee to spend $10,000 and give free connections within a radius of ten miles.

Y.M.C.A. BANQUET SEPTEMBER 20

With just a little over two weeks in which to prepare for the big membership campaign the members of the Y.M.C.A. are quite enthusiastic. There is a determination on the part of those who are leading in this movement to do what they have set out to do. Lists are being prepared of all the young men and boys in the city and every one of these will be given an opportunity to become a member of the Y.M.C.A. during the ten days following September 20th. There will be a membership banquet on the evening of the 20th and there will be addresses of an inspirational nature to give the men a good start off.

A meeting of the leaders was held last evening in the parlors of the association and the general plan of the campaign was outlined and the men agreed that there is no chance of failure.

The Peterborough Y.M.C.A. was never in better shape to take care of a large body of new members than it is at the present time. A visit to the building and a talk to one of the officers will convince the most sceptical of the truth of that statement.

POPULAR YOUNG MEN HONORED BY THE BOYS

The employees of the test department of the Canadian General Electric Company gathered at the Oriental hotel last evening to do honor to Messrs. Charles Ray and Bert Miller, and to welcome the new foreman of the department, Mr. G. B. Wilson. Messrs. Ray and Miller have completed their course in the department, and are about to take up further studies elsewhere.

The gathering numbered forty, and a most enjoyable evening was spent by all.

Following a choice repast the following toast list was carried out.—

"Our Guests," proposed by J. Lowes, responded to by Messrs. G. B. Wilson, Bertram Miller and Chas. Ray.

"C.G.E.," proposed by Mr. Thornton, responded to by Jack Caster.

"Test," proposed by H. B. Whyte, responded to by H. Gooding.

"The Ladies," proposed by Mr. D. Jackson, responded to by Mr. Wm. Landry.

"Next Merry Meeting," proposed by Allan McLean, responded to by W. J. McKnight.

A recitation on "The Habitant" was given by Mr. H. Desautel in a pleasing manner.

The affair closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Some people eat with their palates—and others with their brains. To which class do you belong? Those who eat with their palates eat only the food that tastes good, no matter whether it nourishes the body or not. Those who eat with their brains eat food which supplies the greatest amount of body-building material in the most digestible form.

Don't Judge the Lager You Drink by the Price You Pay For It.

The price has nothing to do with the quality. Imported lagers cost more than O'Keefe's "Pilsener" because of the high duty—NOT because they are better, or even as good.

O'KEEFE'S "Pilsener" Lager

The Light Beer in The Light Bottle

is brewed only of finest barley malt, hops and water—no rice, glucose or other ingredients—which cannot be said of any American lager.

O'Keefe's "Pilsener" is a pure, old, wholesome, healthful lager—brewed right here at home according to the Government standard—and is superior to any imported lager, no matter what the price.

DECIDING THE VALUE

The general utility of any make of Automobile Tires is not decided by the appearance of a sample tire after it has gone one or two thousand miles—the average cost per mile per tire is arrrived at by running a car on a particular set of tires, and then making the comparisons of the cost of the tire up keep. Dunlop Tires give a low average cost per mile, for besides the quality that goes with them the Dunlop Company is ever anxious to thoroughly satisfy the users of Dunlop Automobile Tires.

LATE TIPS

Two more entries from Ottawa were received for the Penman Meet, which now makes 153 entries.

Everything is in good shape and with fine weather a grand meet is assured.

Seats can be reserved till ten o'clock to-night at Y.M.C.A. or Madill's drug store.

The officials are requested to report at Y.M.C.A. Monday at 1 p.m.

THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR TIRES

There is no red tape about the Dunlop Company it makes itself directly responsible for all Dunlop Automobie Tires, and invites direct communication with its customers on the score of tire satisfaction. That is one of the reasons why Dunlop Automobile Tires give a low average cost per mile. The other reason is quality.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE

Grain Must Not be Taken From G.T.R. Cars on Siding at Auburn

Although Arthur Jones an Englishman, who lives in Auburn, maintained that he had not done any intentional wrong, in taking a quantity of grain from cars on the Grand Trunk Railway siding, on August 13th, Magistrate Dumble registered a conviction at the police court this morning, but allowed Jones to go on suspended sentence.

G. T.R. Detective Scott stated that from three to four bushels of grain had been taken from nine cars. He knew that the accused had been warned not to take the wheat.

Jones claimed that it was only the "sweepings" he had taken and the grain and dirt would measure a bushel.

His Worship held that the taking of the grain was nothing short of stealing. Others might well take the tip.

To the Editor of the Review.

DOCTORS AND DISEASES.

"For many years writers have found cheap and easy amusement in dealing with the contradictions of doctors. One school of medical men advocates what another taboos, and one generation pours scorn on the darling methods of the last. We can safely reckon that if anything becomes really popular one or other of the leading medical journals will solemnly warn us of its dangers.

MR. DOWNEY'S APPOINTMENT.

I have no criticism to make of Mr. Downey's administrative ability, but I contend that the care and treatment of diseased minds is not merely an administrative problem, and that something more than executive ability is required.

Is this just? Is it economy? Is it humanity? Are the asylums maintained for patients or politicians?

Henry W. Miller,
Superintendent,
Maine Insane Hospital, Augusta, Me., Aug. 30.

Ah! Ah! Whew! Dr. Miller ought to know, but I would ask if there is not more trouble in all the asylums from the attendants than from the patients? And who has all the fun?

PRO BONO PUBLICO.

P.S.—In the Merkt murder case the trouble is, not that he was let out, but that he was ever let in to disturb their peace and economy.

THE FORMULA OF "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Is On The Outside Of Every Box For All The World To See

Every user of "Fruit-a-tives" knows exactly what is being taken. The formula of this famous fruit medicine is printed plainly on the outside of every box. We have stated many times—and now state clearly—that "Fruit-a-tives" is made of the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes, with valuable heart and nerve tonics and antiseptics.

Everyone knows that fruit juice is healthful—but perhaps some do not understand why this is true.

Fruit juice consists of about 91% water, 8% of sweet principle, and 1% of a bitter substance. It is the quantity of bitter principle in fruit that gives the fruit value as a medicine. An eminent physician of Ottawa, after years of experimenting, found a method of increasing the bitter principle in fruit juice, thus increasing the medicinal or curative qualities.

The juices are first extracted from fresh, ripe oranges, apples, figs and prunes. By a secret process, some of the sweet atoms are replaced by the bitter principle. Then tonics and antiseptics are added, and the whole made into tablets, now known far and wide as "Fruit-a-tives."

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world that is made of fruit juices, and is one of the few remedies that have let their composition be known from their introduction to the public.

"Fruit-a-tives" is nature's stimulant for the liver, bowels, kidneys and skin. In cases of obstinate Constipation, Liver Trouble, Indigestion, Backache, Rheumatism, Headaches and Impure Blood, this wonderful fruit medicine cures when everything else fails.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold everywhere at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c., or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited. Ottawa.

AN EXTRAORDINARY LAW SUIT

Comments on the S. S. Lesson for Sept. 4th,—By Evangeline, Matt. 21, 23—46.

Place? The Court of the Temple.

Time? Two days after the procession through the streets of Jerusalem.

Circumstances? A law suit in which

and the plaintiffs as jury.

The charge of the plaintiffs, the Scribes and Pharisees who represented the civil and ecclesiastical courts of the nation, was a breach of the peace—disorderly conduct.

They said "By what authority doest Thou these things? Who gave Thee this authority?" (To come into our temple and turn everything upside down and cause a general disturbance.)

The Defendant answered and said unto them, "I also will ask you one question, which if ye tell me I likewise will tell you by what authority I do these things. The baptism of John whence was it? From heaven or from men?"

There is a lull in the court.

THE COUNSEL FOR THE PLAINTIFFS IS FLOORED

To admit that John received his commission from the Privy Council of heaven meant that the Defendant would then ask before the whole crowd: "Why then do you not believe him? He is my chief witness. While to assert that he did not meant a collision with the people who regarded John as a prophet.

"And they answered Jesus and said, We know not." They simply perjured themselves.

The Defendant then addressed the court pleading his own case in such a way as TO MAKE THE PLAINTIFFS THE LAUGHING STOCK, not only of the court but of all the world ever since.

Observe His method. He relates three incidents luminous with startling and revolutionary meaning, clear as day to His own but not clearly apprehended by His enemies, the second and third of which form our lesson.

The first refers to a land owner who leased a vineyard to certain tenants and who went to suit to collect rent, beat one of his agents, killed another and stoned another. Later on he sent others who were treated in the same way, at length he sent his son, but the tenants said among themselves, "This is the heir, come let us kill him and take his inheritance," and they cast him out of the vineyard and killed him.

Having gained the interest and attention of his hearers He appeals to them as to what should be the action of the owner of the vineyard towards such men.

Without hesitation they give a unanimous verdict, "He will miserably destroy those miserable men and will let out the vineyard to other husbandmen which will render him the fruits in their season," a verdict so soon to be executed in the most appalling siege of the world's history.

Step by Step

HE ARGUES THE CASE

carrying conviction at every point exposing their hypocritical practises in words that tell like strokes of lightening.

They were well acquainted with old Testament imagery. They knew that God's vineyard meant Israel They must have known that God was turning them down and out because of their treatment of the prophets and of His son. They may not have known, however, that the vineyard was soon to be given to the Gentiles because the fruit demanded by the prophets viz., repentance, obedience, righteousness were utterly lacking.

The story was true to fact in every detail even in the prediction on the eve of fulfilment that "they would cast forth out of the vineyard and kill him" or crucify Him outside the gate.

Without the least opposition He held the floor while He went still further and in another familiar figure from the Old Testament pronounced their doom.

"Jesus said unto them did ye never read in the scriptures the Stone which the builders rejected, the same was made head of the corner? Therefore say I unto you the kingdom of heaven shall be taken away from you and shall be given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."

This was the judgment of Him who stepping out of the prison dock into His rightful position as Judge of the Supreme Court constituted the plaintiffs a jury on their own actions and compelled them in spite of themselves.

TO FIND A VERDICT AGAINST THEMSELVES

Has the incident any bearing upon your life?

Some day you will stand at the bar of God to receive your sentence. What shall it be—"Guilty" or "Not Guilty" of rejecting His Son.

Who will plead your case? Could you have a better Counsel than your Chief Witness who will some day be your Judge?

Then put your case into His Hands, never has He failed.

TO GET JUDGMENT IN FAVOR OF A CLIENT

Trust Him absolutely for acquittal and accept the trust committed to you in the vineyard. There is fruit going to waste that no one but you can gather—the fruit of souls saved from ruin "Fruit of the spirit" "fruit unto holiness."

God forbid that you would cry from a heart broken with remorse.

"Must I go and empty handed
Thus my dear Redeemer meet
Not one soul with which to greet
Him
Lay no trophy at His feet."

STORY OF RUBBER, THE WORLD'S GREAT SCANDAL MAKER

Cotton for centuries was the scandal of the world because it spelled human slavery. To-day rubber is the scandal of the world because it makes the consciences of twentieth century men as callous as slave-holding ever did.

The civilized world rose against Belgian rule in the Congo because of the unspeakable outrages committed on the blacks of that country all for — rubber.

A few years ago an American "promoter" with fake rubber plantations in Mexico swindled tens of thousands of school teachers and others out of millions of dollars.

To-day rubber is in high finance and in politics and doing Satan's work marvelously well in both. Rubber was the dirtiest linen in Aldrich's tariff bill, as Bristok showed, and the Rhode Island senator failed even in a two-column statement to wash out the stains.

What is rubber?

Rubber is obtained from the milky juice of the rubber tree. It is not the true sap, but a secretion which is not essential to the life of the plant. Cuts of such a depth that the wood is untouched are made in the bark and through these wounds the "milk" flows into cups placed to receive it.

The natives coagulate this "milk" in various ways, sometimes by heating it over an open fire and occasionally by rubbing it over their arms, chests and legs. A wooden paddle-bladed tool is diped in the pan of liquid and when drawn out it is covered with a sticky substance. This is held in the smoke until the rubber is dry. This process is continued until the blade forms the centre of a ball of considerable size.

The annual yield of one tree is from two to seventeen pounds. The trees are usually tapped at sunrise, when the "milk" is supposed to run more freely. The first incisions are made about six feet from the ground and each succeeding day incisions are made lower down until the ground is reached.

The product of the rubber tree is gathered in India, Africa and South America rubber forests of vast extent are being constantly discovered in these countries especially in the Congo, Africa; Bolicia and other countries in South America. The largest quantity and best quality of rubber is furnished by the province of Para, Brazil, and all other varieties of the article are not to be compared with it.

The increase of the price of crude, rubber and the manufactured product has been so great that those companies and individuals that had the foresight and nerve to embark in the industry when prospects were somewhat problematical, are now reaping a profit all the way from 150 to 300 per cent.

The systematic cultivation of the rubber tree is now going on in all parts of the world where the tree flourishes, and it is a matter of surprise that only about 5 per cent. of the world's production is cultivated. Over 60 per cent. is the wild rubber from Brazil, about 20 per cent. is wild African rubber, and the remaining 15 per cent. of the wild rubber grows in other parts of the world.

In January, 1907, fine hard Para rubber sold in the United States at $1.28 a pound, during the panic it shrunk to 66 cents, and with the revival of industry following the panic the price rose to $1.28 per pound. At present $85,000,000 could not buy the year's output of rubber. The total weight of the crude rubber as drawn from the trees would reach about 75,000 tons, of which only 4,000 tons come from regularly cultivated plantations.

The mania of speculating in rubber has reached the point of madness in England. More than 100 companies were organized in a short time with a capitalization of $27,000,000 and mobs of men and women were rushing to the banks, fighting to pay as high as $355 a share, whose par value was only $5.

The science of cultivating rubber is now in the ascendency and much study is devoted to the industry. Young plants are grown in nurseries which in course of time are planted out about 150 to the acre. When the trees have attained a circumference of 20 to 24 inches, which may be at their fourth, fifth or sixth year, they are ready for tapping. The "milk" after the drying process is prepared into block rubber or "biscuits" or sheet rubber. It is then dried in a vacuum dryer or cured by smoking.

Rubber trees grow to commercial size only in the tropics, but the rubber plants you see in American homes are the real rubber trees in miniature.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

(Published by Request.)

Editor Toronto Sunday World.—On Aug. 13, Mrs. I. M. Stewart called at Mrs. Eddy's home, and in an interview with William R. Rathven, Mrs. Eddy's corresponding secretary, discussed the contents of a letter dated Dec. 27th, 1909, addressed to a person in Toronto, who afterwards published it.

The letter was as follows:—"Your enquiries relative to a certain individual seem to indicate that you have been misinformed. The party in question spent two days in Mrs. Eddy's household some four years ago, and since then has not been seen by her.

(Sgd.) WM. R. RATVEN,
"Corresponding Secretary."

The above letter purported to reply to certain questions and statements relative to the standing of Mrs. I. M. Stewart, and on the face of it appears somewhat derogatory. Hence an explanation of the meaning of the letter is in order.

During said interview Mr. Rathven stated that the matter had not been referred to Mrs. Eddy, and, therefore, his said letter was not authorized by her; also, that he had no intention of reflecting against Mrs. Stewart's standing as a clear and loyal student of Mrs. Eddy. He further explained that the term he used—"misinformed"—was meant to apply only to certain dates when Mrs. Stewart had been at Mrs. Eddy's home. He admits also that his information as to said dates was incorrect, and says:—"I am glad to take this opportunity of making the meaning of my letter clear beyond chance of misunderstanding. It carried no warrant to any one to set me up as the arbiter of Mrs. Stewart's standing as a Christian Scientist." Mr. Rathven expressed his deep regret at having written the letter of Dec. 27th, above quoted.

A September Bride

LIVINGSTON—OLIVER.

A quiet, but pretty wedding was solemnized at the Knox church manse Thursday at eight o'clock by Rev. H. J. Keith, when Mr. Bruce Livingstone, formerly of Norwood, and Miss Noble Oliver, of Gordon avenue, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony.

The bride, who was attired in a pretty white silk waist, covered with cream net, with blue voile skirt, was attended by Miss Sylva Livingstone, while Mr. Wilbert Kilnbeck assisted the groom. The bride carried a beautiful bouquet of white carnations, while the bridesmaid carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

The happy young couple were the recipients of a number of costly presents, and their many friends join in wishing them a happy and prosperous future.

They will reside on Gordon avenue.

CANADA LAND OF PROMISE BRITONS LOOK THIS WAY

In a Remarkable Speech the Great Slum Worker, Bishop Ingram, at Anglican Church Bi-centenary Congress Tells of the State of Affairs in England.

Halifax, N.S., Sept. 6.—Social problems occupied the Anglican Church Congress here yesterday. Two sections sat in different buildings, one occupied with the more public aspect of the problems discussed, and the other considering them in special church and religious relations. The great meeting in the evening in St. Paul's Church was a magnificent climax to the day's deliberations, and the Bishop of London, Dr. Ingram, spoke with the power and sympathy of a master. Another meeting was held in St. George's Church, at which Sunday school problems were considered.

Dr. Ingram followed the Bishop of Niagara, Dr. Du Moulin, who was somewhat reactionary in his address, and the man from the slums spoke with a directness and outrightness which was startling in comparison.

"My brothers and sisters," he began, "I am sure we have all listened with the deepest interest while my dear old friend has told you of the touching efforts of a working class church to win the confidence of workingmen. But, the fact remains, in spite of all this, that we have somehow failed with the workingman. When you come to take the representatives they send up to the British Parliament, not one is a churchman. We have somehow failed to win their confidence and our non-conformist brethren have also failed, and have even less of their confidence.

"I want to face with you the question why that is. We never yet as a church caught the ideals that inspire them. We do not see the visions that draw them. We criticize them, but we do not understand them. We do not know what they are aiming at. I tried to describe something of their aims in my sermon on Sunday. Some one of the newspapers was pleased to call it socialism. If that is socialism, then I say, God bless socialism. Is it not the ideal of the New Testament?"

"The workingman wanted equality of opportunity. This was very different from the stereotyped socialistic doctrine. When the workingman asked this he only asked something God wanted him to have. Every man should have a chance to live a human life; with time for his mind and soul as well as for his body. He asked pathetically also a chance for his children, a ladder of education, so that the poorest in the land might climb up and take his place with the highest. No body in the land," said the bishop, "had had its highest offices, filled so often from the poorest class, as the Church of England.

"That dream—that day dream if you like—I claim the church has got to sympathize with. God never meant men to be downtrodden slaves. I claim that dream should be realized, and it will as far as I can do it in my time," declared the bishop with emphasis.

But then came the difficulty. He had lived for nine years in the middle of the slums, with only his thirty colleagues from Oxford. What stirred his heart was the two million with no room to live, two or three families in one room, with grown boys and girls, father and mother, and perhaps a workingman also, because there was no place else. Did they wonder if one's blood boiled at the impossibility of having decency? And yet girls, pure as a lily, and boys such as they could hardly believe about, came out of such places through a mother's grave.

"We have no right to give them such places to live in, only fit for dogs," he flamed. Picture after picture, he drew of the horrors he knew. Perhaps there were bitter socialists, but none should forget the sights that stung them into bitterness, he remarked.

Then he turned to Canada, almost a land of promise, with wages half as much more, with room for a hundred million people, and only seven. Coming from those fetid dens, he found room here to breathe and live. He looked at the bonny children in Toronto and Halifax, and thought of the poor little dwindled children left behind in London. The paradise was not so complete, however. He would like to see larger industries in places like Halifax, and he would tell capital when he returned of the opportunities. Why should there be six or seven hundred unemployed here? Why were labor exchanges not better organized at move labor to where it was needed? He would like more methodical immigration system.

COMMON SENSE IN CONSERVATION

President of U.S. Puts up an Argument for Development Too.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 6.—President Taft, in an address before the National Conservation Congress here yesterday, made plain his position on the whole subject of conservation. The speech was an exhaustive one and prepared with great care. The President showed an exact knowledge of the subject.

The central note of his address was an appeal for practical common sense in conservation.

"The time has come, he declared, "for a halt in general rhapsodies over conservation, making the word mean every known good in the world, for after public attention has been aroused, such appeals are of doubtful utility and do not direct the public to the specific course that the people should take, or have their legislators take, in order to promote the cause of conservation.

"Real conservation involves wise, non-wasteful use in the present generation, with every possible means of preservation for future generations.

"The problem is how to save and how to utilize; how to conserve and still develop."

President Taft announced that he would submit to the congress the solution of the problem of adjusting of control of water power, such as between the States and the general government.

The President got a most demonstrative welcome at the conservation congress. Gifford Pinchot, who has been in St. Paul for two days, was not present. He went into J. A. Tawney's district yesterday to deliver a speech in favor of Mr. Tawney's opponent. The former forester will be back in the city to-day to meet Col. Roosevelt.

Mr. Taft gave repeated credit in his speech to Col. Roosevelt for his work for conservation, but he apparently took a fling at "Nationalism" when he said:

"In these days there is a disposition to look too much to the Federal Government for everything. I am liberal in the construction of the constitution with reference to federal power, but I am firmly convinced that the only safe course for us to pursue is to hold fast to the limitations of the constitution and to regard as sacred the powers of the States."

Two Drown In Collision.

New York, Sept. 6.—The barge Bristol, in tow from Newport News to New York, laden with 1,000 tons of pig iron, is lying at the bottom of the ocean, off Barnegate, N.J., as the result of a collision with the outward bound Italian steamer Dinnamare, bound for Norfolk.

Two of the barge's crew, J. Brown, the captain, and Wm. Holmes, a seaman, were drowned.

Loggers' Hospital Burned.

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 6.—A loggers' hospital at Rock Bay, one hundred miles up the coast, burned Sunday. Fourteen patients, who occupied beds, were removed with great difficulty, and only one was injured or burned.

ADRIFT IN OPEN BOAT

Mauretania Rescues Sailors After Six Days on Atlantic.

London, Sept. 6.—A wireless message received yesterday morning from the steamer Mauretania, bound from New York for Liverpool, gives further details of the rescue on Friday night of the missing officers and crew of the burned British tramp steamer West Point. The first news that the shipwrecked men had been picked up was transmitted to the American side of the Atlantic yesterday.

The West Point was burned at sea a week ago Sunday. On Thursday the Leyland Line steamer Devonian, westbound, picked up six of the crew, while the remainder, making another boatload, were found by the Mauretania.

It was 11 o'clock on Friday night when the Mauretania was battling with a northerly gale that a lookout sighted the West Point's small boat. The steamer hove to and the little boat came alongside. It was found to contain Capt. Pinkham, the second officer, two engineers and 12 seamen.

All of the party were well, in spite of the fact that they had been tossed about in an open boat for six days. Capt. Pinkham said that just before he made out the lights of the Mauretania he had given up hope of being saved by a passing vessels and was steering toward the Azores.

The rescue was effected in 38 minutes from the time the lookout discovered the little craft bobbing along on the high waves. The passengers of the Mauretania subscribed $450 for the relief of the West Point's men, including $10 which one contributor paid for Capt. Pinkham's cat.

Arrived at Edmonton.

Edmonton, Sept. 6.—Hon. Frank Oliver arrived here on Saturday evening. He leaves for Ottawa next Wednesday.

ESCAPE WAS MARVELLOUS

Ashtabula, Ohio, Sept. 6.—Climbing from the wreckage of his buggy, on the pilot of a locomotive flying at the rate of 50 miles an hour, Fred. Miner, aged 18, clambered up on the running board of the engine and into the engine cab. His escape was near to the miraculous.

The engine, on the Lake Shore Railroad, struck his horse and buggy a few miles outside of this town. The horse was killed and Miner wedged in the wreckage of the buggy, remained on the pilot of the rushing engine. Indignant, he climbed into the cab, he says, to tell the engineer what he thought of him.

He claimed that the engine had no headlight. The engine stopped to let him off, Miner pointing out that his parents would expect him home early, and he walked the six miles back to town. He was not hurt.

CHARGE NOT SO SERIOUS

Crippen Bought Hyoscin Few Days Before Tragedy--Evidence of Drug in Remains of Belle Elmore---Prisoners Showed No Signs of Illness

(Special to the Review.)

London, Sept. 6.—The charge against Ethel Clare Leneve was to-day reduced to that of being an accessory after the fact. This was announced when the hearing of the pair was resumed in the Bow street police court, Miss Leneve when arrested was accused of being an accomplice.

Prosecutor Travers Humphreys, who made the announcement, also for the first time gave out the case of the prosecution, declaring the examination of the remains of Belle Elmore, "Mrs. Crippen," showed there had been a criminal operation on the victim.

While the chemical analysis revealed large quantities of hyoscin, one of the most powerful drugs known, a few days before the death of Belle Elmore, her husband bought five grains of hyoscin, enough to kill forty persons.

Neither of the prisoners showed any signs of illness in spite of the fact they have spent the last week in the hospitals of their respective prissons.

TRYING CLIMATIC CONDITIONS INTERFERES WITH PARADES

Union Parades Are Held Under Great Difficulties—Heavy Rainfall is Reported From all Parts of the Province—50,000 Men in Line.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—Out-of-door pleasures were at a severe discount yesterday. Indeed, it hardly looked at all like a holiday until the rain finally ceased early in the evening. Traffic on the lake steamers was not much greater than the normal of exhibition time, the water being rough. The outside amusement resorts had a bad day.

The rain yesterday was general in Ontario along the lake and to the north. In the western part of the province, it was fair. The downpour in Toronto totalled nearly 1 1-2 inches of water. The street car track on Queen street, east of the Woodbine became undermined, and the service was tied up during the afternoon.

Traffic at the Union Station was heavy.

Parade at Guelph.

Guelph, Sept. 6.—The dignity of labor was upheld here yesterday under the most trying climatic condition. In spite of the heavy showers that fell throughout the day the local trades and labor unions succeeded in carrying out a very successful program of labor demonstrations.

In the morning there was a big parade, in which about 400 men marched in attractive uniforms, and with pretty and interesting floats. The prize for the best union in the parade was carried by the local union of moulders, who were about 75 strong, while the printers carried off second money. The Guelph Musical Society and Galt Kilties' bands took part in the parade and gave concerts afternoon and evening in the winter fair building, where the big program of athletic sports was carried out.

Heaviest Rainfall In Years.

Winnipeg, Sept. 6.—Drenching rain all day effectually doused all Labor Day celebrations and sports. Rain started about 6 o'clock Sunday afternoon and has continued steadily ever since, varied by occasion cloudbursts. It will be measured by inches for the twenty-four hours, and it looks like continuing. Reports from Manitoba and many other western points indicate general heavy rainfalls, and harvesting operations will be severely checked. Local old-timers claim it is the heaviest continuous fall for several years.

The Day at Quebec.

Quebec, Sept. 6.—Favored by ideal weather, the celebration of Labor Day by the various labor unions was magnificent. There was yesterday morning a grand procession of all the national unions and yesterday afternoon a grand picnic on the fair grounds.

50,000 Parade in New York.

New York, Sept. 6.—For the first time in fifteen years, Labor Day dawned in Greater New York without a single strike to mar the celebration of the day.

"With the cloakmakers' long strike settled in the nick of time, there is no labor trouble of any kind in the city—a most magnificent showing for organized labor," was the comment of Edward J. Hannah, grand marshal of the biggest Labor Day parade ever planned in the metropolis.

The only indication of any impending labor disturbance was of extremely minor importance. It was announced yesterday that the Stage Hands' Union, representing employes of 51 theatres, have presented demands for wage increases averaging about 18 per cent., and declare they will strike on Sunday next if their demands are not granted. The stage hands at present receive from $18 to $28 a week, and the stage carpenters from $30 to $45. It is said that a compromise settlement by the theatres is likely.

Fully 50,000 paraders, representing practically every labor organization in Greater New York, participated in the parade. The members of the Cloakmakers' Union, the settlement of whose strike last week is looked upon by organized labor as a great moral victory, were given a noisy ovation all along the line of march.

FRANCE BUYS MANY AIRSHIPS

Paris, Sept. 6.—The Ministry of War yesterday ordered the purchase of ten military monoplanes and twenty biplanes within the coming three months. This will give the French army an aerial flotilla of sixty by the end of the year.

The army's aeroplanes to be acquired in 1911 must be capable of carrying a weight of 300 kilograms or approximately 661 pounds in a continuous flight of 800 kilometres, or about 186 miles at a minimum speed of 80 kilometres, or 37.26 miles an hour.

The Ministry offers a premium of $20,000 for a machine fulfilling these conditions. President Falleries has offered a cup as a trophy for the constructor of the French machine which wins the most honors at the Bordeaux aviation meeting, Sept. 11.

QUEEN'S OWN OFFICERS ILL

London, Sept. 6.—Seven of the Queen's Own officers are suffering from influenza, and one of them is seriously ill. The sudden transition from the Canadian summer to changeable British weather is believed to be the cause.

Menelik Dying Again.

Rome, Sept. 6.—A despatch from Addis Abebe says King Menelik of Abyssinia has suffered another attack of apoplexy and that his condition is grave.

Galena, Ill., Sept. 6.—Westbound Illinois Central passenger train No. 5, which left Chicago at 3.45 yesterday morning, jumped the track between Council Hill and Scales' Mound, sixteen miles east of here, killing Engineer Frank Tucker of Freeport, Ill., and injuring a number of passengers.

Portsmouth, Eng., Sept. 6.—An officer of a German pioneer regiment was arrested here yesterday, while in the act of sketching the fortifications.

CHURCH OF ROME WILL PAY MORE ATTENTION TO AMERICA

Pontificial Legate is Expected to Hint To-night at a Alteration Between Europe and America With the Eucharistic Congress.

Montreal, Sept. 6.—Everything is in a forward state of preparation for the opening of the twenty-first Eucharistic Congress, and the first of the kind ever held on Canadian or American soil, although it is said that the pontificial legate will hint in his opening speech this evening that these congresses may alternate in future between Europe and America.

It is said, in fact, that the authorities at Rome realize that, while the church is losing ground in the Latin countries of Europe, the progress being made both in the neighboring republic and the Dominion is sufficiently satisfactory to permit the pope's representative throwing out the hint in question.

The legate spent yesterday at the different religious establishments and spoke to the workers at Notre Dame yesterday afternoon.

The talk of the town yesterday was Father Bernard Vaughan's sermon in St. Patrick's on Sunday, the famous London priest having declared that Protestantism was a soulless religion and that half of the English Protestants were going to Rome, and the other half to unbelief.

Yesterday afternoon, the reverend father strolled into The Gazette office and interviewed Editor Kidd, who is a strict Presbyterian; yet he told the father that he had no fault to find with his sermon, as good Protestant doctrine demanded that a man should state in the pulpit what he thought was truth. At this reply, Father Vaughan smiled and retired.

The great opening to-day at the St. James Cathedral will be one of the events of the week, as the legate will deliver his address in French, also reading the Pope's letter to the people, after which Mgr. Bruchesi will reply on behalf of the congress.

It appears to be pretty certain that a red hat will come to the brilliant Archbishop Bruchesi, but it is not at all probable that the event will take place for some months at least. On Thursday, the cardinal will visit the Italian Church, and address the people in their own tongue, while the Monsigneur of Montreal, who also speaks Italian, will also speak in that language.

Speaking at the Monument National last night Father Vaughan of London, Eng., again lived up to his reputation as a vigorous lecturer. "Character" was his theme, and he declared there was "too much slim, sleep and slopp." "We want people to stiffen before they die," he cried.

At the same time Father Vaughan took an optimistic view of the future of the faith. Catholics were increasing, other denominations decreasing. If he were a Protestant he would work for all he was worth against race suicide, lest Catholics should gain possession. But it was needless to talk to a Catholic audience of race suicide.

EXCURSION STEAMER ON ROCKS

New York, Sept. 6.—With more than 300 passengers, including many women and children on board, the excursion steamer Sea Gull, which left Glen Island, on Long Island Sound, late Sunday night for New York, broke her anchor chain while at anchor outside Hell Gate waiting for the fog to lift, and drifted on the rocks off Cat Briar Island. She was released yesterday.

FOUND DEAD SITTING IN BED

Woodstock, Sept. 6.—Sitting bolt upright on the edge of the bed and with an unlighted cigar in his hand, the fully dressed body of Walter Quick was found in his room at the Royal Hotel yesterday evening. He had been seen last at the G.T.R. station Sunday evening and had evidently been dead some hours when found. Dr. West and Coroner McLay decided that death was due to an apoplectic seizure and that an inquest was unnecessary.

Mr. Quick, who was a young man employed as a tuner at the Thomas Organ Co.'s factory, had been staying at the hotel while his mother was away in Cleveland.

He was to be married in a day or two to a popular Woodstock young lady.

Back From Arctic.

Bristol, R.I., Sept. 6.—Two polar bears, two walrus, six musk ox calves, and a great variety of birds are among the living trophies brought back from the far north by Harry Whitney of New Haven, Conn., and Paul J. Rainey of New York, the wealthy sportsmen who arrived here Sunday night after a summer's hunting beyond the Arctic circles.

POLICE WERE ASSAULTED

Toronto, Sept. 6.—Policeman Disney took a severe beating at the hands of three men last evening, but finally, with the assistance of Policeman Older, landed the trio in the Agnes street station, charged with assaulting the police. One of the three assaulted a citizen in Wilton avenue, just east of Victoria street at 6.30. Disney, who has only been in uniform three weeks, started in to arrest the man, when he, with the other two, turned on him.

Disney was knocked down, beaten and kicked, sustaining several cuts in the face and head, and a deep gash in the back of his neck, in addition to an assorted collection of bruises. He stuck to the job, however, and when Policeman Older arrived, the three were quelled. They are Edward Dillon, 170 Duchess street, 23 years, an expressman; Thomas McEwen, 1 Alice street, 20 years, a teamster; Jos. McGrogan, 51 Fleming street, 22 years, a teamster. They are charged with assaulting the police.

Disney was able to go to his home after his injuries were dressed at the station, where he received high commendation for his plucky fight.

LIQUOR LAW BEING ENFORCED

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 6.—Provincial license and police officers are having a lively time enforcing the Government's new regulations for the liquor traffic. At Prince Rupert, where for a time blind pigs flourished during the early history of the town, fines have been imposed aggregating between $8,000 and $10,000, while in other cases it has been made so warm for undesirables in the trade that they have left the country. At Sheep Creek an application for a license was peremptorily cancelled and a fine of $300 imposed for illicit selling at the established hotel. At Fort George two men were sentenced to a year's imprisonment, but given two weeks in which to leave the country before sentence commenced.

STEAMER TAPAJOSE WAS IN COLLISION

New York, Sept. 6.—With her decks swept clear of lifeboats and rigging and her starboard rail and upperstructure raked fore and aft, the Brazilian steamer Tapajose yesterday put into port bringing a tale of collision at sea and of the mysterious disappearance of the vessel causing it. The Tapajose left New York bound for various Brazilian ports, and when 35 miles southeast of Scotland Light, suddenly came upon an unknown four-masted schooner bearing down upon her through the fog. The schooner struck the steamer on the starboard bow, and her anchor fouled the Tapajose's fore rigging, which was torn away like so much paper. The supports of both upper and lower bridges were also swept away, together with the lifeboats and davits. The impact was such as to dent several of the steamer's plates.

Charged With the Crime.

Alix, Alta., Sept. 6.—The inquest to inquire into the death of Hector Murray, contractor, who was apparently killed by Clarke Woods, a laborer, here on Wednesday last, brought in a verdict yesterday morning charging Woods with the crime. TUESDAY, SEPT. 6, 1910.

LABOR DAY

Out from the C.G.E. and many other factories come the artisans, the miller brushing aside his coat of white, the moulder wiping off the grime, the machinist laying aside his blue jeans, the printer deserting his case, the stereotyper putting by his metal pot, the carpenter laying down the plane, the nail and hammer the cabinet-maker his veneer, the varnisher his varnish, the finisher his pumice stone. Out they come. They will rest a while on Labor Day.

So out from the factories they march, and there is no longer the whirring of wheels, the rattle of belts and hoists, no longer the clanging and banging, the fire are clanging and banging the fires are no smoke.

There will be silence between the walls and there will be no sound save the tramp of the watchman.

Labor Day!

And out from the bowels of the earth crawl the miners, blinking and black. But they stand erect and walk as men.

And there is silence in the coal pit no picks or shovels reverberate. No clanking of the mules' feet or rattle of cars, no shout of the drivers, just silence deep, deep silence.

Labor Day!

The day when the artisan puts by his work, and shows his strength.

Labor Day!

Two million men are organized into one vast federation. And America will tremble with their tramp, tramp, tramp.

Labor Day!

On they go with bands playing banners flying, proud in their regalia, pleased that they are one of the toilers. See them!

In thousands and tens of thousands they will march in every principal city in Canada and the United States.

Capital stands by and thinks a while

Labor Day!

The day when the majesty of honest labor is personified and exalted, wears the purple.

MORE POWER TO YOU

The Bowmanville Statesman is 31 years old. For this long time it has been conducted by Mr. A. James, the editor. The Statesman has more personals in it than any paper that comes to the Review office. That's what makes a paper in a town the size of Bowmanville, and that's what helps make any paper that serves a rural district.

Did John Jones go to Toronto to visit Bill Smith? That's interesting.

Does Bob Brown build a hen house? That, too, is live news.

Long winded, heavy editorials don't help a paper. People can think for themselves.

You're sheet's a creditable one, Mr. James.

WHY GIRLS LEAVE THE FARM

The Bowmanville Statesman has a long editorial on "Why the Girls Leave the Farm." We can tell why in one line. They want to go to the city. But many the girl wishes to God that she was back again. Wishes to God and no one else. She is tired of the little room in the boarding house, the thin milk ironacly called cream, She is sick of the eggs and poor butter. The sham, the powder and paint, She often longs for the good old grub down on the farm. But her pride won't let her admit it, her pride won't let her return. So she clerks in the store, works in the office, or works in the home and the sorrow very often is hid in the smile.

THE NEW WAY

In Germany Dr. E. Klesler, Dr. H. Reid and Engineer J. Rounk are experimenting with a cinematograph, taking photographs of the internal organs in the human body. They have given to the process the name of Biorcentengraphy. Away with the old plan, the old request "Kindly let me see your tongue." In a few years we will go to the doctor, or he will come to us and not bring us back a pill or a bottle, but a photograph of our stomach, or our heart, kidney or liver. Have we a headache, he will display for us our brains. All we need now is a machine for photographing thoughts and nothing will be hid from us. Then we will run when we see the photographer coming. However—"How few are those who think and of all the thinking few, how few are those who think at all, but only think they do.

OUR PHILANTHROPIST!

From the very commencement of the undertaking to the present moment there has been an attempt on the part of the Government to deceive the people, not only as to the cost of the Grand Trunk Pacific road, but as to the character of the country through which it passes. Thus Sir, Wilfrid Laurier in one of those airy flights of eloquence in which plain, ordinary common, everyday horse sense is as scarce as the egg of the Great Auk, painted a glowing picture of the line from Winnipeg to Quebec up in the far northern wilds as yet untouched by civilization, passing through a fertile country blossoming with roses, a veritable promised land overflowing with milk and honey. The real facts of the case are that the Winnipeg to Quebec section cannot help being a drag on the whole enterprise. There will be no milk and little honey in these northern regions, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier's glowing vision was a kind of narcotic applied to the nostrils of the people to lull them into sweet dreams of future prosperity all due to the wise and benevolent government which plunged them into debt to build Laurier's folly. But the people are waking from the dream. They want to be shown. It must surprise the Premier and his colleagues very much to have their words doubted, but the sight of some of that milk and honey, and even a smell of those roses which are said to bloom so luxuriantly on both sides of that northern steel, would be more satisfactory than all the idle vaporings of a discovered Charlatan.

When the history of the Grand Trunk Pacific comes to be written the people of Canada may understand where their money has gone. The eastern section was given over to a commission made up of men who know no more about building a railway than they do of the composition of Halley's comet. Politics has entered into every detail. The gravest possible charges of fraud have been stifled by the grip of the partisan majority in Parliament. The light of day has been prevented from shining on the construction of this road. All the people have to do is to put up the money for Liberal hirelings to grow fat upon. And for this Laurier, that sauve gentleman who tells the people he is proud of Canadians is primarily responsible. But the pride is confined entirely to one side.

SIDE LIGHTS

The Deed of the Man

James C. McNally, in the National Magazine.

The Dream is the babe in the loveliit nest,
And the rollicking boy at play,
The Dream is the youth with the old, old zest
For the rare romance of a day.
Then the Deed strides forth to the distant goal
That has dazzled since life began,
For the Dream is the child of the rampant soul,
But the Deed is the man.

The Dream is the peak that is seen afar,
And the wish for the eagle's wings,
The Dream is the song to the beak'ning star
That the world waif fondly sings.
Then the Deed comes crowned with the strength and skill
That doth perfect a golden plan,
For the Dream is the child of the sovereign will—
But the Deed is the man.

The Dream is the mask that would make men fair,
And the boast that would count them brave;
The Dream is the honors that heroes wear
And the glory that high hearts crave
Then the Deed gives battle to pride and pelf,
As only a conqueror can;
For the Dream is the child of the better self—
But the Deed is the man.

No song was so sweet and no star so bright
As the Dream of the Nazarene;
From the Virgin's bosom, to Calvery's height
It sang and it shone serene
Then the Deed proclaimed Him King of His kind,
As the blood of the martyr ran;
For the Dream was the child of the Master mind—
But the Deed was the Man!

NOW WHAT DOES HE MEAN.

INNOVATION IN RAILWAY TRAVEL

If it is growing time for Canada it is also the growing time for the Grand Trunk Railway System. The popularity of the International Limited the finest and fastest train in Canada, has made larger cars an absolute necessity in order to provide room for the growing traffic. The result of this is a much heavier train and in order to handle this train larger and swifter locomotives have been especially designed and built. But before this was done the 80 pound rail was replaced with 100 pound steel. After all that is the foundation—the roadbed.

The cafe parlor cars, which have done service since the establishment of this splendid train, are now replaced with new diners which are pioneers in their way. The new cars are 70 feet 7 inches long, 10 1-2 feet wide, 14 1-2 feet high. They are equipped with six wheeled trucks and have steel platforms. They are heated with steam from the locomotive and equipped with electric lights, electric fans, etc. The dining room is finished in African manogany, the chairs are made in the Montreal shops of the Grand Trunk Railway.

New parlor cars similar in excellence to the dining cars are operated on the International Limited.

The Round-Up

A Romance of Arizona

Novelized From Edmund Day's Melodrama

By JOHN MURRAY and MILLS MILLER

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

A half hour later the Mexican guards appeared upon the scene and unbound Lane's unconscious form from the sahuaro, which the fire had consumed to within a foot of his bowed head. They deluged his face and back and bathed his tortured feet with the contents of their canteens and brought him back to life, but, alas, not to reason.

Six months later there limped out of Chihuahua hospital a discharged patient, wry necked, crook backed, with drawn features and hair and beard streaked with gray. It was Dick Lane restored to his old physical strength, so far as the distortion of his spine caused by his torture permitted, and to the full possession of his mental faculties. He mounted one of the captured ponies and rode off with the proceeds of the sales of the others in his pocket to purchase provisions for a return to his prospecting.

Before plunging into the wilderness he wrote a letter:

Chihuahua, Mexico.

Mr. John Payson, Sweetwater Ranch, Florence, Ariz., U. S. A.:

Dear Jack—I have been sick and out of my head in the hospital here for the last six months. Just about the time you all were expecting me home I had a run in with the Apaches. And who do you think was with them? Buck McKee, the half breed that I ran off the range two years ago for tongue slitting. After I had done for all the rest he got me, and—well, the story's too long to write. I rather think McKee has made off with the gold I had cached just before the fight. I'm going back to see, and if he did I'll hustle around to find a buyer for one of my claims. I don't want to sell my big mine, Jack. I tell you I struck it rich! But that story can wait till I get back. Your loan can't, though, so expect to receive $3,000 by express some time before I put in an appearance. I hope you got the mortgage renewed at the end of the year. If my failure to show up then has caused you trouble, you'll forgive me, old fellow, I know, under the circumstances. I'll make it up to you. I owe you everything. You're the best friend a man ever had. That's why I'm writing to you instead of to Uncle Jim, for I want you to do me another friendly service. Just break it gently to Echo Allen that I'm alive and well, though pretty badly damaged by that renegade McKee, and tell her that it wasn't my fault I wasn't home on the day I promised. She'll forgive me, I know, and be patient awhile longer. It's all for her sake I'm staying away. Give her the letter I inclose. Your old bunkie,

DICK LANE.

CHAPTER II.

JIM ALLEN was the sole owner and proprietor of Allen Hacienda. His ranch, the Bar One, stretched for miles up and down the Sweetwater valley. Bounded on the east and west by the foothills, the tract was one of the garden spots of Arizona. Southward lay the Sweetwater ranch, owned by Jack Payson. Northward was the home ranch of the Lazy K, an Ishmaelitish outfit, ever at petty war with the other settlers in the district. It was a miscellaneous and constantly changing crowd recruited from rustlers from Wyoming, gamblers from California, half breed outlaws from the Indian Territory—in short, "bad men" from every section of the western country. They had a special grudge against Allen and Payson, whom they held to be accountable for the sudden disappearance about a year before of their leader, Buck McKee, a half breed from the Cherokee strip. However, no other leader had arisen equal to that masterful spirit, and their enmity expressed itself only in such petty depredations as changing brands on stray cattle from the Bar One and Sweetwater ranches and the slitting of the tongues of young calves so that these would be unable to feed properly and as a result be disowned by their mothers, whereupon the Lazy K outfit would slap its brand on them as mavericks.

Allen was a Kentuckian who had served in the Confederate army as one of Morgan's raiders and so had received by popular brevet the title of colonel. At the close of the war he had come to Arizona with his young wife, Josephine, and had founded a home on the Sweetwater. He was now one of the cattle barons of the great southwest. Prosperity had not spoiled him. Careless in his attire, cordial in his manner, he was a man who was loved and respected by his men from the newest tenderfoot to the veteran of the bunk house. His wife, however, was not so highly regarded, for she had never been able to recognize changes in time or location and so was in perpetual conflict with her environment. She attempted to make the free and independent cowboys of the Arizona plains "stand around" like the house servants of the Kentucky blue grass, and she persisted in the effort to manage her husband by the feminine artifice of weeping. In the days of her youth and beauty this had been very effective, but now that these had passed it was productive only of good humored raillery from him and mirth from the bystanders.

"No wonder Jim has the finest ranch in Arizony," the cowboys were wont to say, "with Josephine a-irrigatin' it all the time."

Allen Hacienda was certainly a garden spot in that desert country. The building was of the old Mexican style, an architecture found by centuries of experience to be suited best to the climate and the materials of the land. The house was only one story in height. The rooms and outbuilding sprawled over a wide expanse of ground. The walls were of native stone and adobe clay. Over them clambered grapevines. In front of the home Mrs. Allen had planted a garden. A 'dobe wall cut off the house from the corral and the bunk house. A heavy girder spanned the distance from the low roof to the top of the barrier. Latticework supporting a grapevine formed, with a girder, a gateway through which one could catch from the piazza a view of a second cultivated plot. Palms and flowering cactuses added color and life to the near prospect. Through the arbor a glimpse of the Tortilla mountains, forty miles away, held the eye. The Sweetwater, its path across the plains outlined by the trees fringing its banks, flowed past the ranch. Yucca palms and sahuaros threw a scanty shade over the garden.

Shortly after the arrival of the Allens in Arizona they were blessed with a daughter, the first white child born in that region. They waited for a Protestant clergyman to come along before christening her, and as such visits were few and far between the child was beginning to talk before she received a name. From a "cunning" habit she had of repeating the last words of questions put to her her father provisionally dubbed her Echo, which name, when the preacher came, he insisted upon her retaining.

As Echo grew older, in order that she might have a companion, Colonel Allen went to Kentucky and brought back with him a little orphan girl who was a distant relative of his wife. Polly Hope her name was, and Polly Hope she insisted on remaining, although the Allens would gladly have adopted her.

Colonel Allen trained the girls in all the craft of the plains just as if they were boys. He taught them to ride astride, to shoot, to rope cattle. They accompanied him everywhere he went, cantering on bronchos by the side of his Kentucky thoroughbred. Merry, dark eyed, black haired Echo always rode upon the off side and saucy Polly, with golden curls, blue eyes and tip tilted nose, upon the near. The ex-Confederate soldier dubbed them in military style his "right and left wings." As the three would "make a raid" upon Florence, the county town, the inhabitants did not need to look out of doors to ascertain who were coming, for the merriment of the little girls gave sufficient indication. "Here comes Jim Allen ridin' like the destroyin' angel," said young Sheriff Hoover on one of these occasions. "I know him by the rustlin' of his 'wings.'"

The household was again increased a few years later by the generous response of the Allens to an appeal from a children's aid society in an eastern city to give a home to two orphaned brothers, Richard and Henry Lane. Dick and Buddy (shortened in time to Bud), as they were called, being taken young, quickly adapted themselves to their new environment and by the time they arrived at manhood had proved themselves the equals of any cowboy on the range in horsemanship and kindred accomplishments. Dick, the elder brother, was a steady, reliable fellow, modest as he was brave and remarkably quick witted and resourceful in emergencies. He gave his confidence over readily to his fellows, but if ever he found himself deceived withdrew it absolutely. It was probably this last characteristic that attracted to him Echo Allen's especial regard, for it was also her distinguishing trait. "You have got to act square with Echo," her father was wont to say, "for if you don't you'll never make it square with her afterward."

Bud was a generous hearted, impetuous boy, who responded warmly to affection. He repaid his elder brother's protecting care with a loyalty that knew no bounds. The colonel, who was a strict disciplinarian, frequently punished him in his boyhood for wayward acts, and the little fellow made no resistance—only sobbed in deep penitence. Once, however, when Uncle Jim, as the boys and Polly called him, felt compelled to apply the rod to Dick—unjustly, as it afterward appeared—Bud burst into a tempest of passionate tears and, leaping upon the colonel's back, clung there, clawing and striking like a wildcat, until Allen was forced to let Dick go. It is shrewdly indicative of the colonel's character that not only did he refrain from punishing Bud on that occasion, but when floggings were subsequently due the little fellow laid on the rod less heavily out of regard for the loyalty to his brother he had then displayed.

This attack also won the admiration of Polly Hope, who was something of a spitfire herself. A little jealous of Dick for the chief place he held in Bud's affection, she openly claimed the younger brother as her sweetheart and attempted to constitute him her knight, though with repeated discouragements, for Bud was a bashful lad and, though he had a true affection for the girl, boylike concealed it by show of rude indifference.

The tender relations of these boys and girls persisted naturally into young manhood and womanhood. No word of love passed between Dick and Echo until that time when the "nesting impulse," the desire to have a home of his own, prompted the young man to go out into the world and win his fortune. For a year he had acted as foreman of the Allen ranch, working in neighborly co-operation with Jack Payson of Sweetwater ranch, a man of about his own age. The two young men became the closest of comrades. When the fever of adventure seized upon Lane and he became dissatisfied with the plodding career of a wage earner, Payson insisted on mortgaging Sweetwater ranch for $3,000 and in lending Dick the money for a year's prospecting in the mountains of Sonora, Mexico, in search of a fabulously rich "lost mine of the Aztecs."

Traditions of lost mines are plentiful in Arizona and northern Mexico. First taken up by the Spanish invaders of 300 years ago from the native Indians, they have passed down to each subsequent influx of white men. The directions are always vague. The inquirer cannot pin his informant down to any definite data. Over the mountains always lies the road. Hundreds of lives have been sacrificed and cruelty unparalleled practiced upon innocent men, women and children by gold seekers in their lust for conquest. Prosperous Indian villages have been laid waste, and whole bands of adventurers have gone into the desert in search of those mines, never to return.

When the time for Lane's departure came Echo wept at the thought of losing for so long a time the close companion of her childhood and the sympathetic confidant of her youthful thoughts and aspirations. Dick, in whom friendship for Echo had long before ripened into conscious love, took her tears as evidence that she was similarly affected toward him, and he allowed all the suppressed passion of his nature full vent in a declaration of love. The girl was deeply moved by this revelation of the heart of a strong man made tender as a woman's by a power centering in her own humble self, and, being utterly without experience of the emotion even in its protective form of calf love, which is the varioloid of the genuine affection, she imagined through sheer sympathy that she shared his passion. So she assented with maidenly reserve to his plea that she promise to marry him when he should return and provide a home for her. Her more cautious mother secured a modification of this pledge by limiting the time that Echo should wait for him to one year. If at the expiration of that period Lane did not return to claim her promise or did not write making satisfactory arrangements for continuance of the engagement Echo was to be considered free to marry whom she chose.

Soon after Lane's departure Mrs. Allen persuaded the colonel to send Echo east to a New England finishing school for girls, where her mother hoped that her budding love for Lane might be nipped by the frigid atmosphere of intellectual culture, if not, indeed, supplanted by a saving interest in young men in general and perhaps in some particular scion of a blue blooded Boston family.

The plan succeeded in part only. The companionship of her schoolfellows, her music and art lessons, her books (during the limited periods allotted to serious study and reading) and, above all, her attrition at receptions with another order of men than that she had known in the rough, uncultured west occupied her mind so fully that poor Dick Lane, who was putting a thought of Echo Allen in every blow of his pick, received only the scraps of her attention.

Dick had few opportunities to mail a letter and none of them for receiving one. Unpracticed in writing, his epistolary compositions were crude in the extreme, being wholly confined to bald statements of fact. Had he been as tender on paper as he was in his words and accents when he kissed away her tears at parting her regard for him would have had fuel to feed on and might have kindled into genuine love. As it was, she was forced to admit that in comparison with the brilliant university men with whom she conversed Dick Lane intellectually was as quartz to diamond.

On the other hand, she contrasted Dick in the essential point of manliness most favorably with the male butterflies of society that hovered around her. What one of them was so essentially chivalrous as the western man—so modest, so self sacrificing, so brave and resolute and resourceful? Dick Lane, or Jack Payson, for that matter, in all save the adventitious points of education and culture was the higher type of manhood, and Jack, at least, if not poor Dick, could hold his own in mental and artistic perception with the brightest, most cultured of Harvard graduates.

At the end of the year she came back home to await Dick's return from the wilds of Mexico. There was great anxiety about his safety, for Geronimo, attacked by Crook in the Apache stronghold of the Tonto basin, had escaped to the mountains of northwestern Mexico with his band of fierce Chiricahuas.

Now, Dick Lane had not been heard from in this region. When he neither made appearance nor sent a message upon the day appointed for his return, his brother, Bud, was for setting out instantly to find him and rescue him if he were in difficulties.

Then it was that Echo Allen discovered the true nature of her affection for her lover—that it was sisterly regard, differing only in degree, but not in kind, from that which she felt for his brother. She joined with Polly in opposing Bud's going, urging his recklessness as a reason. "You are certain to be killed," she said, "and I cannot lose you both." Jack Payson, for whom Bud was working, then came forward and offered to accompany him and keep within bounds. Again there was a revelation of her heart to Echo, one that terrified her with a sense of disloyalty. It was Jack she really loved, noble, chivalric, wonderful Jack Payson, whom, with a southern girl's intensity of feeling, she had unconsciously come to regard as her standard of all that makes for manhood. Plausible objections could not be urged against his sacrificing himself for his friend. With an irresistible impulse she cast herself upon his breast and said, "I cannot bear to see you go."

Payson gently disengaged her arms. "I must, Echo. It is what Dick would do for me if I were in his place."

However, while Payson and Bud were preparing for their departure Buck McKee apeared in the region and reported that Dick Lane had been killed by the Apaches. He told with convincing details how he had met Lane as each was returning from a successful prospecting trip in the Ghost range and how they had sunk their differences in standing together against an attack of the Indians. He extolled Dick's bravery, relating how, severely wounded, he had stood off the savages to enable himself to escape.

When he handed over Dick's watch to Echo—for he had learned on his return that she was betrothed to Lane—as a last token from her lover, no doubt remained in the minds of his hearers of the truth of his story, and Payson and Bud Lane gave up their purposed expedition.

HOW MANY REALIZE THE MARVELLOUS VALUE OF FRUIT

IN CURING MANY DISEASES ?

Wonderful Success of "Fruit-a-tives" —The Famous Fruit Medicine

Fruit juice consists of about 91% water, 8% of sweet matter, and only 1% of an intensely bitter substance. Careful experiments show that it is this bitter principle, which is the active or medicinal material of fruit juice.

Under certain conditions, the bitter principle can be made to replace or transform some of the sweet atoms in the juice, thus making a new compound which is much more active medicinally than the ordinary juice.

Many fruits were analyzed and it was found that the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes gave the best results. These fruit juices, having been made more active by the secret process of changing the sweet principle into the bitter, are combined with tonics and antiseptics and made into tablets. These tablets are the famous fruit medicine—"Fruit-a-tives"—known in every part of Canada for their wonderful curative qualities in diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys and Skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50 or trial size, 25c.

Gardiner, Me.—"I was a great sufferer from a female disease. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me in three months."—Mrs. S. A. WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner, Maine.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

ANOTHER CHANCE

Young Men Must Make Full Restitution for Case of Beer They Stole

The young men who stole the case of beer from the cellar of the Snowden House were given still another chance by Magistrate Dumble this morning.

His Worship had ordered that full restitution be made to the owner of the beer, and last Saturday when two of the offenders appeared in court, only their share had been paid. The third young man had failed to make good, and a warrant was issued for his arrest. The police, however, failed to get him, and conditions remained the same to-day.

The two boys promised to make up the full amount, and in discharging them his Worship stated that he was straining a point in order to give them another chance, but that if they ever appeared again they need not expect any mercy.

ARE MUSICAL PLAYS ON WANE?

Mr. Joe Hewitt, the advance representative of "Ole Oleson" looks for a horseshoe year in the show business. He thinks however that the patrons of the provincial circuits of Canada, which includes places from the diminutive proportions of Lindsay to magnitude of Peterborough will probably be served a little different course of show food for their critical consumption.

"Of course its a little early to predict anything definite in a detailed sense," he said to the Review, but from the general outlook I think musical shows for the one night stands are somewhat one the wane. Not by any means that the sun of the musical has set but there has been such a surfeit of song plays in the last few years that they have to considerable merit and originality to succeed. And the expense in connection with the production and maintainence of the musical show is so great that several road productions have been losing propositions for the owners."

CHIMNEY FIRE

A chimney blaze at 551 Cedar St., caused an alarm to be sent in from box 38 about 11 o'clock yesterday morning.

A quick run made by the brigade, was instrumental in extinguishing it, and little damage was done.

On Sunday evening about 5.03, a power wire droping down on the wires underneath was the means of sounding an alarm at the fire staton. The cause was quickly discovered however and remedied.

ELLIOT'S

This is a Little Talk on the Reason Why Your Woolen Clothes Shrink

A lady the other day said: "I don't know why my clothes shrink. I always take such care of them and I use nothing but home made soap."

If you look at a fibre of wool through a strong microscope, you will see that it is just a pipe filled with natural oil, and anything that destroys this oil causes the wool fibre to flatten together or, in other words, to shrink. Many of the much advertised soaps of to-day are chiefly composed of soda, and this chemical eats away the wool oil, and the lye in the home made soap will perhaps do so still more rapidly, and how often you will see some one hang a wool garment near a sharp heat, and if the garment is not browned they think it hasn't been injured, but they wonder afterwards why that wool garment has lost its springy softness.

A very good guide for correct handling of wool is to remember that wool is an animal product, and anything that will hurt the hands will injure the wool. You would not roast your hands, or leave them in frosty water, or wash them in lye or washing soda.

In connection with this it may be said that a mixture has been discovered that when the wool has been immersed therein, it protects the oil within the wool so it cannot shrink, and the wool so treated always stays soft and springy.

Our REINA and ZENITH Underwear for Ladies and Children has been treated in this way and should either of these brands shrink, if you bring the shrunken garments back to us we will give you a new one for it.

The REINA Underwear in ladies' sizes in Vests and Drawers winter weight, are 50c each.

The ZENITH cashmere wool Vests and Drawers are in ladies' sizes, 75c each. The children's sizes run from 25c.

TAILLESS WONDER

Nero, the Trick Pony is Attracting Attention at Toronto Fair

The Toronto Globe, referring to the special attractions on the Midway at the Fair, says: "Nero," Herb. Kendry's clever little tailless pony, easily takes a front place on the Midway. Whatever he lacks at one end he certainly lacks nothing at the other in the way of brains. The fact that he is only ten months and a few days old makes the feats he performs more remarkable, as horses are generally not trained till two years old. His training began when he was two months old. Nero is one of the greatest attractions at the Fair, and his intelligence is a marvel to young and old."

LOST HIS LIFE WHEN SHORT DISTANCE FROM SHORE

William Parsons Drowned 100 Yards From McCracken's Landing Sunday Afternoon—Canoe Capsized—Body Recovered In Weeds

William Parsons, twenty years of age, was drowned in Stoney Lake, Sunday afternoon, about 1.30, when only one hundred yards from shore. The accident occurred just off McCracken's Landing, and was witnessed by several visitors who were staying at the hotel.

Nobody appeared to know just what caused the canoe in which the young man was out, to capsize.

Parsons has been employed all summer by Mr. Robert Hamilton, proprietor of the hotel, to deliver ice and other articles to cottagers in the vicinity of the Landing. On Sunday afternoon, with the apparent intention of taking a pleasure sail, he jumped into his canoe and started out. When one hundred yards or so from the wharf his canoe was seen to tip over, and Parsons, who was seated in the stern, was thrown into the water. With his hands upraised above his head, he went down and did not rise again. He was unable to swim.

Several canoes hurriedly shoved out with the expectation that he would come to the surface. No trace could be found of him, however, and a dragging party was immediately formed and the search commenced with aid of trawling lines

The body was located in the weeds in about twenty feet of water, after about one hour and a half of searchin, and taken up to McCracken's hotel. Dr. Munro, of Norwood, was summoned, and pronounced an inquest unnecessary.

The young man was well-known around the lakes, and his tragic death cast a heavy gloom over the neighborhood.

His father and mother reside at Hall's Glen. A sad feature of the affair is that his father was confined to his bed with a severe illness at the time of the accident, and did not hear of it for some time. Several brothers and sisters also survive him.

It is altogether likely that the body will be interred at the Warsaw cemetery to-day.

RESCUED TWO LADIES FROM WATER AT JUNIPER

Yesterday afternoon, about three o'clock, a second drowning fatality was almost recorded at Stony Lake. A young man and two ladies, summer visitors at the Lakes, were in a sailing dinghy near Juniper Island. A strong wind was blowing and the water was pretty rough. Suddenly the craft was seen to keel over and the three occupants were left in the water.

Mr. Jack Brown, who was on the shore at Juniper Island, and was an eye-witness of the affair jumped into his canoe and was out to them in a very few seconds. He managed to get the two young ladies to share and also assisted the young man, who fortunately was a good swimmer. If it had not been for Mr. Brown, it is probable that some one would have drowned, and he is deserving of great credit for his quickness and presence of mind in the sudden emergency.

REV. DR. LANGFELDT ON CAPITAL AND LABOR

At St. Luke's Church, Sunday evening, the rector, Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, chose for his text, the following scriptural passage, "A City That Has Foundation, Whose Maker and Builder is God." In his remarks he touched upon the question, that is a perpetual bone of dissension namely "Capital and Labor." Comparing the present day city in its various aspects to the city of the ancients, the speaker showed how the city of to-day though modern and huge was not entirely beautiful as were the old time cities, such as the city of Athens in Greece. For the work of construction of cities of old, slaves were necessary, and Aristotle thought it impossible that a modern city could exist without slaves. The slaves in those days were, generally speaking, treated fairly well. Then the Christian religion came in and broke up the slavery system. It had a more definite philosophy of life, which refused to leave out of account a single human being. It said that everyone on earth should have an equal chance. The speaker said that civilization has come to mean something men, stupid and cruel. We suffer not from over-civilization, but under civilization. Because the beasts struggle against each other, society is sometimes founded on the same basis. The correct attitude of man towards man must be determined. The Church has forgotten the great fundamental of the Christian religion. In broaching the question of capital and labor, the preacher referred to the biblical statement which says: "If any man will not work neither shall he eat." It is almost always those who do not work who over-eat. A vast class are always idle. They live by the efforts of others. How do the monopolists manage to get their money to overfeed themselves. They can be called usurers. These great financiers who are employers of labor, are not doing the work, but live upon by efforts of those men who do the work We allow them to be monopolists, to take the monopolies, while the poor man lives by the sweat of his brow. This is the reason of the great strikes which are always breaking out. The stubborness and greed of the capitalists refuse the men a fair wage for the work they are doing.

In concluding Dr. Langfeldt said that the only way to have peace was to be fair and just in all our dealings.

WELL KNOWN BUSINESS MAN PASSED AWAY SUNDAY

The many friends of Mr. H. A. Mulhern, 546 Aylmer Street, will be grieved to learn that this well-known citizen passed away yesterday morning. The late Mr. Mulhern was a native of Northumberland county and spent his younger years in the village of Warkworth. He came to Peterborough some 27 years ago and engaged in the flour milling business on a large scale, operating the stone mill just to the east of the Hunter Street bridge. Mr. Mulhern was one of the first millers to enter extensively into the then new system of grinding corn in bond, and re-exporting the finished product. After some years spent in the old "Roger's" mill, above referred to, he established and successfully conducted the Central Milling Co, at the C. P. R. depot.

The late Mr. Mulhern has been in declining health for some years, but bore up patiently and bravely, attending to his large business interests. The deceased was well known to many of our citizens and was universally respected by all who knew him. Mr. Mulhern leaves to mourn his loss a wife and three sons, Alexander Hamilton of Renfrew, Harry and Barnard.

The funeral, largely attended, took place this afternoon from the late residence to the Little Lake cremetery.

CONCLUSIVE EVIDENCE AGAINST PRISONER LACKING

Magistrate Held Evidence Was Not Strong Enough To Send Joseph Reynolds Up for Trial on Watch Stealing Charge—One Month in Jail for Stealing Umbrella

The hearing of the evidence in the watch stealing charge against Joseph Reynolds was resumed at the police court this morning and at its conclusion Magistrate Dumble held that while there were circumstances tending to cast suspicion on the prisoner conclusive evidence was lacking. There was no downright proof he contended that the watch seen on Reynolds corresponded with the one missed by John Kelly when he awoke from his sleep in the barn and he did not feel warranted in sending the prisoner up for trail.

THE EVIDENCE.

John Copperwaith when asked to explain why he did not put in an appearance at court Saturday morning gave as an excuse that he "slept in till ten o'clock.

The Magistrate didn't like the answer and told the witness that he didn't believe him.

Asked if he had seen the prisoner with a watch witness answered yes. It was an open face and the place was Victoria Park about one month ago. Prisoner claimed that he got it at Clarke's jewelry store.

Chief Thompson next called, stated that after prisoner was arrested he made the statement that he had not had a watch since he lost his gun metal watch last winter. He also admitted having slept out in barns.

Copperwaith the previous witness, before and after being subpoenaed told him that it was a week ago Sunday he saw the watch. That would make it two weeks ago last Sunday and the Sunday after the alleged theft

Harry Clark jeweller, next called, said he didn't know the prisoner. He couldn't say whether or not a watch had been sold to Reynolds.

ONE MONTH IN JAIL.

Before the evidence in this case was proceeded with Reynolds was charged with stealing an umbrella valued at $1.00. Mr. G. N. Gordon who appeared for the prisoner in both charges declined to elect or plead, but at the consent of the court he later put in a plea of guilty.

For this offence Reynolds was sent to jail for one month.

The umbrella was taken from the Mattress Co. in East City, by Reynolds and the theft left the employees of the place open to suspision submitted the Crown Attorney. The umbrella was afterwards sold by Reynolds.

In September 1907, Reynolds pleaded guilty to stealing $80.00 and was given three months in jail. The following year with several other boys he was implicated in the theft of a number of articles from Mr. R. M. Roy's yacht.

More jewellery, valued in all at $115,000, was taken from Mrs. Adriance, her daughter and a companion, at New York.

WEST ENDS AND CENTRALS TIED FOR PENMAN SHIELD

Each Association Gathered 51 Points—High Jump in Dispute—Archibald Beaten by Cameron in Pole Vault—A Closely Contested Program of Outdoor Sports Witnessed by Large Crowd

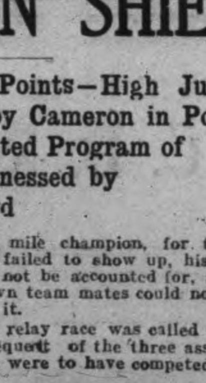
The Penman games, as promised, furnished a splendid program of athletic events at Riverside Park yesterday afternoon, and to all appearances, the seven or eight hundred people in attendance took keen interest in the various competitions. The games were a success. The attendance might have been larger, weather conditions could have been better, and some disappointment was expressed in the non-appearance of several champions, but these are the happenings which athletic promoters always have to contend with. But in spite of these handicaps the officials were well satisfied with results.

The finish found the West Ends and Centrals of Toronto tied for first place, each with 51 points. The question of which will take the Penman Shield for this year is as yet unsettled. The high jump is in dispute. Referee Dr. McPherson awarded first to George Barber, but the West Ends hold the opinion that Bill Marshall should have been given the decision. The two were fighting it out for the honors and cleared 5 feet eight inches. Opinion is divided as to the exact meaning of the rules regarding further competition. Marshall was the first to clear at 5 feet 9 inches, and in doing this the West Ends claim he should be given first place. Barber came along with another jump that also cleared, and the contest stopped.

The West Ends have protested the ruling of the referee, and should they lose, further competition will ne necessary to break the tie. In the event of the protest being decided in their favor, the Shield will again pass to them by a score of 53—49. Marshall will get the two extra points and Barber will lose two.

The one mile handicap walk and the relay race were not put on. As announced, George Goulding, the Canadian mile champion, for the first time, failed to show up, his absence could not be accounted for, and even his own team mates could not understand it.

The relay race was called off at the request of the three associations which were to have competed.



MR. J. J. THOMPSON
Physical Director of the local Y.M.C.A. and the man behind the gun.

The pole vault and high jump were especially interesting, and probably the feature of the contests was the defeat of Archibald by Cameron in the former. Archibald touched the 11 ft. mark, and his opponent cleared and went two inches better. The performance in this event was loudly applauded, and the same was the case in the high jump. All the events, with the exception of the five-mile run and twelve-pound hammer throw, were warmly contested for first place.

The officials carried out their work well, and there was something doing all the time. To Mr. J. J. Thompson, the physical director of the local Y.M.C.A., and the secretary of the games, much credit is due. He was instrumental in bringing the meet here, and he had the arduous preliminary arrangements to handle. The success which was achieved will be an incentive to further accomplishments, and, judging from the patronage accorded yesterday, interest in athletics in Peterborough is due for a revival.

The events, winners and time were as follows:—

220 YARD RUN.

1—M. Follinsbee, Toronto West End, 23 3-5 seconds.
2—G. Barber, Toronto Central.
3—C. Thorley, Toronto Central.

A close finish featured this event, with Follinsbee grabbing the tape first and Barber second. Only four entered and Brock, of the West Ends, was beaten out for third place by Thorley.

100 YARD DASH.

1—G. Barber Toronto Centrals, 10 1-5 seconds.
2—M. Follinsbee, Toronto West End.
3—C. Thorley, Toronto Centrals.

Barber had to step lively to take the honors and the grandstand witnessed a pretty exhibition of running.

HALF MILE RUN.

1—A. Knox, Toronto Central, 2.04 2-5.
2—M. Brock Toronto West End.
3—R. Pratt, Toronto West End.

Arnold Knox, the half mile champion, and Mel Brock, provided a great finish. The former winning out by inches. Pratt was a close third. Flowers made the fourth entry.

100 YARDS, CITY CHAMPIONSHIP.

1—H. Wood, 10 4-5 seconds.
2—W. Flowers.
3—Kelly.

Hy. Wood, of the Victoria Harriers,

GEORGE GOULDING
The one mile walking champion who failed to put in an appearance—Goulding meets Webb the English champion at Toronto this Saturday.

led all the way, and won out from Flowers, who chased him all along There were only three starters.

ONE MILE RUN.

1—R. Holden, Toronto West End, 4.39 4-5 seconds.
2—C. Howard, Toronto Central.
3.—G. Lister, Toronto Central.

Holden and Howard gradually drew away from the rest of the field and and fought it out for first place, Holden winning with Howard right on his heels.

120 YARDS HURDLES.

1—G. Barber, Toronto Centrals, 17 3-5 seconds.
2—A. Cameron, Toronto Central.
3—A. O. Wright, Toronto West End.

In the initial heat Cameron finished first in 17 3-5 seconds. Barber took the next in 17 4-5 and the final in 17 3-5 with Cameron second and Wright third. The hurdles were something by way of a change, and the work of the men was close and interesting.

RUNNING HIGH JUMP.

1—Barber, Toronto Central, 5 feet 9 in.
2—Marshall, Toronto West End, 5 feet 9 inches.
3—Cameron Toronto Centrals, 5 feet 4 in.

Barber was awarded first by the referee but the decision will be contested by the West Emnds, who held that Marshall should have been given the decision when he was the first to make the jump of 5 foot 9 in. after Barber had cleared 5 foot 8 in. after is a matter of the correct interpretation of the rules, and should Marshall be decided the winner the Penman shield will go to the West Ends by four points. Bowe, Langstaff and Archibald were other entries.

RUNNING BROAD JUMP.

1—G. Barber, Toronto Centrals 20 feet 1 1-2 in.
2—M. Langstaff, Toronto West End, 19 feet 10 inches.
3—W. Marshall Toronto West End, 19 feet 6 in.

Barber set up a mark of 20 feet 1 1-2 inches and it was too much for the others.

POLE VAULT.

1—A. Cameron, Toronto Central, 11 feet 2 in.
2—E. Archibald, Toronto West End, 11 feet.
3—M. Langstaff, Toronto West End, 9 feet 6 in.

Cameron sprung a surprise on Archibald in putting him away in the pole vault. Cameron went two inches better. It was a great exhibition between the two.

12 LB. HAMMER THROW.

1—E. Archibald, Toronto West End, 162 feet 5 in.
2—G. Barber, Toronto Central, 94 ft. 7 in.
3—A. Sibley, Toronto W. E., 75 ft. 5 in.

PUTTING 12LB. SHOT.

1—E. Archibald, Toronto West End, 38 feet 2 in.
2—E. Grannery, Toronto West End, 37 feet.
3—F. Bowe, Toronto West End, 35 feet 4 in.

Both these events were new to the majority of the local spectators. Archibald was an easy winner in the Hammer throw, but the shot putting was closer.

440 YARD RUN. BOYS.

1—Chas. Boyle, Orillia, 56 1-5 secs.
2—H. Adams, Toronto West End.
3—R. Anderson, Ottawa.

The Orillia runner ran a pretty ace with a field of eight and his work in the 100 yards for boys, was watched closely.

440 YARDS RUN.

1—A. M. Knox, Toronto Central, 53 seconds.
2—M. Brock, Toronto West End.
3—M. Follinsbee, Toronto West End.

Knox and Brock put up a stiff argument in the sprint for the line and the finish brought the stand to their feet. Wright and Thorley were the other entries.

FIVE MILE RACE.

1—R. Holden, Toronto West End, 28.26 4-5.
2—H. L. Smith, Toronto Central.
3—F. Bowe, Toronto West End.

Tressider, the five mile champion, did not arrive.

Holden shot ahead on the crack of the pistol and was never headed. Out of a field of six only four finished. At the first mile Bowe was a close second, but at the third he had given way to Smith. The three were one two three style at the third, but during the next mile Holden gained a lap on G. Robinson.

Charles Thorpe dropped out after going half the distance and Flowers also quit.

Time—1.5.28 3-5—2.11,7.
Time—3.16.53—4.22.35.
Time—5.28,26 4-5.

100 YARDS, BOYS.

1—Chas. Boyle, Orillia, 10 4-5 sec.
2—W. Flowers, Peterborough.
3—J. Moriarity, Toronto West End.

It was two heats and a final for the boys' 100 yard open. Chas. Boyle took the first heat in 10 4-5, and Flowers the second in 11 secs. The final was close between Boyle and Flowers, the former winning out on a close margin.

Points—Five for first; three for second; one for third.

The 100 yards (boys), the five-mile run and the 100 yards city championship were special events, and not included in the contest for the shield.

NOTES OF THE GAMES.

For the best all round performance George Barber, of the Centrals, captured the gold medal offered by Mayor Morrow. Barber took four firsts and two seconds, for a total of 26 points.

Mr. J. J. McLeod, a former physical director of the local Y.M.C.A., had a busy time between a day as clerk of the course and renewing acquaintances.

To bring together such a large number of athletes is a big undertaking. Circumstances crop up in many cases which compel some to cancel engagements.

The track could have been in better hape, and the green was not altogether to the liking of the men in the other events.

The rain was falling heavily as the Toronto contingent left, and the special train was called off.

HAVELOCK HAPPENINGS

Death Calls—Railway Notes—Personals

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Sept. 3.—The death of Vaun Taylor, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Sager, of town, took place on Wednesday, Aug. 31st. The funeral took place on Thursday to the Maple Grove cemetery. The sympathy of their many friends is extended to the bereaved parents.

RAILWAY NOTES.

The Havelock auxiliary was called to Sharbot Lake on Friday afternoon, where five ballast cars had left the track on the K. and P. railroad.

The Havelock "Standard" staff are taking their annual holidays, and there was no paper published during the past two weeks.

Mr. Alex. Mathison is erecting another residence on Alexander street adjoining that of Mr. George Palmateer.

A well loaded immigrant train passed through here on Friday afternoon.

The passenger traffic on this line has been very heavy since the opening of Toronto exhibition. The west afternoon train has been run in two sections, while the down noon train has been run in two sections as far as Havelock where both were combined. The local between Toronto and Tweed has been carrying many passengers, and as a result has been running late.

Mr. Thomas Dugan, of town, while at work on the ballast train at Sharbot Lake had his left arm struck very forcibly by the handle of the ballast scraper, inflicting a severe bruise, so that he will be unable to work for some time.

TO WORK AGAIN.

Last Wednesday afternoon was the last half holiday for the year for the business places in Havelock. This weekly recreation day affords a chance for the merchant and his clerks to cast off business worries and get away to some of the beautiful streams surrounding Havelock and spend an enjoyable afternoon. The local merchants find they do just as much business with the weekly holiday, and it is likely they will continue the same scheme next year.

STOP SCRATCHING

Just as Long as You Have Dandruff Your Head Will Itch

It's the little microbes that are gnawing down in the hair roots. It may take a long time for these persistent pests to get down to the vital part, but when they do they will destroy the life of the hair in a very short time.

"I write in short that my head was almost running me crazy, and I saw you ad. in the Times-Union. I bought a bottle of Parisian Sage at once and tried it, and in a week I could see that my head was almost well, and my hair was growing wonderfully, and I continued using Parisian Sage, and now my hair is beautiful and everybody admires it. My scalp is always clean." Mrs. S. Dingle, Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 15, 1909.

Parisian Sage, the most delightful hair restorer, is guaranteed by Wm. Madill, druggist, to stop falling hair, to cure dandruff and all diseases of the scalp, or money back. It is the most refreshing hair dressing in the world. Ladies use it extensively because it makes the hair beautiful, soft and luxuriant. 50 cents a bottle at Wm. Madill's, druggist, or charges prepaid, from Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every bottle.

BUYING AN AUTOMOBILE TIRE

You don't buy an Automobile Tire out and out, you buy it upon the understanding that under certain normal conditions of usage it will give you so many thousand miles of service—therefore the actual cost of a tire is not its initial purchase price, plus the cost of tire repairs, during the time you are running your car. Dunlop Automobile Tires give a low average cost per mile, because, besides the quality of the tire, there is a further guarantee of service in the ready willingness of the Dunlop Company to thoroughly satisfy every user of Dunlop Tires.

Exporters sold from $5.60 to $5.65 for steers; heifers, $5.50 to $6.10; bulls, $4.50 to $5.50.

Butchers.

The best butchers' cattle were 20c to 25c per cwt. higher, owing to many heifers of butchers weights being bought for export; prime picked lots of butchers sold at $6 to $6.25; loads of good, $5.60 to $6.12½; medium, $5.25 to $5.50; common, $4.80 to $5.15; cows, $3 to $5.25.

Stockers and Feeders.

Few feeders or stockers on sale; prices were unchanged, but firm.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 5.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, receipts last week were 3075 cattle, 2835 sheep and lambs, 2160 hogs and 750 calves. The supply this morning amounted to 1225 cattle, 1240 sheep and lambs, 1480 hogs and 325 calves. Considering the liberal supplies of cattle that have come forward during the past ten days, of which a large percentage are from the northwest, the tone of the market has remained remarkably steady, and prices show no important change as compared with those of a week ago, which may be attributed to the large increase in the demand from local buyers on account of the much heavier consumption. There has also been a better demand from outside buyers and several carloads were bought for shipment to Quebec and Ottawa, and a few small lots were picked up for export account. Choice steers sold at 6c to 6¼c; good at 5½c to 5¾c; fairly good at 5c to 5¼c; fair at 4½c to 4¾c, and common at 4c to 4¼c per lb. There were a good many cows which brought from 3½c to 5c per lb., as to quality. Bulls for canning purposes sold at $3.35 per cwt. Owing to increased receipts, hog prices were 15c per cwt. lower, as compared with a week ago. The demand from packers was good with sales of selected lots at $9.25 weighed off cars. Some deliveries were made on contracts made last week at $9.40. Lambs were easy on account of liberal supplies and the somewhat limited demand. The crop of lambs this year is much larger than a year ago. Trade was slow at 5½c to 6c per lb. Sheep offerings are limited, and sales of picked lots were made at 4c to 4¼c, and culls at 3½c to 3¾c per lb. The demand for calves continues good at from $3 to $16 each.

At the Canadian Pacific live stock market receipts last week were 2473 cattle for export account, and 1200 cattle, 1600 sheep and lambs, 1820 hogs and 325 calves. Offerings this morning consisted of 800 cattle, 650 sheep and lambs, 125 hogs and 300 calves.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

Veals—Receipts 1300 head; active and steady, $6.50 to $10.75.

Hogs—Receipts 4000 head; active and 10c to 15c higher; heavy, $10.15 to $10.20; mixed, $10.10 to $10.15; yorkers, $9.90 to $10.10; pigs, $9.80 to $9.90; roughs, $8.40 to $8.60; stags, $6.50 to $7.25; dairies, $9.75 to $10.

New York Live Stock.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—Beeves—Receipts 4009; steers slow; general sales 15c to 25c lower; 5 cars unsold; steers, $4.50 to $7.35; bulls, $3.60 to $4.25; cows, $2.25 to $4.25; dressed beef, steady at 8c to 12½c. Liverpool and London cattle markets unchanged; exports none. Calves—Receipts 4550; veals steady; buttermilks, 5c lower; western steady, $3; buttermilks and grassers unsold. Boost For Crops.

Montreal, Sept. 3.—The western wheat crop got another boost, a six million bushel one, too, yesterday when the latest compiled report reached the C.P.R. offices. Frank O. Fowler, secretary of the Northwest Grain Dealers' Association, sent in estimates that bring up the anticipated wheat yield to 106,510,320 bushels. This is estimated on the acreage of 8,453,200 acres returning 12.6 bushels per. The Northwest Grain Dealers' Association is looked upon as one of the most reliable estimaters of the fall crops. The report to the C.P.R. yesterday predicted as follows:

Oats, 4,217,400 acres, at 26.5 bushels per acre, 111,983,000.

Barley, 1,022,000 acres, at 19.1 bushels per acre, 19,520,000.

Flax, 630,000 acres, at 8. per acre, 5,292,000.

Allowed Residents' Privileges.

Albany, N.Y., Sept. 3.—Attorney-General O'Balley yesterday advised Secretary of State Koenig that owners of automobiles, residents of other states, under the laws of which residents of New York State are entitled to freedom from the requirements of registration for limited periods of time, should be allowed the same privileges in this state under the Callan new motor vehicles law.

Export of Halibut.

London, Sept. 3.—Nothing is known at Grimsby of the proposal to export halibut from Newfoundland or of the creation of a great trade between Grimsby and St. John's, which Premier Morris foreshadowed on Tuesday. There is little hope held out there of the success of such a venture, as several similar experiments have failed.

Indians Succumb to Measles.

Quebec, Sept. 3.—An epidemic of measles is reported in various fishing settlements on the north shore, between Natashquan and Harrington Harbor. So far thirteen Indians have succumbed, and the disease has spread to a camp where white men are established.

Winding Up Le Roi Bank.

London, Sept. 3.—Yesterday at an extraordinary meeting of the Le Roi shareholders the resolution passed on Aug. 15 to wind up the company was unanimously confirmed as a special resolution.

Reciprocity the Problem.

London, Sept. 3.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Glasgow Herald says that reciprocity is the main problem of the immediate future in Canadian politics. In solving it, Canadians will study their own interests and will be unswayed by economic dogma or sentiment, which is the only way tariff questions should be handled.

Suicides In Gas Stove.

New York, Sept. 3.—William Hoffman, 35 years old, one of the proprietors of a restaurant on Lennox avenue, committed suicide in an unusual way yesterday, with his head on the oven of the kitchen gas range, four burners of which were open and unlighted.

THE TRIP WAS MADE DESPITE THE WEATHER

The members of the Church of the Sacred Heart were not cheated out of their excursion on Labor Day by wet weather conditions. A surprisingly large number braved the rain and disagreeable atmosphere and although the trip could scarcely be called a grand success owing to the weather still as pleasant a time as possible was spent by all on board. The steamer carried half of her complement of passengers many coming down to the wharf to purchase tickets so that those who took in the trip were not confined to those who had bought tickets during the week.

The steamer went over the lift lock up the canal, and right through to South Beach were a stay for dinner was made.

A trip around the lakes next followed occupying about a couple of hours.

The party reached home early in the evening. Owing to the weather a splendid list of sports had to be withdrawn.

LOCAL LACROSSE TEAM LOST IN OVERTIME

A local picked up team of lacrosse players went down to Campbellford Saturday afternoon and met the team of that town in an exhibition game. The full time score was 4—4, and in the fifteen minutes overtime. Campbellford notched another goal and won out. The contest was a struggle all the way, and the locals looked good to bring home the honors right up to a few minutes of the full time period.

A return game may be pulled off here in the near future.

The Peterborough team was made up of the following—Gilman, Doris, Heffernan, Beland, Donavon, L. McCoy, G. McCoy, Judd, Dobson, Coughlin and Tucker.

ELECTRIC ELEVEN OUT OF RUNNING FOR SHIELD

(Mail & Empire.)

The weather clerk could not have been more unkind than he was on Saturday at the soccer tournament at Scarboro Beach, for the rain came down in sheets just before the first game between Thistles and Peterboro.

The visiting team sprang a surprise on the redoubtable Scots, and held their own until half-time, when the score card read one goal each. In the second half, the locals proved to be in the better condition, and gradually assumed the upper hand, scoring two more goals. Peterboro came back again towards the close of the game, and by means of one of the prettiest pieces of combined play of the day scored a beautiful goal. Try as they would, nothing further resulted, and an interesting game ended in favor of the Thistles by 3 goals to 2.

Peterboro—Carlton, goal; Evans, Farrett, backs; Allen, C. Pagett, Sparrow, halves; Miller, French, Hutchins, Baird, Williams, forwards.

The local team in losing was put out of the running for the People's Shield.

CLOSE OF A BIG SEASON AT THE LAKES

The season is over at the lakes—except for the duck hunters and tenacious fishermen. And a splendid season it has proved from every standpoint.

The weather has been most favorable for the summer visitors who were there on pleasure bent or simply to rest up after the year's grind in the city. And the fishing has been especially good at all points on the lakes the increasing popularity of which are shown by the steadily increasing number of visitors that is pouring in each season.

Points which used to be considered a little remote a couple of years ago are rapidly becoming very popular. Islinda on Buckhorn Lake, which which was practically unknown not long since has been crowded with guests all season and Oak Orchard, Mr. C. Perry Alexander's other summer hotel on Buckhorn Lake is making a bid as one of the best patronized summering places on the Kawartha chain.

Next season Mr. Alexander intends to make Islinda a stag resort for hunters and fishers. He will build cottages as annexes for both hotels.

TOWNS WOULD LIKE BIGGER PROFITS FROM AUTOISTS' FINES

At Meeting of Ontario Municipal Association Will Consider a Petition to the Ontario Government Asking a Larger Share of Money Levied on "Joy Riders."

Toronto, Sept. 7.—A number of resolutions of an important character, in their relations to municipal affairs were presented by the resolution committee at the meeting of the Ontario Municipal Association, which opened in the City Hall yesterday morning. There were almost 40 delegates present, and President George Geddes, mayor of St. Thomas, presided. For the most part the delegates comprise mayors, reeves and city clerks of the Ontario municipalities.

Among the resolutions submitted, and which will be discussed this morning, is one in effect that in consideration of the cost to municipalities of the construction and maintenance of roads and streets and the extent to which they are used in the operation of motor vehicles, the Ontario Government be petitioned to pay over to the said municipalities a just proportion of the amount collected annually in permits and fines imposed in connection with the operation of motor vehicles. This resolution was passed by the Ottawa City Council Aug. 8, and may be endorsed by the association.

W. C. Nickle of Belleville was the mover of a resolution that the association ask for legislation amending the municipal act, giving cities and towns the powers with the assent of the electors, to hold nominations on the last Monday in January and the election on the first Monday in February.

Another resolution, moved by Mayor J. W. Lawrason of Dundas, is that the Good Roads Act be amended so as to require that all streets through towns and villages, not separated from the country, which are a continuation of the roads forming part of the good roads scheme of the county, shall be maintained and kept in repair as a part of the good roads system of the county.

Reeve George S. Henry of York Township submitted a motion proposing an amendment to the registry and land titles act, to provide that plans of property shall not be registered until submitted and approved by municipal councils or county judges, or master of titles, and that no street shall be laid out less than 66 feet wide, no lane less than 20 feet and that parallel streets shall not exceed a distance of 660 feet apart.

It was the general opinion that the best interests of the association could be served by dividing it into the urban and rural divisions, the idea being that greater concentrated effort is needed to thwart the grasping methods of corporations.

WOULD WEAKEN BONDS OF EMPIRE

London, Sept. 7.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Daily Mail, after paying a glowing tribute to Sir Wilfrid Laurier's wonderful hold on the Canadian people, says the pleading of western farmers is mostly on the part of Americans, who desire cheaper terms for American makers of implements, whose views they represent and are urged to represent. "This is a point," it says, "which Sir Wilfrid, having subordinated politics to his philosophy, wholly conceals. He could not, indeed, confess it, but the point is crucial. We welcome Sir Wilfrid Laurier's reiterated words of loyalty to the Empire, but the grant of special concessions to the United States, organized for their fellows by American purchasers of Canadian land, can only weaken the bonds of Empire, and would in the sequel obliterate the southern line, on which Canada's individuality is based."

The Standard points out that tariff commissions are no novelty in Canada. It says: "Sir Wilfrid Laurier's statements of his policy of to-day or to-morrow must be estimated by reference to his whole public career. Does anyone suppose protection is no longer backed by a large majority of Canadians? Though Laurier holds the Cobden Club's medal, yet for 15 years he has held the Premiership without taking a single important step towards freeing Canadian ports."

"SAY, LEND ME A BEAN"

This Seems to Go in New York

"Gentlemen beggars" have made their appearance in Fifth avenue, New York. Dressed in the height of fashion, their clothes well pressed and assuming the air and poise of men of means, they pretend to have left their clubs without taking change with them and make a "touch" with the promise of returning the amount advanced.

One of the beggars admitted that he has made an average of $10 a night at the game.

The polish of the beggar, his apparent sincerity and the fashionable cut and good quality of his clothes, all contribute, in many cases, in convincing the victim that the beggar is a gentleman, and invariably a dollar at the very least is advanced.

WORK ON G.T.P. MAY BE DELAYED

Vancouver, Sept. 7.—That the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway through northern British Columbia may be delayed a couple of years became very apparent to railway men here yesterday, when it became known that no effort would be made to get under contract this year a large section between Aldermere and Tete Jaune Cache. All the rest of the line is now under contract and it was expected that on the present trip that President Hays of the G.T.P. would announce the awarding of the contract.

The reason for the delay is the scarcity of labor, and the deadlock that had arisen between the railway company and the British Columbia Government on the Oriental employment question. Up to the time of his return to Vancouver from Prince Rupert, it is under stood that President Hays intended to award the final contract, but he was met here by the declaration of Contractor J. W. Stewart that he did not care to take up any more work, and that, so far as he was concerned, he would care for further work by building westward from Edmonton, rather than east from Prince Rupert. In order to finish the new transcontinental on time in 1913 it would be necessary to rush work from both ends.

PROSPECTIVE MILLIONAIRE

Chicago, Sept. 7.—Until he actually gets the million dollars which he expects from his grandfather's estate, Harold Donn will remain on his tailor's bench here at $18 a week. The fortune is to come from an estate in Russia bequeathed by Donn's grandfather to his mother, who died nearly ten years ago in England.

The prospective millionaire came to the United States four years ago from Toronto, where he has a wife and four children.

FOUL PLAY SUSPECTED

Ottawa, Sept. 7.—Lying dead in bed, with blood on his face and a pool of blood on the floor, George Beduke was found at 10.30 yesterday morning by Detective Joliat at 44 Elizabeth street. When the detective arrived at the house he found five foreigners in the room, two of whom were asleep in the same bed as the dead man.

The strange fact is that in spite of the blood, no outward signs of violence were noticeable on the body.

The police are investigating and an inquest will be held.

DARING ROBBERY OF SILVER BULLION

Cobalt, Sept. 7.—The most daring robbery ever perpetrated in Northern Ontario occurred Monday night, when 35,000 ounces of silver bullion disappeared from the safe at the Nova Scotia mill. The value of the bullion is roughly $17,500. The silver disappeared between the hours of 10 Monday night and 7 next morning. The entire staff of the provincial police are detailed on the case.

No Airships Over Strassburg.

Strassburg, Germany, Sept. 7—What practically is a complete prohibition for the Zeppelin or other passenger carrying airships to make trips over this city and vicinity has been decreed by the Government. The military feared that foreign passengers might photograph the fortifications and therefore decline to grant landing facilities to the airships.

WINSTON CHURCHILL WOUNDED

London, Sept. 7.—Much curiosity, not unmixed with anxiety, is felt here over a despatch printed in The Manchester Guardian, to the effect that Winston Churchill, Home Secretary, had been wounded in Smyrna.

Churchill, who is taking advantage of the lull in English politics to make a tour of the Orient, was understood to be traveling in Asia Minor, but his exact whereabouts were not known until the receipt of this despatch. The cablegram, which lacks detail, states that Hon. Mr. Churchill was accidentally wounded in the leg.

CHURCH'S RELATIONS DISCUSSED BY HALIFAX BICENTRENAY GATHERING

Bishop Ingram, of London, With Remarkable Force Throws New Life Into an Old Topic—No Effort Should be Made to Enforce a Complete Dogmatic Unity Like the Roman Church.

Halifax, Sept. 7.—While diocesan and parochial and other church problems occupied some of the congress meetings yesterday, it was the relations existing between the Church of England and other churches, its attitude to the unchurched and to the churchless nations that contributed the main topics.

The personality of the Bishop of London, has in this discussion irradiated an influence which all men have felt.

"It is a great responsibility," he said, "to hear two such appeals. As I sat and heard those two impassioned appeals from two such wholehearted men of God, I said to myself, 'I have to answer that at the Judgment Day. And so have you. There is no literary grace about this, but the words burned in."

Most of the day's proceedings were an elaboration in one form or another of this message of personal responsibility.

If appeals could do it, a thousand missionaries would start out next Monday. The Bishop of Glasgow satirized those who see all sorts of good things for other people to do, but never dream of finding a lesson for themselves, and Bishop Ingram put his finger on the same point. "I don't want to have you say, 'We have had some fine inspiring addresses to-day,' as if they only involved other people, and did not involve you. I want to involve you." And he involves them.

He told them that it was God's holy will to convert the world through man and that God was not afraid to face the consequence of His own actions. If man did not do the work, it was not done. If they had not built 240 churches in London in the forty years past, two and a half million people would have no churches. If they were missionaries, they would be red-hot missionaries, wherever they were, at home or abroad, and the red-hot missionaries could not stop until the world was won, as he believed it could be in this generation, and he told how an arid parish desert in East London had blossomed as the rose in seven years.

The good qualities of the heathen were much dwelt on yesterday from various points of view. Canon Tucker canonized the Chinese. They were the most vigorous people in mind and body in the world, thrifty, industrious, loving their parents with a devotion beyond all parallel, and winning the promise of long life in their land. With laws before Moses and psalms before David, and silk when Britons painted their skin, we assumed to look down on this glorious people. China has learned her lesson and by and by wil be able to speak with her enemies in the gate. All the nations were in upheaval, straining and rending themselves in the throes of a renaissance.

ETHEL LENEVE'S CHARGE IN MURDER CASE IS REDUCED

London, Sept. 7.—The charge against Ethel Clare Leneve, co-defendant with Dr. H. H. Crippen, was yesterday reduced to that of being an accessory after the fact. This was announced when the hearing of the pair was resumed in the Bow street police court.

When arrested she was accused of being an accomplice.

Prosecutor Travers Humphreys, who made the announcement, also for the first time gave out the case of the prosecution, declaring that the examination of the remains of Belle Elmore (Mrs. Crippen) showed that there had been a criminal operation on the victim, while the chemical analysis revealed large quantities of hyoscin, one of the most powerful drugs known.

A few days before the death of Belle Elmore, her husband bought five grains of hyoscin, enough to kill forty persons.

The prosecutor charged flatly that Ethel Leneve was Crippen's mistress, and that their relations had aroused the anger of Mrs. Crippen. By this move, the prosecution has advanced its theory of motive.

Application to admit the prisoners to bail was refused, and an adjournment was taken until Thursday.

New testimony will doubtless be elaborated later by the physicians who conducted the post mortem, with the statement of Mrs. Paul Martinetti to the effect that Mrs. Crippen had once shown her a scar on the lower part of the body which had the appearance of being from an old cut. The doctors who examined the body found in the Crippen home, discovered a piece of flesh bearing a similar scar.

All night long crowds surrounded Bow street police court, to get a glimpse of the prisoners when they were taken in yesterday for the continued hearing before Magistrate De Rutzn. At dawn the throng increased and by the time the principals in the most enthralling mystery of a decade were hurried into the building, flanked and led by guards, fully 10,000 were crowded about the court and on the adjacent streets. A heavy detail of police was hard put to it to preserve order. When the prisoners mounted the steps of the building, the crowd surged forward, and several persons were crushed. Four women had to be carried from the danger zone by the police.

The Vermont State election, which was held yesterday, promises a Republican majority, but one reduced far below the safety line.

Some fifty-eight persons, many of them accused of first degree murder in connection with the lynching of a private detective in July, were placed on trial at Newark, Ohio.

DREADED BLACK HAND ACTIVE

New York, Sept. 7.—Activities of the dreaded Black Hand show no diminution, two attempts being made yesterday to destroy the homes of Italians who refused payments to the society. A blackmailing band sought to blow up and burn the house of Frank Mazetetta, a contractor, in Brooklyn, because he would not pay $10,000. Mrs. Mazetetta fled to Europe with her children. Firemen checked the flames in Mazetetta's home, and threw two unexploded bombs out of the window.

Blackhanders ignited a can of explosives against the front door of Giovanni Palmero on East 87th street early yesterday. The fuse burned out without exploding the can. Palmero has received many threatening letters.

LIVED TWO DAYS WITH BROKEN NECK

Ottawa, Sept. 7.—Fred. Foster of Caldwell, Renfrew County, lived for over two days with a broken neck. Early Sunday morning Foster, who was but a young man, was brought to the hospital here with his neck broken between the fourth and fifth vertibrae, and his lower limbs paralyzed, as the result of an accident with runaway horses. An operation was performed, but Fraser died early yesterday morning.

Snowden was riding behind a wagon loaded with big boxes and turned out suddenly right in front of the auto, which struck him squarely. He passed beneath the wheels and was terribly crushed.

BEAT REGULARS ERECTING TENTS

Alton, Eng., Sept. 7.—The Queen's Own of Toronto, on a march of fourteen miles, led the way and set the pace yesterday morning for 8,000 troops in the second division camp, two miles from here. They beat the regulars in putting up tents. The men stood the march well, though there were a few blistered feet.

Captains George Pellatt, Kirkpatrick, Lieuts. Massey and George Gzowsky will remain in Aldershot for some time, owing to a slight attack of influenza. It is not serious, and is due to the change of climate.

EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS OPENS WITH MESSAGE FROM POPE

His Holiness in Letter Confided to Cardinal Vannutelli Gives His Blessing to the Coming Session of Roman Bishops—Bruchesi Replies.

Montreal, Sept. 7.—The formal opening of the 21st International Eucharistic Congress, and the first ever held in the new world, took place here last evening at eight o'clock in St. James' Cathedral, amid extraordinary pomp and display, probably never before seen in any Catholic centre of this continent.

Archbishop Bruchesi made many sacrifices to obtain this signal honor for the Canadian church and for his diocese, but his triumph last evening was sufficiently magnificent to repay this brilliant prelate and probably prince of the church for all he has done.

As hinted in the despatch of Monday evening, the legate in his opening address declared that in future these congresses would probably alternate between the old and new world.

Another important feature was the telegram to the King, and His Majesty's reply.

In answer to a telegram to the Holy Father, the cardinal secretary of state also sent a message of congratulation.

It was a magnificent sight at about eight o'clock, when a hundred bishops and archbishops, headed by Cardinal Vannutelli, the pontificial legate, and Cardinal Logue, beautifully robed in scarlet and gold, left the grand salon of the archbishop's palace, and, coming out to Palace street, entered the cathedral from Dorchester street and proceeded to their respective places in front of the altar railing.

The great cathedral was packed to the doors, and there would have been many thousands more had the vast edifice been large enough to contain them. The legate first delivered his message to the congress, supplementing the same by reading the papal message, which had just arrived from the Vatican. In part the message said:

"By these letters we appoint you our legate, to preside in our name and place at the eucharistic congress of Montreal.

"The mission entrusted to you is in keeping with your piety and rank, and peculiarly calculated to advance the Christian cause. For, by this public manifestation, the eucharistic bread, unhampered by space and division, will bind together the lands which the seas divide, stimulate distant nations to vindicate and proclaim the glory of God, the Saviour, and to honor with due loyalty and submission the centre of Christian unity, to wit, Christ's vicar on earth.

"Consequently, all those matters will be discussed in the congress, whereby the devotion to the august sacrament may be spread and honored more widely, so that, in this wise, the insults heaped upon it may be repaired, the practice of frequent communion revived, and all be convinced that no devotion is more efficacious than this, to link souls together in the bonds of peace and good will, so necessary to Christian and civil society; in fine, that by the writings and the manifold activities employed for this purpose, men may be led to higher and better achievements.

Mgr. Bruchesi's reply was a splendid effort. His grace referred to the modification of the royal declaration, adding that Catholics all over the British Empire would be ever grateful for this latest royal act. The reading of the royal message to the congress created very great enthusiasm, and his grace the Archbishop of Montreal told your correspondent that Catholic hearts were especially grateful to King George for his very prompt message from Balmoral.

A PECULIAR PERVERSION

New York, Sept. 7.—A weakness for babies, white or black, and an admitted inability to pass them without kissing and biting them, landed Elizabeth McGuirk, 35 years old, in the cells last night. Lillian Smothers, a negress, leaving her 18-months-old daughter Ruby in a go-cart, heard it cry, and returned to find teeth marks and blood on its left forearm. Two little girls said that a woman had kissed and bitten the child.

Double Drowning.

Brockville, Sept. 7.—J. J. Letool, a Thiel detective of Ottawa, and A. Brander, typewriter agent, were drowned from a launch five miles east of here yesterday morning.

With their wives and J. O. Clendenning, in charge of the boat, the party left here in the launch Imp, for Ogdensburg, and at a point mentioned the launch capsized. Clendenning managed to save the women and himself.

ANOTHER FIRE AT BRUSSELS EX.

Brussels, Sept. 7.—Widespread consternation was caused by a second fire on the exposition grounds last evening. The fire was discovered in the gallery of the international machinery building, and extinguished without much difficulty.

Last month the exposition was the scene of a conflagration which wiped out a number of buildings, and entailed a loss of $20,000,000.

HIS FOOT WAS NEARLY SEVERED

Kingston, Sept. 7.—Eldred Bennett, Willet's Holme, aged five, was riding on the back of one of three horses attached to a gang plow when the animals ran away. The little fellow fell off and the revolving cutter nearly severed one of his feet. He was brought to the General Hospital, where the flesh was stitched together.

Drowned From Motor Boat.

Chatham, Sept. 7.—Returning from a fishing party near Prairie Siding, Arthur Bury, aged 38, attempted to move to the stern of a motor boat.

In some way he fell overboard and never rose to the surface. It is believed that he was sucked under the boat and possibly hit on the head with the propellor.

The Daily Review

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 7, 1910.

A MAN

Rev. Dr. Langfeldt's sermon on "Labor and Capital" was effective and brief. Dr. Langfeldt is a clergyman. In these few words is consumated an epic. He is human.

GAS WELLS

The despatches tell us that Sir Wilfrid Laurier terminated his western tour at Medicine Hat yesterday.

The despatches likewise tell us that they set fire to a gas well at that place in honor of the Premier's arrival.

And then—when it was properly going—the Premier "concluded his tour."

Well, there's nothing like knowing when one's had enough; and certainly—even with a man like T. M. Macdonald, M.P., of Pictou, N. S., who breathes threats as he goes—it is hard to beat a natural gas well.

Mr. Pugsley should have stayed with the touring party. Then it wouldn't have had to go into retirement—even for a gas well.

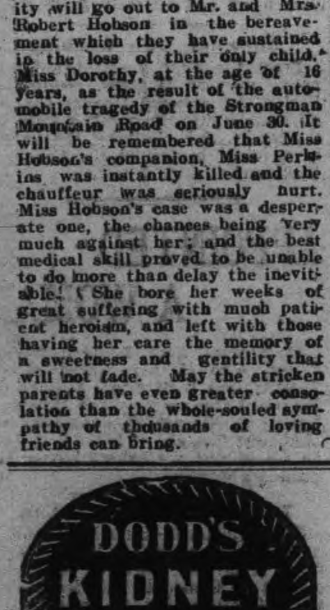
HOLIDAYS

Holidays! Why the exclamation mark, why,—we have too many holidays. They disrupt society. New Years Day comes and very properly we observe it. Then comes Good Friday, and Easter Monday. Good Friday they hold the C.L.A. convention and fight for the presidency of the association. Then Empire Day and its salutes of 21 guns. No sooner have we the taste from our mouths of this, than our Dominion Day stares us in the face. We recover from that and find that we must have a public holiday. We have that, the railways give us excursion rates, the boats also. We also recover from that too and lo! Labor Day majestically stalks forth. Labor Day. Why called by this lowly title? It is the day when labor is crowned. And then on, on to Thanksgiving. And the working man, he paid by the hour, who has no turkey, he is looking for spring even in the bleak fall.

LIFE

Life is an awful thing. How often we regret that we were born. How sorry we are to go. Strangely we come into this world, strangely we go. Solomon said it all when he, in Ecclesiastes, wrote vanity of vanities, all is vanity. Grim vengeance,—well named grim,—seems to take a relentless hold. In an auto and be dashed to death, walking and struck by a car, we are never safe, never sure. Read from the editorial page of the Hamilton Times:

> The sympathy of the community will go out to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hobson in the bereavement which they have sustained in the loss of their only child, Miss Dorothy, at the age of 16 years, as the result of the automobile tragedy of the Strongman Mountain Road on June 30. It will be remembered that Miss Hobson's companion, Miss Perkins, was instantly killed and the chauffeur was seriously hurt. Miss Hobson's case was a desperate one, the chances being very much against her; and the best medical skill proved to be unable to do more than delay the inevitable. She bore her weeks of great suffering with much patient heroism, and left with those having her care the memory of a sweetness and gentility that will not fade. May the stricken parents have even greater consolation than the whole-souled sympathy of thousands of loving friends can bring.



UNCONSCIOUS

The Laurier Government must be conscious of waning power when it tries to bolster up a losing cause by such projects as the building of a railway to Hudson Bay. The Premier and Mr. Graham have both given their word that work on the road will be started as soon as possible, and it is more than likely that millions of borrowed money will shortly be poured into the construction of a line to the shores of that northern sea which is icebound for the greater part of the year. In order to throw a sop to the west which is suffering from the delusion that an outlet to Hudson Bay would solve the problem of speedy transportation of grain from the prairies to the markets of the old land, Sir Wilfrid Laurier has bound himself in such a way to the building of the enterprise that even such a clever political acrobat as he can hardly squirm out of the tight hole. The facts in regard to the navigation of Hudson Bay are very simple. It has been navigated for two hundred years by a certain class of vessels, but this is a very slim peg on which to hang an argument in favor of the expenditure of as much money as will be required to build the railway, provide the necessary terminals, deepen the shallow harbors, and buoy and light the route. At the best the route would only be available for traffic during the light traffic months of the year. It could handle little, if any, of the grain of the west in the year it was grown. The crop would have to be carried nine months before it was shipped and in fact before the new route was able to handle it a fresh crop would be in sight. It is very doubtful if the route would mean any saving in shipping costs. So keen is the competition in shipping now that none but the best and most modern freighters are able to make money. The old boats are rapidly going to the scrap heap because it is cheaper to sell them for old iron than to operate them. Vessels for the Hudson Bay route would have to be specially built and would be available only for the purpose for which they were constructed. The remainder of the nine months of the year, by reason of their peculiar construction they would have to tie up in a British port. Three trips a year would represent their earning capacity. Consequently, to carry grain in them would be three times as expensive as by ships plying on other routes. Then grain men like to have the stuff in which they deal available for shipment whenever the market is advantageous. Would they ship to Fort Churchill on the Hudson Bay, knowing that it must be held there for months? As it is to-day, Buffalo gets a good deal of Canadian grain because it can be held there in storage for shipment by a number of routes. The reasons which may be cited against the practical value of the Hudson's Bay route are countless. It is not a natural trade route in any way except geographically, and it cannot be made one by the present limitations of engineering science.

SIDE LIGHTS

THE STAYERS WHO WIN

(Halifax Herald.)

You don't want to feel discouraged if you're not supremely gifted,
Or to think you'll hit the trash pile when the wheat and chaff are sifted.
If you're not a streak of lightning newly greased and in a hurry
It's no sign you will not get there, so you've little cause to worry.
There are lots of clever fellows who went upward like a rocket,
Who are walking on their uppers, out of cash and out of pocket.
If good luck is slow in coming, it will come in fat, rich layers
To the stayers.
Do you know who's most successful?
It's the chap, who's persevering,
Who has glue upon his fingers that will help him in adhering.
It won't matter if your manner isn't self-assured and chipper,
If you hang right on to something like a bull-pup to a slipepr.
Bear in mind that dogged does it and forever more will do it,
There are few thingst hat will beat you if you only stick right to it.
It is not the fuss and fireworks, n or the hoopers and hoorayers.
It's the stayers.
It's the fellows who are staying when the day is dark and dreary,
It's the fellows who are staying when they're weah and worn and weary,
It's the fellows who are staying, spite of sneering and of frowning,
It's the pluggers and the plodders that will take a lot of downing.
So don't even think of quitting, tho'
the brickbats thick are flying,
When there's not a kick left in you is the time to give up trying.
As a rule you'll find the winners aren't the brilliant grandstand players—
They're the stayers.

KINGSTON GOOD ROADS QUESTION

Kingston Whig.

It seems to be pretty well agreed that the proper step to take now with reference to street paving is to submit the question to the people at the municipal elections next January. It is suggested that the ratepayers should be asked to vote on two road questions—as to whether they want the business streets, over which the street railway passes, paved, and if they favor building macadam roads under the local improvement plan. The Board of Works and the City Council are unable to decide the questions, and the final appeal is to the people. "Trust the People," is the advice of leaders in civic circles.

Several leading merchants have expressed the opinion that the only other way to get street paving is to elect aldermen who will push the matter through. It is possible, they said, that the business men will place candidates in the aldermanic contests next January, who will be pledged to do something to improve the streets of the city—not only the business streets but the streets in general.

Condemns American Regulations.

London, Sept. 7.—Leading export firms in London, Manchester and Paris energetically condemn the new customs regulations governing the admission of foreign textile fabrics into the United States.

Next holiday is Thanksgiving.

Yes; the Merchant Who Advertises Can Afford to Sell for Less

No matter what the article is, unless it should be something whose selling price is as fixed as that of a postage stamp, the merchant who is an advertiser is sure to sell it for less than the merchant who does not advertise.

For he is enabled to count his profits on a large aggregate ofsales—not compelled to secure them from a FEW SALES, for he would then be taxing a small number of customers with the entire support of his business.

A store that makes a net profit of $100 in a day from sales to three hundred customers, is sure to sell to each of those customers on a closer margin of profit than is the non-advertising store that is COMPELLED to make enough to cover a daily expense of $50 out of sales made to fifty customers.

If you are one of the 300 daily customers of the merchant who advertises, you are paying but one three hundredth part of his store-profits on the days you buy. If you are one of the fifty daily customers of the non-advertising merchant, you are paying one fiftieth of his profits.

The Round-Up

A Romance of Arizona

Novelized From Edmund Day's Melodrama

By JOHN MURRAY and MILLS MILLER

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

The owner of Sweetwater ranch, while accepting McKee's account, could not wholly forget the half breed's former evil reputation and was reserved in his reception of the advances of the ex-rustler, who was anxious to curry favor. Warm hearted, impulsive Bud, however, whose fraternal loyalty had increased under his bereavement to the supreme passion of life, took the insinuating half breed into the aching vacancy made by his brother's death. The two became boon companions, to the great detriment of the younger man's morals. McKee had plenty of money, which he spent liberally, gambling and carousing in company with Bud. Polly was wild with indignation at her sweetheart's desertion and savagely upbraided him for his conduct whenever they met, which, as may be inferred, grew less and less frequently. In revenge she made advances to another man who had long "loved her from afar."

"I can't bear to see you go."

This was William Henry Harrison Hoover, sheriff of the county, known as "Slim" Hoover by the humorous propensity of men on the range to give nicknames on the principle of contraries, for he was the fattest man in Pinal county. Slim was one of those fleshy men who have nerves of steel and muscles of iron. A round, boyish face, twinkling blue eyes and flaming red hair gave him an appearance of innocence entirely at variance with his personality. A vein of sentiment made him all the more lovable. His associates—ranchers, men of the plains, soldiers and the owners and frequenters of the frontier barroom—respected him greatly.

"He's square as Slim" was the best recommendation ever given of a man in that region.

Pinal county settlers had made Slim sheriff term after term because he was the one citizen supremely fitted for the place. He had ridden the range and "busted" bronchos before election. After it he hunted wrongdoers. Right was right and wrong was wrong to him. There was no shading in the meaning. All he asked of men was to ride fast, shoot straight and deal squarely in any game. He admitted that murder, horse stealing and branding another man's calves were subjects for the unwritten law. But in his code this law meant death only after a fair trial, with neighbors for a jury. He was not scrupulous that a judge should be present. His duties were ended when he brought in his prisoner.

Hoover's rule had been marked by the taming of bad men in Florence and a truce declared in the guerrilla warfare between the cattlemen and the sheepmen on the range.

Slim's seemingly superfluous flesh was really of great advantage to him. It served as a mask for his remarkable athletic abilities and so lulled the outlaws with whom he had to deal into a false sense of superiority and security.

Slow and lethargic in his ordinary movements, in an emergency he was quick as a panther, never failing to get the drop on his man.

Furthermore, his fat exerted a beneficial influence on his character in keeping him humble minded. Being the most popular man in the county, he would probably have been swollen with vanity had there been any space left vacant for it in his huge frame. He was especially admired by the women, but was at ease only in the company of those who were married. It was his fate to see the few girls of the region, with every one of whom by turns he was in love, grow up to marry each some less diffident wooer.

"Dangnation take it!" he used to say. "I don't git up enough spunk to cut a heifer out o' the herd until somebody else ha roped her an' slapped his brand on to her. Talk about too many irons in the fire! Why, I've only got one, an' it's het up red all the time waitin' fer the right chanct to use it, but somehow I never git it out o' the coals. What's the use, anyhow? Nobody loves a fat man."

Slim was inordinately puffed up by Polly's preference for him, which she showed by all sorts of feminine tyrannies, and he was forced continually to slap his huge paunch to remind himself of what he considered his disabling deformity. "Miss Polly," he would apostrophize the absent lady, "you don't know what a volcano of seethin' fiery love this here mountain of flesh is that you're walkin' over. Some day I'll erupt an' jest eternally calcify you if you don't look out!"

The sheriff took no stock in Buck McKee's professed reformation and was greatly worried over the influence he had acquired over Bud Lane, who had before this been Slim's protege. Accordingly he readily conspired with her to break off the relations between the former outlaw and the young horse wrangler, but thus far had met with no success.

Payson, feeling himself absolved by the death of Dick Lane from all obligations to his friend, began openly to woo Echo Allen, but without presuming upon the revelation of her love for him which she had made at his proposition to go into the desert to Lane's rescue. She responded to his courteous advances as frankly and naturally as a bud opens to the gentle wooing of the April sun. Softened by her grief for Dick as for a departed brother as the flower is by the morning dew, the petals of her affection opened and laid bare her heart of purest gold. The gentle, diffident girl expanded into a glorious woman, conscious of her powers and proud and happy that she was fulfilling the highest function of womanhood—that of loving and aiding with her love a noble man.

Jack Payson, however, failed to get the proper credit for this sudden flowering of Echo's beauty and charm. These were ascribed to her year's schooling in the east, and her proud mother was offended by the way in which she accepted the young ranchman's advances. "You hold yourself too cheap," she said. "It is at least due to the memory of poor Dick Lane," whom, now that he was safely dead, she idealized into a type of perfect manhood, "that you make Jack wait as long as you did him." When Payson reasonably objected to this delay by pointing out that he was fully able to support a wife, as Lane had not been, and proposed, with Echo's assent, six months as the limit of waiting, Mrs. Allen resorted to her old expedient—tears.

"Boohoo! You are going to take away my only daughter!"

The colonel, however, though he had loved Dick Lane as if he were his own son, was delighted to the bottom of his hospitable soul that it was a man not already in the family circle who was to marry Echo, especially when he was a royal fellow like Jack Payson. So he arranged a compromise between the time proposed by Mrs. Allen and that desired by the lovers, and the date of the wedding was fixed nine months ahead.

"It will fall in June," said the old fellow, who knew exactly how to handle his fractious wife, "the month when swell folks back in the east do all their hitchin' up. Why, come to think of it, it was the very month I ran off with you in, though I didn't know then that we was elopin' so strictly accordin' to the book of etikwet."

CHAPTER III.

THE first instinctive thought of a man reveals his innate character; those that follow, the moral nature that he has acquired through environment and circumstances. That Jack Payson was at bottom a good man is shown by his first emotion, which was joy, and his first impulse, which was to impart the glad news to everybody upon receiving the letter from Dick Lane telling that he was alive and soon to come home. He was in his house at the time. Bud Lane had just brought in the packet of mail from Florence and was riding away. Jack uttered a cry of joy which brought the young man back to the door. "What is it?" asked Bud. But Jack had already had time for his damning second thought. He was stunned by the consideration that the promulgation of the news in the letter meant his loss of Echo Allen. He dissembled, though as yet he was not able to tell an outright falsehood:

"It's a letter telling me that I may expect to receive enough money in a month or so to pay off the mortgage. Now your brother's debt needn't trouble you any longer, Bud."

"Whew-w!" whistled Bud. "That's great! Where does it come from?"

"Oh, from an old friend that I lent the money to some time ago. But, say, Bud, there's another matter I want to talk with you about. You've got to shake Buck McKee. I've got it straight that he is the worst man in Arizona territory—yes, worse than an Apache. Why, he has been with Geronimo, torturing and massacring lone prospectors and robbing them of their gold."

"That's a lie, Jack Payson, and you know it!" cried the hot headed young man. "It was Buck McKee who stood by Dick's side and fought the Apaches. And I'll stand by Buck against all the world. Everybody is in a conspiracy against him—Polly and Slim Hoover and you. Why are you so ready now to take a slanderer's word against his? You were keen enough to accept his story when it let you out of going to Dick's rescue and gave you free swing to court his girl. Let me see the name of the snake in the grass that's at the bottom of all this!" And he snatched for the letter in Payson's hand.

The ranchman quickly thrust the missive into his pocket. The injustice of Bud's reflections on his former actions gave to his uneasy conscience just that pretext he desired for justifying his present course. His cause being weak and unworthy, he whipped up his indignation by adopting a high tone and overbearing manner, even demeaning himself by using his position as Bud's employer to crush the younger man. Indeed, at the end of the scene which ensued he had well nigh convinced himself that he had been most ungratefully treated by Bud while sincerely attempting to save the boy from the companionship of a fiend in human guise.

"No matter who told me, young man," he exclaimed. "I got it straight, and you can take it straight from me. You either give up Buck McKee or leave Sweetwater ranch. Snake in the grass!" he cried, working himself up into false passion. "It is you, ungrateful boy, who are sinking the serpent's tooth into the hand that would have helped you. I tell you now that I intended to make you foreman, though Sagebrush Charley is an older and better man. It was for Dick's sake I would have done it."

"No," Bud burst forth, "for your guilty conscience's sake! It would have been to pay for stepping into Dick's place in the heart of a faithless girl. Keep your job. I'm through with you."

And, leaping on his horse, Bud rode furiously back to rejoin Buck McKee in Florence.

Jack Payson's purpose was now cinched to suppress Dick Lane's letter until Echo Allen was irrevocably joined to him in marriage. He argued with himself that she loved him, Jack Payson, yet so loyal was she by nature that if Dick Lane returned before the wedding and claimed her she would sacrifice her love to her sense of duty. This would ruin her life, he reasoned, and he could not permit it. There was honesty in this argument, but he vitiated it by deferring to act upon the suggestion that naturally arose with it: Why, then, not take Jim Allen, Echo's father, to whom her happiness was the chief purpose in life, into confidence in regard to the matter? There will be time enough to tell the colonel before the wedding, he thought. In the meantime something might happen to Dick, and he may never return. He is certain not to get back ahead of his money.

After the time that the note secured by the mortgage fell due the young ranchman had already secured two extensions of it for three months each. He now arranged a third and began negotiating for the sale of some of his cattle to take up the note at the next time of payment. "I can't take the money from Dick," he thought, "even if he does owe it to me, and yet if I refuse it it will be like buying Echo—'paying for stepping into Dick's place,' as Bud expressed it. What to do I don't know. Well, events will decide." And by this favorite reflection of the moral coward Jack Payson marked the lowest depths of his degradation.

That afternoon Payson rode to Allen Hacienda to see Echo and to sound her upon her feelings toward Dick Lane. He wished thoroughly to convince himself that he, Jack Payson, held complete sway over her heart. Perhaps he might dare to put her love to the test and fulfill the trust his friend had imposed on him by giving her Dick's letter.

"That's a lie, Jack Payson!"

Payson overtook Polly riding slowly on her way home from Florence. She barely greeted him. "Has she met Bud, and has he been slurring me?" he thought. He checked his pacing horse to the half trot, half walk, of Polly's mount and, ignoring her incivility, began talking to her.

"Did you see Bud in Florence?"

"Yep. Couldn't help it. Him an' Buck McKee are about the whole of Florence these days."

"Too bad about Bud consorting with that rustler. I've had to fire him for it."

"Fire him? Well you are a good friend! Talk about men's loyalty! If women threw men down that easy you all would go to the bowwows too fast for us to make dog biscuit. Now, I've settled Buck McKee's hash by puttin' Slim Hoover wise to that tongue slittin'. Oh, I'll bring Bud around, all right, all right, even if men that ought to be his friends go back on him."

"But, Pollykins"—

"Don't you girlie me, Jack Payson. I'm a woman, an' I'm goin' to be a married one, too, in spite of all you do to Bud. Yes, sirree, bob! I've set out to make a man of him, an' I'll marry him to do it if he ain't a dollar to his name. But money 'd make it lots quicker an' easier. He was savin' up till he run in with Buck McKee."

A sudden thought struck Payson. Here was a way to dispose of Dick Lane's money when it came.

"All right, Mrs. Bud Lane to be. Promise not to tell Bud, and through you I'll soon make good to him many times over the foreman's wages he's lost. It's money that's coming from an enterprise that his brother and I were partners in, and Bud shall have Dick's share. He's sore on me now, and I can't tell him. Besides, he'd gamble it away before he got it to Buck McKee. Bud isn't strictly ethical in regard to money matters, Polly, and you must manage the exchequer."

"Gee, what funny big words you use, Jack! But I know what you mean—he's too free handed. Well, he'll be savin' as a trade rat until we get our home paid for. An' I'll manage the checker business when we're married. No more poker an' keno for Bud. Thank you, Jack. I always knew you was square."

Polly's sincere praise of his "squareness" was the sharpest thrust possible at Payson's guilty conscience. Well, he resolved to come as near being square and level as he could. He had told half truths to Bud and Polly; he would present the situation to Echo as a possible though not actual one. If Polly were wrong and Echo loved him so much that she would break the word she pledged to Dick Lane, then he would confess all, and they would do what could be done to make it right with the discarded lover.

CROSSED TRACK JUST AHEAD OF THE ENGINE

An apparently sleepy teamster on a load of slabs furnished an explanation of how, in some instances, accidents occur at railway crossings. With his spirited team of horses, he was approaching the G. T. R. crossing, north of Dublin Street on Aylmer about 9 o'clock this morning. The Lakefield train, with engineer Pillips at the throttle, whistled for the Dublin Street crossing and loud enough to be heard blocks away. The teamster, with his head downward, did not pay any attention to the whistle and at this time was fifteen or twenty yards from the Aylmer Street crossing. A passerby woke him up, and the sudden jerk in the reins, caused the horses to plunge forward. The driver was unable to pull them in and they galloped over the track, seconds ahead of the train. At this point, trains do not run very fast, but had the same conditions prevailed in the case of the teamster and his horses, with a fast morning train, a serious accident would be reported.

OCCUPANTS OF BUGGY HAD NARROW ESCAPE

Labor Day afternoon an exciting runaway occurred on Park street, and it is surprising that it was not attended with more serious results to those who were in the buggy at the time.

Mr. Russell Lee and his sister Ada, residing near Jackson Park, in company with their two cousins, were driving out Park street, near McDonnel. The horse, it appeared, took fright at a train that was passing and made a sudden bolt. Russell Lee was thrown out on to the road, but clung pluckily to the lines for some time before they were jerked from his hands.

A little further on his sister and one of the other girls were thrown out, fortunately sustaining no injuries. At the corner of Park and Smith the fourth girl jumped out and in doing so had her wrist hurt and shoulder badly bruised. The horse was caught a few minutes later.

SCHOOL RE-OPENING.

Public School Inspector Mowat reported that the attendance at the schools was ahead of other years, and the reorganizaton would be completed shortly. The King Edward school was likely to be overcrowded, but not to an unmanageable extent. One class was too large, but he hoped for a satisfactory arrangement.

In the South Central and Central one or two forms were congested. In one case the attendance in one form at the Central was 51. At the Central school the doors had been adjusted to open out, and the seats rearranged. The smaller children have been placed on the first floor.

At the West Ward the ceilings have been kalsomined, and the doors changed so that they open out. The furnace and chimney were repaired at the South Central have been placed in the cloak room. Two large slate blackboards have been installed at the Queen Alexandra, and this completes the work at the school, which is now in almost perfect condition.

Repairs have been made to the roof of the East City school and the window fixed at the King Edward.

In the future the Principal of the Collegiate Institute will report to a committee of the whole Board on the results of the High School examinations, and submit such observations and suggestions as may be made by him.

NEW BOOKS.

Principal H. R. H. Kenner wrote reporting a good attendance at the Collegiate and asked regarding the purchase of new books.

In Little Things As Well As Big

For example, let us take the OVEN.

The oven bottom of all sizes is 20 inches deep. This is the actual depth of the oven floor, the part of the oven that is of the most value to you. We do not include an inch or two in the bottom of the oven door.

Measure the oven bottom of other ranges—especially those with swing doors—and see if the ovens come up to this specification

"Peerless Peninsular" is a big, honestly built range—full size—with all the new conveniences of the most expensive steel ranges—and with the durability of cast-iron which is superior to steel in lasting qualities.

"HARMONY", "CONSTANT" and "ADANAC" have the same quality, workmanship and construction as the "Peerless", the difference is only in the outer appearance.

Let us show you all four styles—or write for illustrated booklet. 111

ALD. HICKS OBJECTS TO THE ANONYMOUS "CAW" OF JIM CROW

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—At a meeting of the City Council last night it was decided to employ Mr. Willis Chipman as consulting engineer, he to appoint a resident engineer in connection with the sewer system in the south end.

I therefor emove and second the following;—"That whereas, one Robert Hicks is chairman of the Board of Works, and whereas in the case of other sewer work in Peterborough, he, feeling himself responsible for the proper workmanship of same, objected to any foreman not "known" to him. and whereas the two engineers now to be employed are from outside the city. Be it resolved, that every opportunity be given to the aforesaid Robt. Hicks and the Board of Worthies, of knowing the aforesaid gentleman and of ascertaining whether both or either of them are members of the Roman Catholic church." In case one or the other should be a Catholic, I suggest that the matter be referred to the Board of Works with power to act.

Yours truly,
JIM CROW.

It is a long time since the above letter appeared—July 19th last — but the impression it left on Ald. Hick's mind is as fresh to-day as it ever was—or at least it was at last night's council meeting, when he said he wanted to be heard on the matter and to defend himself against what he styled an unwarranted attack.

The chairman of the Board of Works said that in view of the anonymous attacks on him he thought his position was something like that of the man who was walking along the public highway when three enemies were concealed in bushes and afraid to come in the open and meet him like men. The first hurled a piece of mud at the man on the road, the second a stone and the third a piece of elm bark. He would rather be the man on the road, he said, than the man in hiding.

Ald. Hicks said he had too many friends among people of the Catholic denomination for whom he had a high regard to allow of any discrimination on his part against Catholics and intimated that he acted without fear or favor with regard to Catholics and Protestants alike.

And he knew the writer of that letter.

Anent anonymous letters in general Ald. Hicks read from a pamphlet by the Rev. Dr. O'Brien in which the reverend gentleman attacks them in strong terms and made deprecating remarks concerning the perpetrators of such scurullious and underhand means of attack.

While on the subject of letters Ald. Hicks asked Ald. Phelan if he were willing to give him the name of the man who had informed Ald. Phelan that the price paid by the Board of Works for elm was too high and in connection with the purchase of which a letter was received from one Tudhope, in which the writer stated that he could not get the price for his elm that was paid for the elm bought by the city.

At the time the letter was read in council Ald. Hicks repudiated the statement made by Tudhope, and insinuated that Ald. Phelan and Mr. Tudhope were one and the same person. Ald. Phelan had stated in a Board of Works meeting previous to the council meeting that he had been informed that the price was too high. At the time of the council meeting Ald. Hicks wanted to know the name of the man who had informed Ald. Phelan that the price was too high. Ald. Phelan refused to divulge the name in open council, but gave it to the mayor in confidence and the latter said it was that of a reputable citizen.

Last night Ald. Hicks asked Ald. Phelan if he was prepared to give the name of the man who stated the price was too high claiming that it was only fair to himself that this should be done. Ald Phelan refused to do so however.

He then read a written apology from Ald. Hicks in which the opinion was expressed by the latter that he had been a little hasty in his reflection on the dual personality of Ald. Phelan in connection with the Tudhope matter.

To this Ald. Hicks rep lied that his mind had been made up otherwise owing to developments since he wrote the apology, and stated he had reliable information and could furnish proofs and would be willing to do so.

The letter was as follows;

July 24th, 1910.

H. Phelan, Esq.,
City,

Referring to the statement I made on Monday re my thoughts of the mysterious letter, I feel that I may have done you an injustice in expressing my thoughts without any definite proof. However, that is what I thought at the time and since you state that you know nothing of the writing of the article I tell you frankly I accept your statement as being true and will act accordingly.

I wish to be fair in any controversy and since I believe your statement now it would be only acting with that motive to tell you so.

Sincerely yours,
R. HICKS.

The mayor thought that when one member of the Council made a charge against another member and the accused alderman denied it positively the matter should end there.

PUBLICATIONS FOR CANADIAN SPORTSMEN

The publishing house of W. J. Taylor, Ltd., Woodstock, Ont., issues a series of publications each month which covers the whole ground for the vast and ever increasing multitude interested in outdoor life and recreation. Our people are becoming wiser in matters of health and are learning that the best means of building up vigorous bodies, enabling them to enjoy their lives, is by spending more time in the open air.

To keep acquainted with the different phases of this great movement, spreading in ever widening circles, the pages of Rod and Gun in Canada need to be consulted. The writers for this magazine are men and women too, who have actual experience in the woods and on the waters of Canada and fishing, hunting, camping, canoeing, exploring, mountain climbing are all told about by means of stories of personal experiences and illustrations. In every number something new in geography, geology, natural history, or in bird, animal or fish life is set forth and the publication, in addition to its recreative character, has an educational value by no means to be despised.

A large and growing number of people are interested in motoring by land and water and for them the Motor Magazine of Canada supplies just what they require. The man with a car or a motor boat is given information on points as to which he may need enlightenment, while the technical articles are pleasantly interspersed by stories of trips taken in Canada and much news of interest depicting the rapid growth of the auto and motor boat industries form a strong feature. In Canada, the land of waterways, the motor boat is making great advances, and with good roads the automobile has come to stay. The future of the auto for commercial and farming purposes can scarcely be realized and readers of the Motor Magazine are kept informed of progress in all departments.

The Athletic World, formerly Outdoor Canada, deals authoritatively with athletics in all departments and while giving prominence to Canadian subjects takes a worldwide view of all matters connected with athletics and is thus of the deepest interest to all. Clean, healthy sport is the motto and much is done to advance this ideal in a practical manner.

The subscription price for each of these publications is $1 per annum and favorable rates will be quoted for combinations.

Rain at Winnipeg prevented all outdoor sports on Labor Day.

Housework Made Easy.

It is clearly every woman's duty when the days of summer approach to lighten her domestic labors as much as possible in order that she may enjoy the open air pleasures and so store up strength and health for the comparatively shut in winter days.

One piece house dresses of calico or lawn are nice because they are cool, easily laundered, do not fade and are always becoming.

To keep the house cool and clean in the easiest way we should have bare floors, small rugs which are easily shaken and simple muslin draperies. Many are using double sash curtains at windows for summer, and the effect is quite pretty. The lower curtains are fastened to the sash and so raise with the window, leaving the entire space for air to enter.

Heavyweight sheeting with wide hems all around make dainty bedspreads. They are light and easily laundered.

The kitchen floor may be scrubbed with an ordinary scrub brush fastened to a mop stick, so that one need not get down on hands and knees. Surplus water can be taken up with cloth in another mop stick.

A wise housekeeper keeps a paper over the catch-all pan under the burners of the gas stove and changes it often. That's easier than scouring the pan.

On the sill she keeps a small pot of growing parsley, and she always has green on hand to flavor soup and to decorate the meat platter.

The Pet Cat.

Cats need careful feeding, and it is not generally believed that they can and will (if taught) eat green vegetables. They should be given these in the form of cabbage, cauliflower and asparagus once every day, and that at noon.

Strangely enough, the pet cat's heaviest meal, consisting of four ounces of meat, should be given at night, and it should invariably be run through a chopper. Potatoes are excluded from the diet of all well cared for cats, but sardines are given twice a week and only in cold weather.

Cats have individual tastes that may be gratified within reason. The ordinary American cat—and it is more satisfactory than the Angora—may even be given peaches or currants or cocoanut. These are mentioned because they were the peculiar dainties most liked by a cat of the writer's acquaintance.

All of the cat's milk is boiled and given warm and well diluted, and last, but very important, a daily supply of fresh water and green grass is absolutely necessary.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF SHEEP INDUSTRY IN CANADA

For a number of years it has been evident and it is now a matter of common knowledge that the sheep industry in Canada, particularly as regards the general production of market sheep and of high class wool, has been in an increasingly decadent condition. Not only has the number of sheep owned in the country been gradually lessening but the interest in sheep-growing has itself been on the wane. The census of sheep in Canada reveals the fact that the Dominion as regards the number of sheep kept compares not at all favorably with other great agricultural countries of the world. Indeed, as compared with them it has permitted sheep-raising to become a somewhat insignificant phase of its agriculture, notwithstanding its great adaptability both as regards soil and climate for the growing of mutton and wool. In 1909 according to Agricultural returns there were in the United Kingdom 31,838,833 head of sheep, in the Argentine, 67,211,754 head, in Australia 87,043,266 head, in New Zealand, 23,480,707 head, while the latest returns for Canada place the number at not more than 2,705,390 head. In view of the fact that sheep have not only a direct and primary value through the actual financial returns which they make to their owners, but because they represent as well in themselves a peculiarly important asset in agriculture owing to their ability to increase soil fertility and to check and destroy the growth of weeds upon the land, the situation which the above figures suggest appears to be a rather critical one and one which may well receive careful consideration.

The reasons for the decline in the sheep industry in Canada have been the subject of much comment in various ways and while these need not be discussed in this note it may be well to state that the Live Stock Branch has had its attention very urgently directed toward the present unsatisfactory status of the business and in recognition of its importance to the country generally, has now decided that the time is ripe for the Canadian Government to consider a comprehensive policy and to undertake definite and extended measures likely to operate toward the encouragement, improvement and development of the industry as a whole.

As a preliminary to the adoption of any settled policy and in order that the Live Stock Commissioner may inform himself thoroughly as to the details of the sheep and wool trade in Great Britain and the United States and as to conditions as they actually prevail in Canada, the Minister of Agriculture has authorized the appointment of a committee of two competent men to investigate the sheep situation in general in the three countries named. At the same time, it is the expectation that, without an actual visit, they will gather as much information as possible concerning the trade of the other great sheep producing countries in so far as it may be of interest in the development of the industry in Canada. It has been thought advisable to have this committee consist of, in the first place, a wool expert whose special training has made him familiar with all the technical and practical phases of wool markets and woollen manufacture in the United Kingdom and Canada and in the second place, a capable Canadian sheep breeder whose experience has given him a somewhat extended knowledge of sheep farming in this country. These gentlemen have already been appointed and are at present pursuing their investigations in Great Britain. The personnal of the Committee consists of Mr. W. T. Ritch of Manchester, England; and of Mr. W. A. Dryden of Brooklyn, Canada.

Mr. Ritch though perhaps unknown to the members of the Sheep Breeders' Association has had familiar and honourable relationship with trades people in Canada for a perod of years, having represented while in this country certain English cloth manufacturers whose interests he served efficiently and acceptably. Mr. Ritch's experience has made him thoroughly with the woollen industry in England and Scotland, with the wool markets and manufacturing districts of that country and has besides given him a general knowledge of the woollen trade including that in staple and shoddy articles and in the manufactured product both of England and America. He has visited also in a business capacity Australia and New Zealand and has made careful observations concerning the growing and marketing of wool in these two countries. Combined with his technical knowledge, Mr. Ritch has acquired a practical understanding of the growing and handling of wool on the farm and together with this has evidenced an enthusiastic and intelligent comprehension of what may be expected from the development of the sheep industry in Canada, thus commending himself to the attention of the commissioner in connection with the appointment to the committee. It is felt that Mr. Ritch will be able to place such information at the disposal of the Minister, his officers and of all interested in sheep breeding in this country, as is likely to be particularly valuable in the furtherance of the scheme for the building of the industry which is now in contemplation.

The other members of the committee, Mr. W. A. Dryden, of Brooklin, Ont., is very well known to the stock breeders of Canada. The present owner of Maple Shade has fallen heir to many of the qualities which gave his father so large an influence in his own Province, and although as yet a comparatively young man, has acquired a knowledge of the stockman's art which has already brought him to the fore amongst Canadian breeders. Mr. Dryden's collegiate and agricultural education has been such as to bring him in demand in a more or less public way, and in recent years, he has been about Canada a good deal in connection with judging and other work under the supervision of the Live Stock Branch. Mr. Dryden's judgement is practical and his recognized popularity speaks well for the confidence which may be expected from his fellow breeders in his ability to perform with credit to himself and them, the work which he has now undertaken. In combining the services upon this committee of a practical sheep man with that of a technical expert, the department has reason to believe that the problem of production and of marketing, both as regards wool and mutton, will be studied and discussed in such close relationship, that the results of the enquiry will most successfully serve the purpose for which it is undertaken.

After consultation with the Live Stock Commissioner, the members of the committee have, of course, been allowed the liberty of depending largely upon their own initiative in planning their route and in evolving the details of their investigations. The general procedure will, however, be somewhat as follows;—Mr. Ritch preceded Mr. Dryden to England in order to attend a number of important wool fairs, in progress during August and September. There he will be in close association with wool merchants and with men interested or engaged in the wool trade, in its several branches and will thus be enabled to discuss with them in all its phases the various details of the industry in connection with both home and foreign markets.

Both members of the committee are arranging to be present at the bid late summer and autumn sheep sales which are annually held in the latter part of August, during September and in October. They will visit Smithfield and the larger meat markets of London and of other important cities. It is possible also that they will be present at the annual ram sales at Kelso and at one or two other leading centres. This will bring them into intimate touch with sheep breeders, mutton raisers, dealers, butchers and provision men in all the important localities. It will give them an insight into conditions and methods as they prevail upon the farms throughout the country. It will direct their attention to the system of marketing in operation in every stage of the business. It will furnish them with information concerning prices, profits and as to the extent and nature of the trade, and, in short, give them a knowledge of the great sheep industry of the United Kingdom and of the import trade in dead mutton and lambs. It is hoped that the investigation in Great Britain will put the branch in possession of such information and of such facts and statistics as may enable it to intelligently assist in building up a great Canadian business in the raising of sheep and also in finding a place for the Canadian products of wool and mutton in the commerce of the world.

Returning to Canada, the investigators will visit all the provinces and interview prominent sheep men and manufacturers in order to familiarize themselves with the difficulties, drawbacks and defects in connection with conditions as they now prevail, and which have hitherto operated to retard the advancement of the sheep industry in the country. It is expected that they will gather information as to the injury inflicetd on our agriculture through the decline of interest in sheep raising, that they will take note of the localities, where the growing of sheep could be most easily and profitably encouraged and that, bringing to bear the suggestions gleaned from their general inquiry upon the various phases of the situation as they find it in Canada, they will draft recommendations for the guidance of the commissioner in framing, in the very near future, such a policy as will prove in the best interests of the industry.

If time permits Mr. Ritch and Mr. Dryden will also visit the United States. In many states in the Union, as compared with Canada, almost uniform conditions prevail, particularly as regards the advantages that are possible and which may be derived from an extensive sheep trade. May single states own more sheep than are to be found in the whole of the Dominion and although to the south of the line there may be some discouraging features in the general situation, nevertheless there may be much in the way of suggestion to be learned from that country. Further, trade relationships between the two countries must always be more or less intimate and as the United States, notwithstanding a severe duty, imports annually from Canada a goodly quality of wool, it would seem to be of direct advantage to have some specific information concerning the status of the trade in the former country and also as to its advirability as a future market.

Canada has undoubtedly wonderful possibilities and large opportunities in connection with the development of its sheep population. The present investigations have been undertaken as preliminary to the adoption of a permanent scheme for the encouragement and upbuilding of the industry. In the belief that Canadian agriculture must of necessity suffer severly while sheep remain so few in the country, the Minister and his officers will not be satisfied until statistics show a return of at least ten times the present estimate, and until sheep raising has established itself as a recognized factor in promoting the national prosperity.

FIFTEENTH ANNIVERSARY OF WEDDING CELEBRATED

At their home, 366 Mark street, East City, on Labor Day, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Naish, surrounded by about fifty of their friends, celebrated the fifteenth anniversary of their wedding, and the occasion was a successful and happy one in every particular. At six o'clock the gathering sat down to a well prepared and choice repast, and around the board many reminiscenses associated with the lives of the hosts and their guests were told once again. At its conclusion music was given by an orchestra, and games and songs provided an entertainment enjoyed by all.

Mrs. Naish is a daughter of Mr. Willan, a well-known ex-councillor of Reading, Berks, England, and Mr. Naish is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Naish, of Murray street, city, who came to this country seven years ago. Their family are all in this city, and each is doing well.

The hosts of the evening were the recipients of many beautiful and useful gifts, accompanied with the best wishes for a continuation of prosperity and happiness. An interesting feature of the affair is that Mr. Henry Naish has one son, Walter, and four sons-in-law in the Salvation Army Band here, who played in his home town in far away England. Among the guests of the evening were Mr. and Mrs. Owen Montgomery, of Bridgenorth, and Mr. Palmer, of Cobourg.

Towards the parting hour ice cream and other refreshments were served, and the affair was brought to a close by the hearty singing of Auld Lang Syne and God Save the King.

SERMON ON THE DIGNITY OF WORK

On Sunday evening in St. John's before a large congregation, Canon Davidson dealt with the subject of "Work" in connection with Labour Day. He showed from the Bible that work was a gift of God to man for His good. It's consequent dignity was emphasized by the Saviour's life of constant work among the toilers, much of which was lived in the Carpenter's home at Nazareth. The dignity and duty of hard work was further taught by the Apostles.

THE DUST NUISANCE

New Experiment Tried To-day on Simcoe Street Was Successful

There are several ways of keeping the dust on the streets from accumulating in the eye, or on one's clothing, but the very latest idea has them all beaten. An experiment was tried this afternoon and right in front of the city buildings. It happened like this.

Calcutt's delivery waggon was turning the corner from Water street to Simcoe and a sudden jerk sent a large keg of porter out on to the street. It burst and the contents went flying.

There is no doubt as to the effectiveness in results as far as keeping down the dust goes, but there are several other points about the "preparation" that would not find favor with a local option council.

GREAT CROWD ATTENDS LEVEE OF VANNUTELLI

Papal Legate is Overcome by the Heat and Has to be Taken Out to Get Fresh Air—Prelates Visit Prison and Talk With Men in Jail.

Montreal, Sept. 8.—A tremendous crowd gathered around the Windsor Hotel last night watching the carriages, cabs, taxis and other conveyances depositing their guests and then passing on to join the gradually growing line extending over several blocks. All eyes were watching for Cardinal Vannutelli, and it was with difficulty the police kept the crowd back as they pushed in on the cordon keeping clear the line from the curb to the main entrance of the hotel. When the doors were open the crush became terrible, all pressing toward the door. The heat and pressure became so great that many women had to be passed out by the windows. About 10.30 the cardinal himself was partly overcome, and he had to go outside for a breath of air, returning later and staying beyond the time set for the close of the reception, 11 o'clock.

The cardinal sat surrounded by his suite and the bishops. As the crowd came in they knelt down one by one and kissed the ring of the representative of his holiness the Pope. Then they passed on to be greeted in turn by the Secretary of State, Hon. Chas. Murphy, Archbishop Bruchesi of Montreal, Sir Richard Cartwright, Hon. L. P. Brodeur, Hon. Sydney Fisher and Sir Frederick Borden were also present. Over the door through which the people passed before the cardinal were the Union Jack and the papal colors.

Amid the pomp and splendor of the Eucharistic proceedings, the "little ones" of the community are not forgotten. Archbishop Bruchesi is renowned throughout Canada for many virtues, but for none more than the care and solicitude he has always shown for those unfortunates who at times fill the wards of the jail at Montreal. Twice a year his grace visits this institution.

It surprised none, therefore, when the jail was scheduled yesterday as the first point of call for the cardinal and suite. In preparation for the event the men inmates were gathered in the chapel of the institution, and at 7.30 His Eminence Cardinal Vannutelli, assisted by Archbishop Bruchesi and Mgr. Tampiere, said mass. The distinguished party were received by Sheriff Lemieux and Governor Vallee.

After mass, his eminence addressed the inmates, his kind words being interpreted by his grace of Montreal. He had come, said the cardinal, at the invitation of the archbishop to speak to them. All men are brothers in Jesus Christ, and no man lived who could say he was without fault. He had come to them, blessing them and acting for the holy father, and in the name of Him who said: "He who visits one of those in prison visits Me." Those listening to him could not be present at the grand ceremonies outside, but they could be present in spirit. All men are prisoners on earth until the heavenly Father released them from the valley of tears.

The appropriate words of the distinguished visitor greatly moved those to whom they were addressed.

BRITAIN SUSTAINED IN CHIEF POINTS OF FISHERIES DISPUTE

Right to Make Fishing Regulations Without the Concurrence of U.S. and a Decision That the Three-Mile Limit Shall be Based on Headlands Are Britain's Chief Victories—Both Parties Are Satisfied.

The Hague, Sept. 8.—In the gloomy little chamber of the permanent arbitration court, five judges, who since June 1 have considered the Newfoundland fisheries dispute between Great Britain and the United States, pronounced yesterday afternoon their verdict. The decision gives neither principal a clear cut award, but of the seven questions decided, the tribunal supports the United States in five and Great Britain in the other two.

This decision determines finally the disputes arising from the British-American treaty of 1818, which have caused continuous diplomatic controversies.

The British are pleased with the award because the three-mile limit is based on headlands instead of following the simnuousities of the coast, and in saving the sovereignty by having confirmed Great Britain's right to make reasonable fisheries regulations without the concurrence of the United States. These points are regarded as the most important.

Americans here are satisfied with the verdict, but on question No. 1, the United States has raised certain questions of equity, which will be submitted to a special commission.

This point, upon which Great Britain is also sustained, embodied the question of whether any local law adopted by a British colony must be submitted for approval to any foreign power having a treaty on a similar subject with the Imperial Government.

The provisions of the award apply not only to future legislation by the Imperial Government and the colonies, but require that the existing statutes and regulations to which the Americans have objected be submitted to a commission which shall judge of their reasonableness, necessity and fairness laid down by the tribunal.

In connection with its conclusion that the reasonableness of the fishing regulations must be determined through expert information, the tribunal directs the appointment of a commisison of specialists, and calls upon Great Britain and the United States to designate their commissioners within one month, and appoints as a third commissioner Dr. Hook, scientific adviser of fisheries of the Netherlands.

The court was unanimous on all questions except the fifth, as to which Luis Drago, the member from the Argentine Republic, gave a dissenting opinion, largely supporting American contentions.

The court finds that the claims of Great Britain to a right to prohibit American vessels from employing foreigners, and to impose lighthouse, customs and other duties, are unauthorized by the treaty of 1818.

The tribunal finds that the regulation of the manner, time and implements of fishing which Great Britain or Newfoundland enforces must be reasonable and appropriate, but Great Britain cannot be the sole judge of their reasonableness. In case of disagreement the question must be determined by an impartial tribunal.

On question six, which presented the claim of Great Britain to the right to exclude fishermen from the bays and harbors on the treaty coasts of Newfoundland and the Magdalen Islands, the tribunal declares without qualification in favor of the United States.

On question five, which was decided adversely to the United States, the court followed the strict letter of the British-American treaty, whereby America renounced the right to fish in any bays on non-treaty coasts. The court holds that this renunciation applied to all bays, irrespective of their size, instead of to small bays only, as was contended by the Americans.

Regarding point one, the tribunal holds that the right of Great Britain to make fishing regulations without the consent of America, is inherent in the former's sovereignty, but the exercise of this right must not violate the treaty of 1818 or be so framed as to give the local fishermen an advantage over the Americans.

Satisfaction at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Sept. 8.—The decision in the fisheries case at The Hague is generally regarded here as a distinct victory for the British case.

The establishment of the claim of complete autonomy in framing regulations, so long denied by the United States, is regarded with extreme satisfaction.

In the absence of an official intimation from Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, J. S. Ewart, K.C., Canadian counsel in the case, would express no general opinion on the award. Mr. Ewart spent 18 months in preparing the case and is openly disappointed at the failure of the tribunal to unanimously define the meaning of the word "bay," and expressed a hope that the next award might throw light upon the decision in that regard.

THE MINISTRY OF HEALING

Faith Treatment Discussed by the Anglicans.

Halifax, Sept. 8.—His Lordship of Toronto, Bishop Sweeny, had a large contract proposed to him yesterday afternoon during the board of trade excursion around the harbor given to those attending the Church of England Congress on board the "Lady Laurier." Bishop Worrell submitted a resolution, which was unanimously adopted, that a committee be appointed by the primate to prepare for another congress to be held five years hence. It was generally agreed, and added as a rider that the next congress be held in Toronto, and all who spoke desired that St. Alban's Cathedral be ready for dedication then, as Halifax Cathedral has been on this occasion. A wealthy diocese like Toronto should have no difficulty, it was believed, when such a comparatively small place as Halifax, with its fifty-five thousand, had succeeded.

The closing mass meeting in the cathedral last night was addressed by Rev. Paterson Smyth, on the call to Bible study, Bishop Brent on the call to prayer and Bishop Ingram on the call to service.

The ministry of healing occupied section A during the morning. There were decided differences of opinion, in the absence of experience. A few who had had results, which the medical men questioned, were positive as to the merits of the Emanuel movement, Bishop Perrin, who presided, declared himself in favor of the introduction of an office for the unction of the sick. Rev. Lyman Pierson, Northampton, Mass., was the most enthusiastic supporter. He thought healing might be restored to the ministry. He did not carry the meeting very far with him, and the paper contributed by Sir Dyce Duckworth, St. Bartholomew's Hospital, read by Rev. F. S. Smith, depreciated the whole business, but evidently, as the chairman said, under a misapprehension.

W. HOLMAN HUNT DEAD

Great Father of the Pre-Raphaelite Movement Passes Away.

London, Sept. 8.—William Holman Hunt, celebrated painter, and one of the three founders of the Pre-Raphaelite movement, died here yesterday, aged 83. Holman Hunt began exhibiting his pictures in 1846. Many of the greatest of English paintings are credited to his brush. He received many decorations, among them the Order of Merit.

Toronto, Sept. 8.—The late Holman Hunt's great picture "The Light of the World," was exhibited in Toronto in the O.S.A. gallery several years ago. This painting, which had been recently finished, was an enlarged replica of the original painted in 1852-54, while the artist was still a member of that unique band "The Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood," and it showed all the charm, as well as all the defects of their theories on art. It was freighted with allegory in its smallest detail, most of it quite hidden from ordinary mortals. The picture, "The Shadow of Death," now at the gallery of the Toronto Exhibition, is another example of the artist's peculiar mysticism and mannerisms, one of the theories of Pre-Raphaelites being that every object must be painted with the greatest truth and fidelity to nature, whether important or unimportant. Combined with this was an unconventional realism in the treatment of imaginative subjects.

When an old man of 78, Holman Hunt exhibited his last picture "The Lady of Shalott." He was ranked as one of the foremost painters of religious subjects.

FEARFUL RECORD OF CRIME IN ITALY

Rome, Sept. 8.—One of the most startling reigns of crime in the history of the Black Hand in Italy has come to light in the investigation into the murder at Pallaro, Calabria, of Policeman Guiseppe Rovolino, his wife and six children. Official figures given out yesterday show that in July and August there were 41 murders in the Pallaro district, 78 woundings, 30 bomb explosions, six kidnappings, and innumerable blackmailings.

A Cloak for Smuggling.

Windsor, Sept. 8.—Windsor will likely impose a very heavy license on Chinese laundries in the city. Many laundries are believed to be nothing less than places of refuge for birds of passage awaiting an opportunity to be smuggled into the United States at this point.

PAID THE PRICE OF PESSIMISM

Winnipeg, Sept. 8.—Up to the present 9,500 farm laborers have been brought into the west from eastern provinces by the C.P.R. Up to this time last year the number exceeded 20,000. The cause of the falling off is attributed by the C.P.R. officials to the fact that farmers, during the early part of the season, estimated that their crops this year would not be up to the standard of last year. On these grounds they did not make application early in the season for men.

It is estimated that 10,000 men and more are needed in order that the wheat growers may have sufficient help in completing the harvesting of the crops.

QUEEN'S IS EXPANDING

Kingston, Sept. 8.—Queen's University will open September 28, and it is expected that 1,700 students will register. An attendance of 2,000 is looked for in three years. The staffs of the various faculties have been increased, but several assistants are necessary in arts. Labor strikes prevent the opening of the chemistry building this season.

Suffering from a fractured skull, James Campsail, a miner, is in the General Hospital, and will likely die. While at work in the Feldspar Mine at Verona, a piece of rock fell on his head.

Called to Windsor.

Windsor, Sept. 8.—Rev. Arthur Carlisle, rector of Holy Trinity Church, Lucan, has accepted a call to All Saints' Church in Windsor, to succeed Rev. F. A. H. Chadwick, who went to Vancouver a short time ago.

Mackenzie King at The Hague.

The Hague, Sept. 8.—The International Congress of Social and Industrial Insurance is in session here. W. L. Mackenzie King, Canadian Minister of Labor, is the representative from Canada.

LAUNDRYMAN CONVICTED

Whitby, Sept. 8.—Police Magistrate Harper found Charley Soo of the local Chinese laundry guilty of keeping a disorderly house, as a result of a raid a week ago by Chief Jamieson for opium smoking. The others implicated are George W. Paradis, Oshawa, and E. D. Finlayson, Toronto, as frequenters, and these two, with Emma Ocamb, Toronto, with conspiracy to abduct Edna Frink, Oshawa, were sent up for trial at the next criminal court. All but Finlayson were bailed out.

TO SUSPEND GOLD COINAGE

Washington, Sept. 8.—Gold coinage will be suspended in the United States for an indefinite period if present plans are adopted by the Treasury Department. By the substitution of gold certificates for all bullion turned into the mint $300,000 to $500,000 a year will be saved. It has been found that foreign markets to save expense to themselves use U. S. gold to settle commercial balances.

LOOKS BLACK FOR CRIPPEN

London, Sept. 8.—Ethel Leneve has confessed to all that she knows concerning the fate of Belle Elmore Crippen. When the preliminary hearing of the prisoners is continued, Miss Leneve's confession, which is in affidavit form, will be presented as the principal evidence of the prosecution. It is understood that Mr. Thomas Humphreys, who is conducting the prosecution, will then consent to have the girl released on bail, provided she can find a bondsman.

When the charge of murder against the girl was reduced to one of being an accessory after the fact, it became evident that Miss Leneve was being approached. If, as now seems certain, she consents to turn King's evidence, she will escape with nominal punishment. If, however, she should be found guilty of being an accessory after the fact, she would be liable to be hanged, though the sentence in such case is usually twenty years.

With the girl's testimony thrown into the balance against him, the case looks black for Crippen.

WITNESSES SWEAR G.T.R. TRAIN HAD NO TAIL LIGHTS

Inquest Into Wreck on Chicago Train at Durand, Elicits Evidence to the Effect That Brakeman Did Not Know His Work.

Durand, Mich., Sept. 8.—The inquest into the wreck on the Grand Trunk at Duffield, four miles east of here, on Aug. 25, in which nine passengers, many of them Canadians, lost their lives, was resumed here yesterday. Both the state and the railway company were represented by an imposing array of legal talent.

Attorney-General Franz Kuhn, Deputy Attorney-General Chase, and all the members of the Michigan Railway Commission were in attendance for the people, while Harrison Geer, general counsel for the Grand Trunk, and a host of lesser officials, were on hand to look after the railway's interests.

Twenty-seven witnesses are yet to be examined, and, although both sides are anxious to finish, but ten of these were heard up to 6 o'clock, when an adjournment was taken until this morning.

Yesterday's testimony could hardly be considered as helping the railway's case; rather was it weakened, because of the fact that mature and disinterested witnesses stated positively that no tail lights were shown by No. 14 when she pulled out of Durand on the night of Aug. 24.

One witness, Herbert Bixby of Flint, who was a passenger on No. 14, testified that when the train came to a stop he put his head out of the window to see what was delaying it. While looking he saw No. 4 start out from Durand station, and took his head in just as the crash came. He heard no torpedo explode.

Commissioner Scully, in cross-examination of several witnesses, started out on a new tack, by demanding of those who testified, as to whether their expenses while at Durand were not being paid by the Grand Trunk. Miss Hazel Felton admitted that she "understood the company would take care of all that."

Samuel Hawkinson of Palisade, Mich., gave some rather important evidence. He was on train 14, and when it stopped for repairs to the engine Hawkinson got out and sat on the bank near by. He saw Brakeman Graham go some 350 feet back with a red lantern in his hand, but said no attempt was made to signal with it.

"He just stood still," the witness said. When No. 4 was a short distance away the red light was waved a few times frantically, and then the train swept by and the collision followed. Hawkinson was of the opinion that if the engineer of the on-coming train had shut off steam as soon as he caught sight of the danger signal, he might have avoided hitting No. 14 ahead. Witness saw only one fire extinguisher on the ground, and that could not be used, being out of order.

A. B. Emmons, another traveler, said he was sure No. 14 carried no tail lights, as he had watched her pull out of the station here and the absence of lights excited his interest. Later, when he heard of the wreck he recalled the absence of rear lights.

Charles Libbey, a gate tender for the Grand Trunk here, testified to having seen No. 14 pull out with the usual tail lights "sitting on the rear platform, instead of being on the hooks at the side of the car, as they should have been."

Brockville, Sept. 8.—The bodies of J. J. Letoile and N. C. Brander, the victims of Tuesday's motor boat accident, were taken from the St. Lawrence yesterday afternoon, in close proximity to where the craft foundered in the gale. Letoile's body will be shipped to Ottawa, and Brander's to St. Paul, Minn.

Inspector Smith of the Thiel Agency has arrived in town to take up the unfinished work of Detective Letoile in the matter of the contemplated prosecutions arising out of the riot at the G.T.R. depot during the strike.

CRIPPEN NERVOUS

The Evidence on Hyoscin Poison Seems to Have Scared the Alleged Wife Butcher--The Doctor Used Drug as a Sedative Sometimes--Drug Clerk Testifies.

Special to the Review.

London, Eng., Sept. 8.—Dr. H. Crippen, when arraigned in the police court to-day, showed he had lost the self-possession which characterized him on his previous appearance. This, apparently, being the result of the evidence given at Tuesday's hearing, regarding the discovery of hyoscin poison in the remains of the woman, supposed to be his wife, Belle Elmore.

Harold Kirby, a chemist's clerk, testified to selling five grains of hyoscin to Crippen on January 19th, but admitted the doctor had frequently purchased the poison, explaining he used it as a sedative for his nerves.

Mrs. Smythson, of Brixton, told of seeing Miss Leneve wearing a brooch formerly belonging to Mrs. Crippen. She also said Crippen told her his wife had died while on her way to the United States. Mrs. Harrison, also of Brixton, told of recognizing a dressing jacket found among Miss Leneve's affects as similar to one Mrs. Crippen had worn. Inspector Dew also gave evidence.

Leading members of the church say they will withdraw and start another church if the trustees obey the mandate of the Baptist Association.

OIL ON THE THOROUGHFARE

This morning the east side of George street received its baptism of oil. There is a fragrance in the air that suggests disinfectants. It is a good, healthy smell, though not alluring. It will be with us for a few days. No extra charge for the aroma.

In this first attempt we have a fine illustration of how not to do things. All the crossings have been bathed with the oil. Concrete does not absorb. The oil is there, to be picked up by the feet of pedestrians and trotted into stores, offices and homes.

Now, why should a small chore be done so carelessly and with want of thought. No householder would do the same. He would care for the home authorities and use discretion. The oil should be put on in some other way, and by hand, that the crossings be spared. It would not cost much for the extra labor, and the reviling would cease.

The west side of the street shouts over to the east side, "How do you like it?" The means may justify the end. The immediate end is soiled floors, irate merchants and angry women. Could not some one with some common sense have helped to avoid these troubles? There's some red tape somewhere that ought to be broken before more oil is spilled. Oil is supposed to lubricate—here it will only irritate if gone on with as it was this morning.

POLITICAL NECESSITIES

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's troubles in the west have had the effect of forcing a discussion on the question of free-trade versus protection; and this discussion has had the effect of drawing the Globe out into the open. The Globe for years has been preaching free trade and supporting a strongly protectionist government, and has contrived to manage this running with the hare and hunting with the hounds with an air of superior virtue peculiarly its own. Of late, however, various Conservative journals have been drawing attention to this insincerity, and the Globe has been obliged to try to justify its inconsistency.

Driven into a corner, the Globe's plea in effect is, that it has been, and is, doing evil that good may come. The good that is to come is simply the retention of office by the Liberal party. If it frankly stood by its convictions and insisted on free trade the Liberal party would be defeated and the Conservatives would be returned to power. Therefore, the Globe follows its alleged principals.

Here are the Globe's own words;—"The dominant sentiment in Canada to-day would not warrant the Liberal Government in going to the country on a free trade policy. . . . . . Political necessities are stronger than the economic."

And again it says;—"An appeal to the country on the sole issue of absolute free trade would, under present conditions, mean defeat for a Liberal Government."

Office, that's the thing! Office at any cost! Where's the profit in making sacrifices for principle? Why be a home for lost causes, be they never so noble?

People who desire lower tariff accordingly are given thoroughly to understand that there is no hope for any substantial lowering of the tariff. The Globe thinks, as a matter of theory, that the tariff should be lowered, but it knows and admits that the Laurier Government does not intend to grant lower tariff, and for sake of office the Globe supports the Government, which it knows to be protectionist. The average man will agree that this is partisanship run mad—or rather, run to sheer dishonesty.

The Globe insists that the return of the Conservatives to office would mean a much higher tariff. The indications point all the other way. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and not Mr Borden, is in alliance with the trusts and corporations. The Premier, and not the Opposition leader, has bounced the iron and steel trade to the extent of upwards of a million dollars a year. If the Laurier Government is sustained at the next general election it will be with the aid of the combines and corporations which he has favored.

SIR WILFRID FORGOT

Sir Wilfrid Laurier at Vancouver described his position on Oriental immegration as highly statesmanlike; and being able to make his own selection of the facts, he managed to draw a very pretty picture of prudent and broad minded diplomacy. Just about the same time at Truro Mr. Borden gave a statement of the real history of the question which mentions a great many facts that Sir Wilfrid Laurier somehow forgot to include in his speech. He said;

"In 1894 Japan negotiated treaties with Great Britain and the United States. They were in practically the same terms with a few important exceptions. The British treaty permitted unrestricted immigration from Japan, but the United States treaty reserved the right to enact laws with respect to laborers coming from Japan to that country.

"Canada had the right to accede to the treaty or to decline to.

"There was then no general apprehension on the subject of immigration from Japan, but the Conservatives then in power foresaw that unrestricted immigration from that country might become a source of menace to Canada. By order-in-council, August 3rd, 1895, the Conservative Government refused to accede to the treaty except upon the condition that we should retain full control of immigration, not only of laborers, but of artisans from Japan.

"On February 7th, 1893, Japan agreed to Canada's proposal restricting laborers, and on October 8th, 1896, Japan finally agreed that Canada should also control the immigration of artisans; but in the meantime, July 1896, the present Government came into power. At first they declined to accept the treaty on the ground that it would restrict the fiscal freedom of Canada. Between 1896 and 1905 warnings as to the danger of immigration from Japan were conveyed to the Government by labor organizations, by royal commissions, and by representations from people of British Columbia. In 1905 the Laurier Government suddenly concluded that Canada should become a party to the treaty and communicated this conclusion to the British Government. The British authorities immediately reminded the Lurier Government of the modification insisted on by the Liberal-Conservative Government in 1895, and enquired whether Canada proposed to stand by that policy.

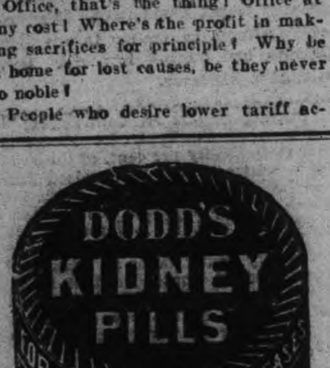
"This warning was first given by the British government on 14th July, 1905, and was repeated on 6th September, 1905, but on the 25th of September the government determined that Canada should assent to and be bound by the treaty absolutely and without reserve.

"Canada thus surrendered all control of the immigration of laborers and artizans from Japan.

"I need not dwell upon the subsequent results. Eventually through the aid and intervention of the British government a temporary arrangement has been arrived at by which the Japanese government undertakes to exercise over the emigration of laborers and artisans to Canada, the control which ought to be within the power of our own government and Parliament.

"The Conservative policy as announced by resolution in Parliament, declared that Canada should not enter into or accede to any treaty which deprived the Canadian Parliament of the control of immigration into this country.

"And while expressing profound appreciation of the friendly intentions and courteous assurances of the Japanese government and while declaring its sincere desire for the most cordial relations with the Japanese people, the Conservative opposition nevertheless recorded its strong protest against a policy under which our wage earning population cannot be protected from destructive invading competition except by entreating the forbearance and aid of a foreign government."



ERITORIAL NOTES

Out on the Pacific Coast they have a new name for the naval force which the Laurier Government is establishing. The New Westminster 'British Columbian' calls it "the get-away navy."

It seems that the ships of the Laurier navy are to be described as "H.M.C.S." These letters signify "His Majesty's Canadian Ship." The British war ships are styled H.M.S. What does the addition of the "C" amount to? To this, that if a ship is "H.M.S." she will fight any enemy of the British Empire the instant war begins; whereas, if she is "H.M.C.S" she must not fight, no matter how great the danger to the Empire, until she has received word of the passing of an order-in-council at Ottawa. That is what the addition of the word "Canadian" means.

On account of the increased receipts of hogs at this market, a weaker feeling prevailed, and prices declined 25c per 100 lbs. Sales of selected lots were made at $9 to $9.25 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars. The market for sheep was also weaker, and prices ruled lower under a fair demand, at 3½c to 4c per lb. Lambs were steady, and sold well at 5¾c to 6c per lb. The trade in calves was active at prices ranging from $3 to $12 each, as to size and quality.

At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock were 525 cattle, 425 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 235 calves. Prices realized were much the same as those quoted above, with the exception of hogs, which were stronger and 25c per 100 lbs. higher than Monday, with sales of selected lots at $9.50 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

A Standard of Pronunciation.

London, Sept. 8.—At the British Association, Wesley Mills, formerly of McGill, expressed the opinion that some standard pronunciation should be established, particularly with regard to the use of the vowel and the vowel's relation to certain consonants. A standard might be registered on a gramaphone, with an imperial body making recommendations on the subject. His views met with no acceptance.

London, Ont., celebrated Labor Day with a big procession in which 2,000 men took part.

The Round-Up

A Romance of Arizona

Novelized From Edmund Day's Melodrama

By JOHN MURRAY and MILLS MILLER

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

Echo, observing from the window who was Polly's companion, ran out to Jack, with a cry of joy. He looked meaningly at Polly. She said: "Oh, give me your bridle! I know how many's a crowd." Jack leaped to the ground and took Echo in his arms, while Polly rode off with the horses to the corral, singing significantly:

"Spoon, spoon, spoon,
While the dish ran away with the spoon."

Jack and Echo embraced clingingly and kissed lingeringly. "It takes a crazy old song like that to express how foolish we lovers are," said Jack. "Why, I feel that I could outfiddle the cat, outjump the cow, outlaugh the dog and start an elopement that would knock the performance of the tableware as silly as—well, as I am talking now. I'm living in a dream—a midsummer night's dream such as you were reading to me."

"The lunatic, the lover and the poet," quoted Echo suggestively.

Dusk was falling. From the bunk house rose the tinkling notes of a mandolin. After a few preliminary chords the player, a Mexican, began a love song in Spanish. The distant chimes of mission bells sounded softly on the evening air.

A lovesong in Spanish.

Jack and Echo sat down upon the steps of the piazza. Jack continued the strain of his thought, but in a more serious vein:

"Echo, I'm so happy that I am frightened."

"Frightened?" she asked wonderingly.

"Yes, scared—downright scared," he answered. "I reckon I'm like an Indian. An Indian doesn't believe it's good medicine to let the gods know he's big happy, for there's the thunder bird"—

"The thunder bird?"

"The evil spirit of the storm," continued Jack. "When the thunder bird hears a fellow saying he's big happy he sends him bad luck."

Echo laid her hand softly on the mouth of her sweetheart. "We won't spoil our happiness, then, by talking about it. We will just feel it—just be it."

She laid her head upon Jack's knee. He placed his arm lightly, but protectingly, over her shoulder. They sat in silence listening to the Mexican's love song. Finally Jack bent over and whispered gently in her ear:

"Softly, so the thunder bird won't hear, Echo, tell me you love me; that you love only me; that you will always love me, no matter what shall happen; that you never loved until you loved me."

Echo sat upright with a start. "What do you mean?" she exclaimed. "Of course I love you and you only, but the future and the past are beyond our control. Unless you know of something that is going to happen which may mar our love your question is silly, not at all like your Mother Goose nonsense—that was dear. And, as for the past, you mean Dick Lane."

"Yes, I mean Dick Lane," confessed Payson in a subdued tone. "I am jealous of him—that is, of even his memory."

"That is not like Jack Payson. What has come over you? It is the shadow of your thunder bird. You know what my feeling was for Dick Lane and what it is, for it remains the same, the only difference being that now I know it never was love. Even if it were he is dead, and I love you, Jack—you alone. Oh, how you shame me by forcing me to speak of such things! I have tried to put poor Dick out of my mind, for every time I think of him it is with a wicked joy that he is dead, that he cannot come home to claim me as his wife. Oh, Jack, Jack, I didn't think it of you!"

And the girl laid her face within her hands on her lover's knee and burst into a fit of sobbing.

Jack Payson shut his teeth.

"Well, since I have lowered myself so far in your esteem and since your mind is already sinning against Dick Lane we might as well go on and settle this matter. I promise I will not mention it again. But I, too, have troubles of the mind. I am as I am, and you ought to know it. I said I was jealous of Dick Lane's memory. It is more. I am jealous of Dick Lane himself. If he should return, would you leave me and go with him—as his wife?"

Again she sat upright. By a strong effort she controlled her sobbing.

"The man I admired does not deserve an answer, but the child he has proved himself to be and whom I cannot help loving shall have it. Yes; if Dick Lane returns true to his promise I shall be true to mine."

She arose and went into the house. Payson rode homeward through the starlight consumed by torturing jealousy. He now had no thought of confiding in Jim Allen. He regretted that he had touched so dangerously near the subject of Dick Lane's return in talking to Bud and Polly. His burning desire was to be safely married to Echo Allen before the inevitable return of her former lover.

"Fool that I was not to ask her one more question. Would she forgive her husband where she would not forgive her lover? What will she think of me when all is discovered, as it surely will be? Well, I must take my chances. Events will decide."

On his return to Sweetwater ranch he put the place in charge of his new foreman, Sagebrush Charley, and went out to a hunting cabin he had built in the Tortilla mountains. Here he fought the problem over with his conscience—and his selfishness won. He returned, fixed in his decision to suppress Dick Lane's letter and to go ahead with the marriage.

CHAPTER IV.

Riding hard into Florence from Sweetwater ranch, Bud Lane hunted up Buck McKee at his favorite gambling joint and in a white heat of indignation informed him in detail of everything that had passed between Payson and himself. At once McKee inferred that the writer of the letter was none other than Dick Lane. Realizing that Payson was already informed of his villainy and that in a very short time Dick Lane himself would make his appearance on the Sweetwater, the half breed concluded to make a bold move while he yet retained the confidence of Bud.

"Bud," he said, "I know the man who is sendin' the money to Payson. It's Dick, yer brother."

"But," stammered Bud, his brain whirling, "but if that's so you lied about the Apaches killing him—and you—why, you—must have been the renegade, the devil who tortured prospectors."

"Why, Bud, Dick never wrote all that dime novel nonsense about the man who stood by him to—well, not the very last, fer Dick has managed somehow to pull through. Probably he wuz saved by the rurales that wuz chasin' the band that rounded us up. No; it's Payson, Jack Payson, that made up that pack uv lies jes' to keep you away from me, the man that wuz last with Dick, an' so may get on to Jack's game an' block it."

"Game! What game?" asked Bud, bewildered.

"Why, you told me it yerself—to marry Dick's girl an' live on Dick's hard earned money."

"But Dick borrowed the three thousand of Jack," objected Bud.

"Well, the dollars he borrowed have all gone, hain't they? And the money he's sendin' back Dick dug out uv the ground by hard work, didn't he? Leastaways, Payson hadn't ort ta use the money to rope in Dick's girl. It ort to be kep' from him, anyhow, till Dick comes on the ground his own self. That 'd hold up the weddin', all right, if I know Josephine. It 'd be easy to steer her into refusin' to let Echo go into a mortgiged home."

Simple minded Bud readily accepted the wily half breed's explanations and surmises and fell into the trap he was preparing. This was to hold up the express agent and rob him of the money Payson was expecting, on securing which it was McKee's intention to flee the country before Dick Lane returned to denounce him. To ascertain just when the money came into the agent's hands and to act as a cover in the robbery itself an accomplice was needed. For this purpose no man in all the Sweetwater region was better adapted than Bud Lane. Frank and friendly with every one, he would be trusted by the most suspicious and cautious official in Pinal county. The fact that he had chosen Buck McKee as an associate had already gone far to rehabilitate this former "bad man" in the good graces of the community. Under cover of this friendship McKee hoped to escape suspicion of any kind in the homicide he contemplated.

For it was murder—foul, unprovoked murder—that was in the black soul of the half breed. He intended to incriminate Bud so deeply as to put it beyond all thought that he would confess.

THE BEST REMEDY

For Women—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Belleville, Ont.—"I was so weak and worn out from a female weakness that I concluded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took several bottles of it, and I gained strength so rapidly that it seemed to make a new woman of me. I can do as good a day's work as I ever did. I sincerely bless the day that I made up my mind to take your medicine for female weakness, and I am exceedingly grateful to you for your kind letters, as I certainly profited by them. I give you permission to publish this any time you wish."—Mrs. ALBERT WICKETT, Belleville, Ontario, Canada.

Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will cure female weakness and so successfully carry women through the Change of Life as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs.

For 30 years it has been curing women from the worst forms of female ills—inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and nervous prostration.

If you want special advice write for it to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

Young Lane, passionately loyal to his brother, was ready for anything that would delay Payson's marriage to Echo Allen. Together with the wild joy that sprang up in his heart at the thought that his brother was alive was intwined a violent hatred against his former employer. In the fierce turbulence within his soul, generated by the meeting of these great emotions, he was impelled to enter upon a mad debauch, in which McKee abetted and joined him.

Filling up on bad whisky, they rode through the streets of Florence yelling and shooting their guns like crazy men. It was while they were engaged in this spectacular exhibition of horsemanship, gun play and vocalization that Bud's sweetheart rode into town to execute some commissions in preparation for Echo Allen's wedding. Already "blue" over the thought that her own wedding was far in the dim future, poor Polly was cast into the depths of despair and disgust by the drunken riot in which her prospective husband was indulging with her particular aversion, the cruel, calf torturing half breed, McKee. Thoroughly mortified, she slipped out of town by a side street and moodily rode back to Allen Hacienda.

After the debauch was over and the merry, mad devil of nervous excitement was succeeded by the brooding demon of nervous depression McKee broached to Bud the idea of robbing the express agent of the money coming to Payson. This fell in readily with the young man's revengeful mood, and he unreservedly placed himself under the half breed's orders.

In accordance with these, Bud hung about the railroad station a great deal, cultivating the friendship of Terrill, the agent. "Ole Man" Terrill, as he was called, although he was a vigorous specimen of manhood on the underside of sixty, was ticket and freight agent, express messenger and telegraph operator—in fact, the entire bureau of transportation and communication—at Florence station. Bud frankly told him he was out of a job and had indeed decided, in view of his coming marriage, to give up horse wrangling for some vocation of a more elevating character. So Terrill let him help about the station, chiefly in the clerical work. While so engaged Bud learned that a package valued at $3,000 was expected upon a certain train. Although no consignee was mentioned, the fact that the amount tallied exactly with the sum Payson was expecting caused him to conclude it was Dick's repayment of his loan. Accordingly he informed McKee that the time they were awaiting had arrived.

Florence had grown up as a settlement about a spring of water some time before the advent of the railroad. Builders of the line got into trouble with the inhabitants and in revenge located the station half a mile away from the spring, thinking new settlers would come to them. In this they were disappointed. The point was an isolated one and the station a deserted spot between trains.

Eastward and westward the single track of railroad drifted to shimmering points on the horizon. To the south dreary wastes of sand glistening white under the burnished sun and crowned with clumps of grayish green sagebrush stretched to an encircling rim of hills. Cacti and yucca palms broke the monotony of the roll of the plains to the uplands.

Sahuaros towered over the low station, which was built in the style of the old Spanish missions. Its red roof flared above the purple shadows cast by its walls. In the fathomless blue above a buzzard sailed majestically down an air current and hovered motionless over the lonely outpost of civilization.

Within the station a telegraph sounder chattered and chirruped. "Ole Man" Terrill was at the instrument. His duties were over for the forenoon, the eastbound express, which, with the westbound, composed the only trains that traversed that section of the road each day, having arrived and departed a half hour before, and he had cut in on the line to regale himself with the news of the world. But there was a dearth of thrilling events such as his rude soul delighted in. The Apache uprising that was feared had not taken place. Colonel Hardie of Fort Grant had the situation well in hand. The nihilists were giving their latest czar a breathing spell. No new prizefighter had arisen to wrest the championship of the world from John L. Sullivan, who had put all his old rivals "to sleep." "Ole Man" Terrill proceeded to follow their example. He had been up late the night before at a poker game. His head fell forward with a jerk. Aroused by the shock, he glanced drowsily about him. Heat waves danced before the open window. Deep silence hung over his little world. Again his eyelids closed, his head dropped, and slowly he slipped into sleep.

Tragedy was approaching him now, but not along the wire. Down an arroyo, or "draw" (the dry bed of a water course), that wound in a detour around the town of Florence and debouched into the open plain near the station, crept two men in single file, each leading a horse. They were Buck McKee and Bud Lane, who had ridden north from the town that morning with the declared purpose of going to Buck's old ranch, the Lazy K. They had circled about the town, timing their arrival at the station a little after the departure of the train which was expected to bring Dick Lane's money.

McKee emerged first from the mouth of the draw. He wore a coarse flannel shirt, loosened at the throat. About his neck was a handkerchief. His riding overalls were tucked into high boots with Spanish heels and long spurs. A Mexican hat with a bead band topped a head covered with coarse black hair, which he inherited from his Cherokee mother.

Save for the vulture floating high in air not a living thing was in sight. With the caution of a coyote McKee crept to the station door and peered blinkingly through the open door into the room. The change from the dazzling light without to the shaded interior blinded him for a moment. He heard the heavy breathing of the sleeper before he saw him.

"Gene" Hurtubise the Local Wrestler Was Heavy Loser Yesterday — Another Guest at Hotel Touched for Small Sum.

There is one man that "Gene" Hurtubise, the local heavyweight grappler, would like to give the strangle hold, hammerlock, toe hold and all the other cruel and damaging mangles in the list.

The man towards whom he naturally feels thus, succeeded in going through his trunk at the King George Hotel yesterday noon for $250 and also took $3.50 from the room of another guest at the hotel, Benton by name.

The night before last a stranger registered at the hotel and left yesterday without going to the dining room for dinner and it is thought that he possibly made away with the money while the others were at their noonday meal. Anyway he's gone, and so is the money, but Chief Thompson said that it is possible that the man under suspicion was not the guilty party.

THE CHIMES AND THE CITY;

(Public Aspects of the Enterprise)

POSITION OF THE FUND

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—A few words seem to be called for as to the present position of the chimes enterprise.

It is gratifying to be able to announce that the subscription list now amounts to $4,130.00, and the cash receipts to $2,120.00. Of this amount upwards of $900.00 has been contributed by warm hearted foreign citizens and friends of Peterborough.

We gratefully appreciate the generosity of all contributors, both inside and outside of the city. The subscription list is a remarkable one, and is an eloquent testimony to the broad and kindly spirit of Peterborough. In it are found, associated together in this common effort, the names of men and women of every class and religious body, though the majority of the subscribers are not members of the church in which the bells are to be hung. We do not say that the money has flowed in without effort, but it has been most kindly and ungrudgingly given. There have been comparatively few refusals and countless warm expressions of approval. It seems to be clearly evident, then, that Peterborough citizens generally desire to have a good chime of bells in their city, and that they have no narrow or sectarian prejudices in connection with the matter, which is recognized as one requiring general co-operation.

It is now asked whether the large sum already collected could not be deemed sufficient, and the order given at once. In answer I beg to say that this sum, or even a smaller one, would probably procure a chime quite suitable for any particular church, but we have long ago passed out of this stage, and our question must now be "How much is needed to obtain a chime really worthy of the city of Peterborough?" and for this purpose we certainly have not enough at present. Very large bells are required in order to be heard at any distance when chimed, and, as they are to be used to play not only hymn tunes on Sundays, but also patriotic and other appropriate melodies on different occasions, a wider range is required. From the attractive offers before us it now looks as if eleven fine bells could be obtained for a little over $5,000. The largest of these would weigh 3,000 pounds, three times the weight of St. John's present bell.

For my own part, in view of the kindliness and public spirit which will always be associated with the Peterborough bells, I think we ought not to be satisfied even with this, but should go on a little further and secure the very best chime in Ontario, a joy to our citizens and a credit and attraction to our city. This is a privilege now well within our reach, if only other citizens will support the present subscribers. We do not say for a moment that the call is as urgent as perhaps many others, but it is unique and wholly different to any other cause before the town. Here is something which will help to diffuse cheer, brightness and happiness, which will enable the community to give expression to deep feelings and which should generally increase healthy sentiment and enthusiasm among us.

However, we urge no one. It is difficult to see from what quarter the balance required will come, but we can only trust that more public-spirited people will spontaneously come forward. The very smallest contributions will be glady received by the treasurer, Mr. Wainwright, Bank of Ottawa.

Meanwhile the price of bell metal is advancing and present quotations are only offered for a limited time. The chime must be ordered this autumn if we are to have it next spring or early summer.

The decision as to time and size, lies, then, with future subscribers, and the whole city must await their decision. Certainly generosity on their part will be welcomed as timely aid in the public interest.

I may add that we have written in all directions for advice on this important matter, and have offers from the largest bell founders in England, Germany and the United States. And we welcome further advice from everyone whether a subscriber or no, for many who cannot subscribe are interested and will, we hope, derive equal pleasure from the bells.

Yours, &c.,
J. C. DAVIDSON.

REV. MR. CARPENTER'S PEOPLE LOATH TO SEE HIM LEAVE

Rev. Charles Carpenter, the newly appointed curate of St. John's Church, is expected to arrive in the city on Monday or Tuesday. His coming here had been fixed for the end of this week but had to be postponed.

Mr. Carpenter was presented on his departure from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, with an affectionate address from his people and a purse of gold. Great regret was expressed that he had decided to come to Canada.

Letters from Newfoundland speak in most complimentary terms of Mr. Carpenter's character and ability.

A meeting of men was held at St. John's last night at the close of the week night service and a discussion took place in regard to the work among men this year which will be carried on vigorously. It is expected that this work will be the special province of the new curate.

LECTURES OF SPECIAL INTEREST

Brigadier Bond, the able and well known editor of the Salvation Army journal "The War Cry" will lecture at the local Temple on Saturday on the "Zululand". His address will be illustrated by sketches by artist Gray a clever contributor to "The War Cry" and the Toronto Star. A silver collection will be taken.

On Sunday Brigadier Bond will conduct a special holiness meeting in the morning and will also officiate in the afternoon. In the evening he will give another sketch lecture of absorbing interest on "Discovered Crimes and Criminals."

Brigadier Taylor principal of the Salvation Army Training School for the province, will lecture at the barracks to-night.

UNCALLED FOR SLUR FROM OMEMEE VILLAGE

Under the heading "Omemee Citizen Has Something to Say," the Lindsay Daily Warder publishes the following;—

The following letter from Omemee was received in this morning's mail. It speaks for itself;—

In the name of the people of Omemee.

Dear Sir,—I would like to put ad. in your valuable paper about Peterboro sports such as volunteers. We would like to ask you to have Peterboro people to keep them sports at home and let them enjoy their fun such as they call it fun. We rather be thankful and appreciate for them to keep them sports at home for themselves because we don't enjoy such a sport especially if people can't behave themselves its better to have them stay in their homes and if it should happen that they should come we would have to take different measures to prevent such a fun. We would be very much surprised with that place like Peterboro can't bring up people to better manners than that such as they should have. It is really a disgrace to the Government.

Judging from the general style of the writer his complaint is of small account. Omemee is a small village, and in such a place is often found a "very important" person, who fails utterly when good judgment is necessary. A cook's parade was put on by a number of the visitors, only after it had received the sanction of the reeve of Omemee. He was fully acquainted with the nature of the parade. Considerable noise was made, although the parade was purely an innocent amusement, and the village constable became very officious. This made things most unpleasant for those taking part in the parade and himself. Hence the letter.

Dr. Langfeldt officiated. The groomsman was Mr. Harold Smith and the bridesmaid, the sister of the bride, Miss Maude Stewart, who was attired in white silk. Miss Flowers officiated at the organ. STERLING—GIRVEN

A pretty house wedding took place at the residence of Mrs. Girven, William Street, Lakefield, on Wednesday afternoon, when Miss Ethel Girven and Mr. Charles Sterling were united in marriage.

The drawing room was prettily decorated with palms and ferns and pink and white asters.

The bride wore a dainty gown of cream silk voile with touches of silver and chiffon, the silver veil caught with orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of bridal roses. She was given away by her brother, Mr. H. Girven.

Miss M. Edwards attended the bride. She was gowned in pale blue silk mull with touches of gold and chiffon, and carried a sheaf of white asters.

Mr. Cecil Sterling attended the groom.

Rev. Mr. Cragg, pastor of the Methodist Church, officiated.

During the signing of the register, Mrs. H. Girven sang most acceptably, "O Promise Me."

Mr. and Mrs. Sterling left on the evening train for a short trip to Toronto and points West, the bride travelling in a tailored suit of green broadcloth and a large black Gainsborough hat.

A musical programme will be given each evening.

The exhibition will open in the Royal Studio, (Richmond's Old Gallery) on Thursday evening at 8 p.m., and will be open until Tuesday evening, Sept. 13th, each evening from 7 to 10 p.m. No amateur in the city should miss this opportunity of getting ideas in mounting, in fact every phase of the amateur way of doing things.

CLEANSING OF THE HEART AND ITS SUBLIME SIGNIFICANCE

(High Ideals and Chaste Thoughts)

Rev. Kenneth W. Barton, B.A., of Toronto, a speaker with a remarkable power of expression, and the ability to hold the attention of his hearers from the beginning to the end of an address, preached the preparatory communion sermon in St. Andrew's church last evening. Taking for his text Psalm 51, 10th verse: "Create in me a clean heart," he gave a fine portrayal of the condition of the human heart after it has felt the transforming power of God at work within. Comparing the heart to one who possessed all the human faculties and power, such as tongue, ears, will, sight, and so forth, the speaker explained fully how God would cause each one to work with completely changed feelings in the cause of righteousness.

The sinner, to whom the horror of his heart has been made apparent, turns naturally to God. What horrible things are in the heart of man. Dreadful as are the storms of nature, still more dreadful are the storms of passion which devastate the human heart. The new heart is born of repentance, and back of repentance there was the planting of God's seed. Sudden conversions are only the working of God in the human heart for years before.

By the prayer at mother's knee, in the old wooden church or Sunday school the seed of God was sown in the heart.

"Is your heart carried away by earth's activities? If so, oh that God's love and power might quicken His seed in your hearts, and bring better passions to the surface."

Regarding the character of the new heart, Mr. Barton stated that it would be shown by its deeds. Everything about it was different. Ruskin could see beauty in art and paintings where millions could see none.

The changed heart had new sight. It saw sin in all its hideousness. The sublime beauty revealed in nature was made apparent. There was a growing appreciation of good music. It heard the call that comes from heathen lands for missionaries.

The hearing of the new heart protested against national vices and political trickery. It spake of love and generosity, and against the evil tongues, which blackened the souls of men with the blackness of the pit itself.

The weary world was waiting for the tongue of the new heart to pour out a song of gladness to all men.

The hands of the heart were God reigns never dally with the filthy lucre obtained through vice and trickery. They were meant to be the hands of angels, to be tender and be raised against injustice, and yet be clenched tightly and be mighty in the pulling down of the strongholds of iniquity.

Lastly, he referred to the will of of the heart. The choice of good or evil rested with us. The new will determined that the light of liberty should be enjoyed by all men, black, yellow, or white.

Rev. Mr. Barton concluded his address with a strong exhortation for the ringing out of the evils and the ringing in of the thousand years of peace.

After the address Rev. J. G. Potter asked that a committee be appointed to convene together regarding the appointment of a successor to Mr. Potter. The secretary of the Presbytery, Mr. Thompson, of Hastings, and Messrs. McFarlane, Lees, Mathieson, McClellan and Gillespie were nominated and elected unanimously.

MILLINERY OPENINGS

Will be on the Same Dates as the Peterboro Fair

The Fall millinery openings, will be held on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, September 15, 16 and 17, the dates of the Peterborough Exhibition. Visitors to the Fair will therefor have the opportunity of attending both. The stores promise an extra effort in display work this season.

Important to Ladies

It is not often an opportunity occurs at your door to see the latest Parisian and New York styles in Hair Goods, yet such is the case, as Prof. Dorenwend of Toronto is visiting this town, and invites your inspection of these goods at his private apartments reserved at the Hotel.

These Hair Goods styles, when properly adjusted protect and ornament the head, soften and beautify the expression of the face and consequently tone up an aged appearance. Be sure and see them at the Oriental Hotel on Friday, Sept. 23rd.

DISCOVERED AT THE "DUMP"

Length of New Hose Ready for Use Found in a Bag

Mark Pengelley, while dumping on the grounds at the foot of Charlotte Street, discovered a bag containing one length of lawn hose, fitted up ready for use. He reported the find at the police station this morning.

The bag was almost entirely covered with sawdust, and apparently after being stolen was hidden. The hose is practically new.

COMMUNION AT ST. ANDREW'S

Special communion will be held at St. Andrew's next Sunday, Rev. J. G. Potter's farewell Sunday at the church prior to his departure for Montreal.

Rev. Kenneth W. Barton, of Hamilton, will preach the sermon.

Rainy weather put a damper on the Brockville Fair this year.

BALTIMORE TWIRLER HAS NEW ONE—THE THUMB BALL

Baltimore, Sept. 7—Christy Mathewson has his famous fade away and Ed. Walsh his spitter. Summers is known as the Knuckle Kid and there are others who claim to throw a weird ball. But Rube Vickers, of the Orioles, is perfectly one which will make 'em all sit up and take notice.

When Vickers and Egan first told the players about the ball they discredited the statements. But as the game went along they acknowledged that Rube had something. At night in the hotel lobby it was the general topic of discussion among the players.

Bill Byers has been experimenting with the ball on the trip, especially in warming up the pitchers. The discoverer and the user say the ball is held with the first two fingers and the thumb, and when it leaves the hand the fingers are underneath and the thumb on top.

It breaks just like a spitter. It also wabbles as it is about to pass the batter. The batter swings and he misses. He does not know why. It is a slow ball. Vickers throws it with the same motion that he uses in throwing a fast ball and a curve.

The batsmen will not know what to expect. It will be either a fast ball a curve or a thumb ball. Vickers has everything in his favor along that line, for he has a free-arm delivery. Vickers said that he was never able to develop a slow ball during his pitching career, but he has one now.

Y.M.C.A. GYMN CLASSES

The gymnasium classes for the season of 1910 and 1911 are due to open with the junior boys on Wednesday, Sept. 14th at 4.15 p.m. All junior boys are reminded that they will be required to register with the physical director and will be required to pass a physical examination before being allowed to take part in any floor work.

The Business Boys' class of last year has been divided into two sections this year, the older boys forming what will be known as the Intermediate class. The younger boys will be known as Business Boys.

The Business Boys' class will open Thursday, Sept. 15th, at 7 p.m.

RUGBY PRACTICE CALLED FOR SATURDAY AFTERNOON

All those who intend to play rugby this season, and any who would like to break into the game are asked to turn out for a practice at Riverside Park Saturday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock. Much better work can be accomplished by the players presenting themselves in uniform, and those who expect to be on hand should not neglect to be there arrayed in their armour.

Peterborough has the material for a winning junior O.R.F.U. team and such a team is sure of a liberal hand. The boys, however, must get out and practice, and practice hard. Those behind the arrangements for Saturday's practice expect a large turnout, and all who have the fever and are ready to do their best should be present in good time.

BRIEF AND BREEZY

An Indoor Baseball League has been organized at Port Hope. The games will be played in the skating rink and the secretary-treasurer of the league is Y. Hunter.

Spectator.—Hamilton in the New York State league.

Such is the latest baseball proposition. It appears that the Binghamton club owners are eager to sell their franchise, having placed it on the market at $6,000, with the result that a couple of Hamilton people have interested themselves in the matter and are at present in touch with the New York State club, with the intention of purchasing the franchise, providing the sale would meet with the approval of the league, and the other teams in the league would be prepared to take Hamilton into their fold.

Ty Cobb is out of the game with a sore eye.

In the soccer tourney at Toronto yesterday Calgary beat Fort William 2—0. The two Hamilton teams play at home to-day. And the final will be put on at Toronto Saturday afternoon.

Wagner had four hits in the second game against St. Louis yesterday. Snodgrass, of the Giants, had two, and Speaker, of Boston, failed to connect. Lajoie had one.

Because a man takes up pugilism as a profession, it does not necessarily follow that he is also a "bruiser." Many boxers, like college ball players, have drifted into the game simply for the reason that they discovered that they could make more money at the pursuit than at a legitimate business. Such was the case with Noah Brusso (Tommy Burns), of Hanover, erstwhile champion pugilist of the world. Burns may not be a student of the Scriptures, but he evidenced that he is perfectly cognizant of the primal truths taught in the Great Book when, at Vancouver the other day, he was struck by an opponent in a lacrosse game with stick and fist, and never retaliated. How many lacrosse players under similar circumstances would have exhibited like forbearance. Burns is a boxer, but he is also a gentleman.—Toronto News.

SIMPSON TO PLAY ?

Ottawa, Sept. 7— Take it for granted that Ben Simpson, the greatest punting half-back in the Big Four will again play with the Tigers this season, notwithstanding reports to the contrary.

Simpson was one of the delegates to the annual meeting of the Interprovincial union. Ben was accompanied by Harold Lazier and "Cotton Top" Davie Tope, and the old glitter of enthusiasm sprung back into the schoolmaster's eyes as the rugby magnates got their heads together and worked out the schedule.

"Going to play this year "Ben?" was shot across the table while Billy Johnston and Joe Wright were discussing dates.

"Not if I can avoid doing so," replied the Tiger star." I will not play unless the Tigers cannot possibly do without me."

At the same time Ben added that he never felt in better condition in all his life.

Mistaken For a Burglar.

New York, Sept. 7.—Mistaken for a burglar, Mrs. Louise Ceis, 36 years old, was shot in the heart and instantly killed at 4 a.m. by Kurt Weifslos, aged 19, a boarder, in her home at 47 East 11th street. Her husband and a year-old daughter were grazed by the bullet fired by the boarder.

Acting President of Chile Dead.

Santiago, Chile, Sept. 7.—Vice-President Elias Fernandez Albano, acting president of Chili, since the death of President Montt, died suddenly yesterday from an attack of heart failure.

FIGHT PICTURES ON THE WATER

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 7.—Barred from exhibiting the films of the Johnson-Jeffries fight in this vicinity of the south by the action of the authorities of Tennessee and Arkansas, the promoters have settled on a plan to show the pictures in midstream of the Mississippi River. It is proposed to use a barge towed by a steamboat in midstream. It is claimed this territory is outside the jurisdiction of officers of either State.

THE MILKERS AND MILKING.

It is the opinion of a dairyman of prominence who writes the following articles regarding milking:

The prime object should be to keep the milk clean. Any operation about the stable which would likely stir up dust should be conducted at least a half hour before milking is started in order that the dust may have time to settle. Practically all the dirt which gets into milk comes from the manipulation of the udder while milking. As an aid to keeping the milk clean the long hairs about the udder and flanks should be clipped. The tail and switch should be kept clean.

Some time before milking is started the udder and surrounding parts should be thoroughly cleaned. If the udder be dry a good brushing, followed by sponging with a damp cloth, will be found very effective.

Employees about the dairy should be cleanly in their habits and dress. The owner of the dairy should keep himself informed in regard to the healthfulness of the employees and their families, and no person afflicted or constantly exposed to a contagious disease should be allowed to handle milk or do any work about the dairy room.

Cleanliness Essential.

All utensils used in handling the milk should be kept scrupulously clean and should be sterilized or at least scalded out after being cleaned. Before beginning to milk the milker should be perfectly clean, the cleaning process to include the use of a nailbrush. A special suit should be kept by each milker, to be used only while milking, and should include a cap so made that it can be laundered at the same time as the remainder of the suit. The suit should preferably be white so that the least soiling will be plainly visible and when so soiled should be replaced by a clean one. As the first portion of milk is usually rich in bacteria, the first two or three streams of milk drawn may well be discarded.

The milking should be conducted in a cleanly manner, as near the same hour each day as practicable and, if possible, without the milker having previously handled the animal.

Watch the Milk Carefully.

As soon as the milking of any one animal is completed the milk should be removed to the milk room, and if found to be stringy, bloody, thicker than usual or possessing an unusual appearance or if manure gets into it in any manner it should be discarded and the pail not again used until properly cleaned and sterilized. The animal giving the unusual milk should thereafter be milked separately and, if possible, by some other employee than the regular milker. If this cannot be done she should be milked last.

The milk room provided should be used for no other purpose than the handling of milk and the storing of fresh milk until its removal from the dairy. This room should be easy of access from the dairy stable, but at the same time so arranged that the odor and dust of the stable cannot enter.

One of the first essentials in keeping dairy utensils clean is to have a smooth surface. As far as possible milk utensils should be made of glass, enamel ware or glazed earthen ware. The more simple their construction the better. Joints, runs, etc., should be smooth and well filled with solder.

Good Rations.

The cow needs good feed the same as the horse. In fact, she should have the best, for her milk is designed for human consumption and cannot be too carefully guarded. Too often the thoughtless farmer puts off the poorest food on his cow. It may be musty or dusty or half rotten—anything he considers good enough for the cow. This is all wrong and very bad policy. If the refuse must be fed give it to inferior calves or less important stock. Yet such is bad policy for even these. Calves fed on poor and unhealthful food cannot develop and thrive as they should. To start a calf with poor feeding is to cripple its future.

Not only is musty hay bad for cows, but it carries bacteria, which get into the milk and spoil it. The effect sometimes is to produce what is called soapy milk, which froths and will not sour or churn into butter. The fact is that there is no more place for spoiled or rotten feed among stock than among human beings.

For the Shepherd.

Lambs that were dropped in April will now begin to eat grain in an inclosure where the ewes cannot enter.

Crushed oats, ground wheat or wheat bran and oilmeal make a good mixture.

Some corn may be added a little later to hasten the fattening. Do not sell a half fat lamb; it is poor business.

Do not let the ewes run down for lack of a little grain in addition to the pasture.

Natural Enough.

"Mrs. Nervey wasn't invited to Mrs. Swellman's tea at all," Miss Gaddie was saying, "but she came, and when she entered the room the silence was positively painful."

"Naturally," remarked the hateful Mr. Knox. "Silence is always painful among women."—Catholic Standard and Times.

King and Spider.

Frederick the Great, king of Prussia, was saved from death by a spider, according to a story people tell. They say that the king was at luncheon and was about to drink some chocolate when a spider dropped from the ceiling into the cup. The king sent for another cup, and the attendant returned immediately to say that the cook had shot himself. It was afterward found that the cook had poisoned the chocolate and that when the second cup had been sent for he believed that his act had been found out.

Origin of an Old Saying.

"He's a brick!" has been traced by some learned philologist to a king of Sparta who lived and reigned four centuries B. C. A visitor to Lacedaemon, the Spartan capital, being greatly surprised to find that the city had no walls, asked the king what he would do in the event of an invasion.

"Sparta," replied the king, "has 50,000 soldiers, and each man is a brick."

Fire, the cause of which is unknown, destroyed barns and outbuildings belonging to Daniel Wood, near Minesing. Partially insured.

Iron ore mined in the Pretoria district of South Africa is said to be suitable for the highest grade steel and an electric reduction plant will be installed.

A DELIGHTFUL HAIR DRESSING THAT MAKES HAIR GROW

Favorite With Men and Women the Country Over

There is reason for the phenomenal sale of Parisian Sage in the Dominion since it was first introduced into Canada.

And the reason is plain to all. Parisian Sage does just what it is advertised to do.

Ask Wm. Madill about it. He will tell you that he rigidly guarantees is to cure dandruff, stop falling hair or itching scalp in two weeks, or money back.

There is no reason whatever why any man or woman should fail to take advantage of the above generous offer.

But one thing that has made Parisian Sage so famous is its peculiar power to turn the harsh, unattractive hair that many women possess into luxuriant and radiant hair in a short time. Women of refinement the country over are using it and it never disappoints. Read this letter:

"I procured Parisian Sage and found that it was a great hair tonic and cleanser. I have used other preparations, but Parisian Sage cleaned the salp, stopped all irritation, made my hair fluffy, silky, and left no trace of stickiness as some other hair tonics had.'" Mrs. Sarah Sanderhoff, 1403 N. Washington St., Owosso, Mich., June 22, 1909.

Sold by leading druggists everywhere, and in Peterborough by Wm. Madill, for 50 cents a large bottle. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every package; mail orders filled, charges prepaid, by the Canadian makers, Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont.

"I find Parisian Sage a good hair remedy. My brother has also used Parisian Sage and says it is fine."—Yours sincerely, Julia Corbin, Huntingdon, Pa., Oct. 29, 1909.

EMILY NOTES

Bethel, Emily, Sept. 8.—A number from here attended the excursion from Bridgenorth to Fenelon Falls last Tuesday, held under the auspices of the Gilmour Baptist Sunday school, and report an enjoyable trip.

A most successful and enjoyable picnic was held last Wednesday afternoon Aug. 31st, under the auspices of the St. John's, St. James', and Christ church Sunday schools, in Mr. W. Jackson's grove, opposite Bethel church.

At 2.30 o'clock a large crowd of people came, many coming in hay rack waggon loads. Swinging and various amusements were indulged in, until 4 o'clock, when preparations for tea was made, and an elaborate spread of enticing dainties was displayed on the tables on the grounds to which about 80 children first partook of heartily. After the children had tea, the grown-ups and older people were served.

After supper races for young and old were run off and a good collection of prizes were given to the winners. At 6.30 oc'lock the National Anthem was sang and the crowd dispersed.

Harvesting is about over for another year and threshing is now the order of the day.

Supposed Paintor Was Wealthy.

Sterling, Colo., Sept. 8.—That Frank Nichols of Momenee, Ill., a member of a crew of painters at work on the Burlington roundhouse here, was not the humble craftsman he pretended to be, but a wealthy man studying sociological problems, came to light through a search of the man's effects after he had been killed by a fall from a ladder on which he was at work.

Automatic Housekeeping.

Automatic housekeeping as understood by the Englishwoman implies orders given to the cook and to others who minister to the wants of the household in such a way that the mistress is saved the trouble of thinking of every small thing that needs seeing to and yet each detail receives expert attention. The sweep has orders to come on certain days of the year, the window cleaners on a certain day each fortnight or so; the window boxes and inside flowers receive regular care from the florist, etc. Even the breakfast, luncheon and dinner menus are mapped out by the month, subject, of course, to certain unforeseen changes. Carefully thought out and checked from time to time, the system has many merits if not carried to excess. The ordering of meals wholesale is the detail that may most readily lead to extravagance and waste.

PAPER TO THE RESCUE.

It Saves Laundry Bills and Cuts Out Dishwashing.

Are we approaching a paper age in housekeeping? Is the revolt of woman against the endless washing of dishes to be met with paper plates, cups and service shells, and are laundry bills to be lessened by the use of paper table covers and doilies? It would be a charming solution. Fancy at the end of a meal just gathering up tablecloth, dishes and all and thrusting them into the fireplace or the waste paper basket! It would be housekeeping made easy. And it is, fast becoming practicable, for these paper articles are constantly improving in quality. The only drawback now is the price. When a dozen paper service shapes, for instance, are thrown away after the lobster a la Newburg course, from 60 cents to $3, according to the quality of goods, is gone.

But they are very attractive, these service cups. They come in all possible devices, and as they are fashioned of handmade paper, impervious to grease and damp, any sort of food can be put in them. It is even possible to cook creamed oysters, chicken, etc., in them, so that individual portions can come straight from the stove to the table in paper shells.

There are fancy shapes to serve jellies and ice creams in, with lace paper doilies under them. The paper napkins and table covers are very fresh and cool looking for summer, and those of simple design are not at all expensive. The doilies and centerpieces in lace design are very fine and almost as pliable as those of real lace and linen.

As for the plates, while at first thought the idea of eating off paper plates does not seem inviting, no one can object after seeing them, for they, too, are proof against damp and grease, and they are very decorative. These and the service cups are to be had in designs suitable to the seasons and the different holidays as they come. Hostesses in the country, where help is difficult to procure, will find it a great convenience to have a supply of these paper devices on hand.

Panama Canal Fortifications.

Washington, Sept. 7.—The construction on the fortifications along the Panama Canal is to be done by the same engineering organization which is building the canal itself. Such a decision has been reached by President Taft, Major-Gen. Wood, chief of staff of the army, and other officials interested.

Silver Service for Cruiser.

Halifax, Sept. 7.—The Province of Nova Scotia will present to the mess of the Canadian cruiser Niobe a silver service valued at $500.

Floods In Japan.

Tokio, Sept. 8.—Serious floods threaten the cities of Osaka and Kobe on the Island of Hondo. River banks are collapsing, and much damage is probable. High water also is doing serious damage in the northern part of Main Island.

Will Be Tried as Spy.

Portsmouth, Sept. 8.—A warrant was issued yesterday against Lieut. Helm of the 21st Nasau (German) Regiment of Pioneers, who is alleged to be a German spy. He will be tried by a civil court, under the official secrets act.

Camille Poirier, a patient at the Brockville asylum, made his escape.

CAVAN NEWS NOTES

We've Been to the "Ex."—Valuable Horse Sold

Cavan, Sept. 5.—Mrs. Harry Staples arrived home on Tuesday after an extensive trip throughout the west.

The harvest is pretty near wound up in this section. The weather for the past week or so has been very favorable to the farmers. The majority are now busily engaged in preparing the land for fall wheat, while a great number of them are away sporting themselves at the Ex.

Misss Pearl Wilkinson has returned home after spending two weeks' holidays in Peterborough visiting among her friends.

Miss Elva Elliott returned home from the west on Tuesday last where she has been holidaying for thle past three months.

HAVE YOU BEEN TO THE "EX."

"Have you been up to the Exhibition?" is the slogan of the day which to one who is able to answer the question in the affirmative appeals to them as a matter of course. But for one who has an irresistable desire to go but has not got the necessary dough or the time to go, the above question offers no soothing balm to one's already injured feelings, but is very apt to jar the nerves. An unusual large number of people from this vicinity went up to Toronto last week and indications point to a much larger number going up this week. The majority of those who have already been up to Toronto report an excellent show, "the best ever," is one of the general expressions.

Rev. Mr. Clarry, pastor of Cavanville Methodist church, has returned from a two weeks' vacation, which was spent at Chautaugua County, N. Y. Mr. Clarry was present at the annual Grange Day held every summer on the third Saturday in August of the Panona Grange. He reports an excellent.

Mr. T. Jackson of Bethany, has purchased the store belonging to Mr. Levi Sisson, and intends to run a butcher shop and grocery combined, Tom is certainly a hustler, he recently was successful in securing the contract for the drawing of the mail to and from the station. Mr. Joe Haddan is also going into the butcher business in connection with his grocery store. Things must be beginning to boom around Bethany.

HORSE SOLD.

Mr. Fred Bent, who recently sold his fine big draught team, purchased a thoroughbred mare last week from Harry Finney for the handsome sim of $250.

Mr. West. Hutchinson, who has been spending his holidays at his home in Cavanville, has gone to Millbrook to spend a few days at the home of his sister, Mrs. John Martin.

Mr. Wallace Martin had an exciting runaway on Labor Day. He was down at the C.P.R. station with a team of horses loading a new seed drill on to a waggon when a freight train came tearing along causing the horses to run away. Considerable damage was done to the waggon before they were recaptured. One of the horses was also severely injured by coming in contact with some telegraph wire.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim White and two children, Master Keith and Miss Dorothy, of Ports Hope, were out visiting friends in Cavan on Sunday.

ALL ABOUT APSLEY DOINGS

Here's a Few Lines That Will Please You—Personals Also.

Special to the Review.

Apsley, Sept. 5—His Lordship Bishop Reeves, of Toronto, administered the holy sacrament of confirmation to seventeen candidates on Sunday evening last in the Church of England here. He also gave an explanation of confirmation, stating that it was not merely a form of English Church doctrine, but an ordiance instituted by Christ, and that it was necessary as stated in the scripture, that all persons receive the Spirit of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands. He also encouraged those who had been confirmed to stand firm for Christ, and not to fall back in the ways of sin, but to pray at all times, for

Prayer is the simplest form of speech
That infant lips can try,
Prayer, the sublimest strains that reach
His Majesty on high.

SOCIAL

A conundrum social was held on the town hall grounds by the Ladies' Aid Society on Friday evening last, and was a grand success. The grounds were well lighted with lamps and Chinese lanterns, and the weather was superb for the occasion. On entering the grounds all persons were charged a fee, according to their height, it being at the rate of two cents a foot. In cases where a person was not an exact number of feet the next highest number was taken. This created much amusement, as the diminutives considered it one of their lucky days. Tables were set and the bill of fare consisted of sixteen conundrums. Any person was at liberty to order all or any one of the conundrums at two cents each. The one conundrum "Spring's Offering" was given free to all. Those whose intellectual faculties were well developed, could get a good meal from a very few orders, while those whose brain was still at a minimum might not be so fortunate. A canteen was also on the grounds, where candies, nuts, oranges, ice cream, etc., were sold. Tea having been served, all repaired to the Templars' Hall to listen to the musical and literary part of the programme, which consisted of quartettes, duets, solos, dialogues, recitations, and all kinds of instrumental music, which were all well rendered. The evening's amusement was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem. The proceeds amounted to about thirty-four dollars. As this society has only been organized but a very short time, the ladies deserve much credit at this their first attempt at anything of this nature.

CRITICISMS AND SUGGESTIONS IN GEN. FRENCH'S REPORT

He Would Retain the Canadian Volunteer System, But Favors Large Increase in the Staff Organization and Preparation of Plans For Efficient Mobilization.

Ottawa, Sept. 9.—One of the pieces of work which awaited Sir Wilfrid Laurier on his return to the capital was to confer with Sir Frederick Borden on the subject of Gen. Sir John French's report on the Canadian militia. The Minister of Militia has been withholding the report from publication, on the ground that so important a document must pass before the Premier's eye before being made public. Yesterday the document was placed in the Premier's hands and the objection to publication disappears.

The report made by the Imperial inspector-general on the whole approves of the retention of the voluntary system for Canada. Sir John French also approves the numbers aimed at by the existing Canadian system, namely a first line of 100,000, with provision for the ultimate organization of a second line also 100,000 strong. With this as his basis, he makes a number of suggestions and criticisms.

Peace organization practically identical with that which should obtain in war time summarizes the needs of the Canadian militia, as presented in the report. The necessity for a large increase in the staff organization and the preparation of efficient plans of prompt mobilization are among the most important points brouhgt out. The fondness of the city corps for ceremonial rather than the practical business of war is adversely commented upon, and in this connection the length of the annual camp training, especially for the cavalry, is declared to be quite inadequate to the production of efficient soldiers.

Prompt mobilization being of the utmost necessity in modern warfare, the general recommends in the mobilization staff alone an increase of ten or twelve officers, at headquarters and in the different districts, that plans may be worked out in minutest detail.

The lack of efficient officers in all branches of the service comes in for severe criticism. The general finds the standards set all right, but too much laxity in the reinforcement of these requirements. More attention should be paid to the training of the junior officers in the work of their sub-units.

The attendance both of officers and men at camp is found to be lamentably lax. Public opinion should back up the headquarters' staff in exacting as high a standard of military duty as that exacted by a business man from his employes.

The haphazard way in which new corps are formed is commented on, by which the individual preferences of the promoters of the new corps determined the arm of the service to which they should belong. This has produced a badly unbalanced militia force. The proportion of infantry is too large. The proportion of field artillery should be five guns to each thousand men, instead of two as at present. Each county should, he says, furnish a proportion of each arm of the service, instead of specializing. In regard to the cavalry, the necessity of an efficient "remount staff," to look after the supply of horses, is noted.

Decentralization of the mobilization stores to the individual corps and subdivisions, is urged, as also the necessity of ample reserves of ammunition, which should be interchangeable with that used in other parts of the Empire.

In the matter of armament, Gen. French recommends the howitzer, a short gun, throwing a 60 to 100-pound shell almost vertically upon the enemies hidden by hills or trenches, as more suitable for eastern Canada than the "Long Tom," which is adapted to direct fire. Some of the heavy artillery should be converted into howitzer batteries.

For the west the problem is different, and the general recommends the development of a force of mounted rifles, field artillery and infantry in the principal towns. There should be 16 days' training for the mounted men.

Petawawa Camp is declared to be the best training ground in the Empire, and a similar central training ground is suggested for the west. The cadet movement comes in for high approval. The administrative services are also commended.

RECEIVED MESSAGE FROM THE DEAD

Seance at His Home Results in Declaration of Communication.

Boston, Sept. 9.—William James, the former Harvard professor and distinguished scientist and psychic expert, has sent a message to his friends from the spirit world, it was asserted yesterday by M. S. Ayer, founder of the First Spiritual Temple of Boston, who conducted the seance at his country home at Harwichport, Mass.

Mr. Ayer says that the message was received through a well-known spiritualistic medium at a seance held at his cottage at Harwichport, on Monday evening. The message given out by Mr. Ayer is:

"I am at peace, at peace, (here some words could not be distinguished) with myself and all mankind. I have awakened to a life far beyond my highest expectation while a denizen of earth. Tell my brothers that I will transmit a message through this instrument that will prove my individuality, when I can manifest more clearly than at this time.

"I did not realize how difficult it would be to manifest from this plane of life to the mortal plane. There is much, very much, for me to learn and many conditions to overcome."

The seance, says Mr. Ayer, was under the auspices of the Temple Band of Spirits. Mr. Ayer refused to tell the name of the medium or to reveal the names of those present.

Henry James, jr., son of Prof. James, says that he knows nothing of any message having been received from his father.

MAY LOSE USE OF BOTH HANDS

Prescott, Sept. 9.—An awful accident happened to Fred. La Mere at 2.30 Wednesday afternoon, as a result of which he will lose the use of both hands.

He was working in the hold of a grain vessel at the elevator, guiding the big scoop. The ropes caught, and in shaking them loose he put himself in such a position that if he let go it would mean instant death, and if he hung on he would be drawn into the pulley block.

He hung on and had his right hand cut off diagonally across the palm, barely leaving the trunk, and part of the thumb and first and second fingers of the left hand, the third finger badly pinched and torn, but not severed. He was taken to the Ogdensburg Hospital.

HARNESSING WIND AND SUN

London, Sept. 9.—Prof. Fessenden at the British Association meetings outlined the possibilities of harnessing the wind and sun, in order to produce electrical energy.

He said a number of windmills round the coast could give power enough to run all the railways, factories and electric light stations in Great Britain, but he thought, humorously, with solar energy Britain could not do quite so well.

Sir W. White doubted the practicability of the scheme.

OBJECTS TO SENATOR'S COMPANY

Freeport, Ill., Sept. 9.—Col. Roosevelt refused flatly to attend the banquet tendered last night by the Hamilton Club, Chicago, unless Senator Lorimer is excluded. He demanded that a telegram to that effect be sent to the Senator. Roosevelt said that he would feel the same about the presence of Senator Lorimer that he would feel if members of the Illinois Legislature, who are involved in the graft investigation, should be present.

NEWFOUNDLAND IS SATISFIED

St. John's, Nfld., Sept. 9.—The decision of the international court of arbitration on the Newfoundland fisheries dispute is looked upon here as a substantial victory for the colony. The winning of point one by Great Britain means, it is pointed out, that Newfoundland will have full power to control all fishery legislation, and make the American fishermen subject thereto.

IN SOLITARY CONFINEMENT

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 9.—The fact that Charles W. Morse, the banker confined in the federal penitentiary, was put in solitary confinement for two days last May for infraction of the rules, was made public here yesterday by Warden Meyer. WOMEN ADDRESSED BY FATHER VAUGHAN Popular English Cleric Flays Society for its Departure From Church—Line of Cleavage is Between Catholicism and Materialism.

Montreal, Sept. 9.—One of the most interesting meetings of the congress was that at which Rev. Father Vaughan, Miss Sadlier and others addressed the women yesterday. The hour scheduled was 2.30 p.m., but for an hour and a half prior to that time the ladies began to pour in.

Admission was by ticket, and hundreds were disappointed in not being able to secure the desired parchment. Brothers of the Christian schools performed the no easy task of collecting the tickets of the on-coming women, but so patient and courteous were the guardians of the inner precincts that things ran on smoothly, despite the eagerness of the ladies. Father Vaughan is easily one of the chief attractions of the congress, and the desire to hear him is almost as keen as that with which the thousands seeks for a glimpse of the greater ecclesiastics now gathered.

The fact that the meeting was under the auspices of the weaker sex was guarantee for the tastefulness of its environment. The pretty platform was draped with the papal flag, and potted ferns and foliage adorned the footlights. While the seating was in progress the ladies, true to their reputation, chatted incessantly and tried to squeeze themselves into every available cogn of vantage.

When the meeting opened the platform contained a goodly number of churchmen, amongst whom were several bishops and archbishops, wearing their long red cloaks, and adding to the picturesqueness of the scene. In the audience were many of the visiting and resident priests and members of the different teaching communities, the black garb and quaint headdress of the sisters making striking though sombre notes amongst the brighter dresses and becoming coifures of the ladies who composed the greater part of the audience.

Some of the things that Father Vaughan said were: "We are living in a day when high ideals are yielding to the pressure of creature comforts, when principle is being exchanged for expediency; in a day when self-sacrificing Catholicism is being bartered for self-centered materialism, and the Christian sense of sin is regarded as a bygone superstition, in a day when it matters not what you believe, but only what you do, and when you may do what you like, provided you are not found out; in a day when the relationship between the sexes takes one back to pagan times, while the garbage over which they gloat is more foul and loathing than the stuff about which they chatter; in a day when there is no empty place but in the cradle, no room in which to move but the churches.

"In a word, the cleavage to-day, as in no previous time since the dawn of Christianity, is between God and mammon, or, shall I say in language more definite, between Catholicism and agnosticism, if not materialism."

If numbers and enthusiasm are tests of loyalty, then was the reception of the Pope's legate at the City Hall last night one of the most loyal that can be grasped by even the most vivid imagination. The hour appointed was 8.30 o'clock, but long before that time, the square and avenue surrounding the great civic institution presented an appearance comparable to nothing but a sea of living humanity.

Cardinal Gibbons, who arrived yesterday from Baltimore, Md., was present during the first part of the evening and, leaving early, was escorted by police and uniformed officers down one of the grand stairways. At first the cardinal was not recognized, red caps and crimson cloaks are so common in Montreal just now, but when someone whispered "There's Cardinal Gibbons" the whisper went round and a cheer for America's Cardinal was given.

Mgr. Gibbons extends an invitation to the Eucharistic Congress to visit New York City when it next meets.

A sight probably never before witnessed by those who were present in the vicinity of St. James' Church yesterday morning, was that of fully three thousand members of religious orders, who filled the church at the solemn mass said for their special benefit. Curious to many, though not to Montreal, must have been the numerous black robed and white bonneted sisters of charity, the grey-gowned nuns of the Hotel Dieu, the browngarbed Franciscan, with the cord of St. Francis girding his habit and the sandals alone covering the bare feet. The seminary, in their picturesque cloak and round hat, were out in force, so too were the secular priests from all over the American continent.

From the sanctuary the papal legate addressed the multitude, every ear being bent to receive his message. His grace of Montreal also added encouraging words of appreciation and encouragement. The sanctuary was a scene of beauty, the gorgeous scarlet and gold of the vestments and the costly appointments of the altar being in strong contrast with the sombre garbed congregation, who feasted on its beauty.

There was a very successful demonstration yesterday at the church of the Italian colony, Dorchester street east, some 2,000 sons and daughters of sunny Italy gathered to do honor to the Pope's legate. Cardinal Vannutelli was moved to tears as a little school girl presented a bouquet.

His eminence, speaking in Italian, declared that at no recent eucharistic congress held in the old world, had the Pope's representative been received with such open-handed enthusiasm as has been the case since the legate landed on Canadian shores.

Suburban points on Long Island are brought on an average of about 25 minutes nearer the heart of Manhattan Island by the new service.

TWO CAPTAINS HAVE TYPHOID

London, Sept. 9.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—In concluding his address to the Queen's Own Rifles of Toronto, at Winchester, the Duke of Connaught said:

"In his Majesty's name, I assure you of the very great pleasure and satisfaction it has been to him to know that you have been the first of his troops from over the seas to take part with his regular troops in peace manoeuvres. I wish you every success here and hope you will have a happy return to Canada, to be welcomed with open arms there."

Captains Pellatt and Kirkpatrick have developed typhoid fever, contracted, it is supposed, at Quebec.

ANGLICAN PRELATES DISAGREE WITH PRIEST'S STATEMENTS

Churchmen at Halifax Say That the Reformation, so Far From Being a Plunge Into Materialism Was a Reaction From It.

Halifax, Sept. 9.—"Balmoral Castle, —I have read with much satisfaction the telegram which you have sent me on behalf of the Church of England in Canada, holding congress in Halifax, and I thank you most warmly for the assurance of loyalty to my throne, to which it gives expression.

(Sgd.) "George R.I."

This telegram was received at the conclusion of the luncheon given in Edge Hill College for Girls, at Windsor yesterday, to the members of the church congress, who went to attend the special convocation of King's College.

The reports of some of the speeches at the Montreal congress have aroused criticism, especially the statement that one-half of the Church of England was occupied with agnostics and politics, and the other half was going over to Rome as fast as it could.

"Not a word of truth in it," said one indignant Canadian bishop, not long elevated. The Bishop of London was seen but he laughingly put it aside as unworthy of serious notice. "It was Bishop Creighton, who was a much better scholar than I can profess to be," he remarked, "who said the reformation was a return to sound learning, and it will be found to be so. I heartily agree with him."

Dr. Ingram, perhaps, bore the matter in mind, for in his address after convocation, said: "We are not ashamed of the truths of the Church of England," was one of three points he dwelt upon. "I think I saw in the papers something about the Church of England going back to Rome. I couldn't help smiling. There is about as much chance of the church going back to Rome as there is of it going back to the Druids."

He thought there was more and more a turning of the sections of the church to each other, and they were learning to teach the great catholic, not Roman Catholic, truths.

After luncheon, Bishop Worrell called on Bishop Perrin of British Columbia, who made a strong appeal for holding the general synod in the west as soon as possible.

A petition has been circulated and largely signed, asking that next year's synod be held in Victoria. Dr. Perrin was positive that after the opening of the Panama Canal the Pacific coast would become the centre of Canadian life.

Canon Powell, formerly of North Toronto, the new president of King's College, looked the youngest man in the room, and a more picturesque ceremony than the convocation proceedings has never been enacted. A commencement had just been made, when the whole audience rose, and the aged Archbishop of Ottawa, clothed in purple and scarlet, crowned with his great mitre, and preceded by his cross-bearer, came in. This venerable prelate presently kneeled before the youthful array of color, in which scarlet predominated.

Degrees were conferred on Bishop Lawrence of Massachusetts, in absentia; Bishop Alfred Harding, Washington; Bishop Brent, Philippine Islands; Chaplain-General Taylor Smith, Archbishop Matheson, primate of all Canada; Bishop Perrin, British Columbia; Hon. Edward Lyttelton, headmaster of Eton, in absentia; Archbishop Hamilton of Ottawa; the Bishops of London and Glasgow.

Two of the degrees conferred were of interest to Ontario people. Hubert Carlton was described as a leader of men, and Canon Powell referred to the fact that he had been of the same year at Trinity College. The degree of most unusual interest was that conferred on Mrs. Willoughby Cummings, and she was heartily cheered.

Newport, R.I., Sept. 9.—A mere trifle of $60,000 for a wedding dress is by no means an extraordinary expenditure, according to Miss Irene Sherman, who will become the bride of Lawrence L. Gillespie to-day. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Watts Sherman of Ochre Point, leading members of the millionaire set, and her wedding will be one of the events of the waning season here.

The wonderful dress is made in princess style of ivory satin aurore, with a profusion of almost priceless Alencon lace. She has already received wedding presents valued at upwards of a million dollars.

A Rare Old Book.

The second book printed in the English language was "The Game and Playe of the Chess," which the title page says was "Fynyshid the last day of Marche, the yer of our lord god a thousand foure hondred and LXXIIJ." Only twelve copies of the work are now known to exist. In 1813 an Englishman of the name of Alchorne sold his copy for a sum equal to $270 in United States currency. Fifty-six years later, in 1869, the same volume (an imperfect copy) was sold for $2,150. The British museum has refused an offer of $10,000 for its copy, which is imperfect to the extent of having seven leaves missing.

The Making of Words.

Dean Swift protested against "speculations, operations, preliminaries, ambassadors, pallisadoes, communication, circumvallation, battalions," as newfangled expressions brought into common use by the war of his day. To-day nearly all these are the most orthodox English. In his time "mob" seems commonly to have been written "mobb," and "phizz" also had the doubled consonant. Hence his complaint that "we cram one syllable and cut off the rest, as the owl fattened her mice after she had bit off their legs to prevent them from running away."

Leonard Boone, a native of Newfoundland was killed at Sydney, Cape Breton. He was run over by an ingot car at the steel works.

Coal Results

We sell the very best quality of hard coal, as good as we know how to buy.

¶ Are you getting results from the coal you are now using? Are you sure it is good? Are you burning it the right way?

¶ There is a deal of difference in how you handle the range or furnace. Our long experience tells us that fact and we are ready to advise any in doubt as to the best way to make use of coal as fuel.

UNION LABEL

FAILS TO KEEP PLEDGES

The curious likeness between Sir Wilfrid Laurier's difficulties in the west and President Taft's troubles with insurgency has attracted a good deal of comment. In opposition, as one journal points out, Sir Wilfrid Laurier undertook "to eliminate the principle of protection from the tariff." Obtaining office, his Government made one attempt at modifying some duties, but ever since the tendency of the tariff changes has been upwards. In the Presidential campaign of 1906 Mr. Taft and the Republicans undertook to revise the United States tariff downwards. Again returned to power, the party management forgot his pre-election promises, and the Payne tariff was the result. The parallel between the Liberal record at Ottawa and the Republican record at Washington is so striking that it has drawn this comment from the New York Evening Post:—

> We read of a statesman on his travels—or on his defence—explaining that the tariff which his party has passed was not the best possible, but at any rate better than the one which it displaced. He admits also that "further revision" must be made, but first that the government must wait for a report of a tariff investigating commission. This sounds very familiar, and we think ourselves perfectly at home, until we discover that it is Sir Wilfrid Laurier who is talking, and that it is the Canadian tariff which is in question.

The failure of the Taft Administraction to keep its pledges has bred that formidable "insurgent" movement within the Republican ranks which threatens to cripple the party in the next election. In a similar manner thousands of old-time Canadian Liberals must revolt against the Government's neglect to implement the promises upon the strength of which it climbed to power. The position of official Republicanism is preferable to that of official Liberalism in this country, because the Republican party has always stood for a high tariff, while the Liberal leaders preached reciprocity and low tariff and free trade for eighteen years before they ascended the treasury benches.

INSPECTION OF PUBLIC WORKS

The Municipal World, of St. Thomas, a journal paying the closest possible attention to what is going on all over the Province in regard to municipal works, being executed, comments on the matter of inspection of such work. The World points out the difficulty of having plans, which may be well conceived, carried out as intended by the engineer in charge. He may design and make specifications—its the contractor who executes. Between the spirit of the specification and its faithful execution is a very wide opportunity for differences. The contractor's idea may be radically different to that of the engineer. Hence it would seem that there is need for the services of a third party, one who will understand both the theoretical part of the work and with a wider knowledge of the practical. The specification may call for a stone wall, and the details may be laid down; yet four contractors will build four walls in many respects radically different, but all coming within the terms of the specification.

In view of some public works to be commenced in the city it is well to consider what the Municipal World says:—

"The designing engineer cannot himself be always on the ground to give the necessary directions which even skilled artisans require, and between the engineer and the artisan lies the office of the works inspector. The training of the engineer is necessarily made up of what we may term "the practical" and "the theoretical." Both are essential. With the engineer on the one hand, the theoretical should predominate. With the inspector, the practcial is necessarily the most essential feature. The inspector has need of both the theoretical and the practical if he is properly to interpret the engineer's intentions, and at the same time apply them in such a way that the contractor can accept in full his directions.

Contractors, however honest, are chiefly concerned in the profits accuring, not the perfection and durability of the work. The contractor's foreman is chiefly concerned in getting the maximum amount of labor for the minimum wage. His efforts are, of necessity, directed toward that phase of work. It may be accepted as an axiom that the quality of the work cannot be wholly left to the contractor.

Theory alone will not make a good inspector. The predominating qualification of an inspector should be the practical. He should know the different grades and qualities of material. He should know the different grades and qualities of workmanship. how much work a man or men do in a day, and he should know, as far as possible, all those details of machinery and methods of doing work which tend to good and bad results.

The inspector requires technical training, combined with experience, to interpret not so much the letter as the spirit of the plans and specifications. The experienced technical student is on the one hand apt to be too particular over unimportant details; but the layman is careless and pliable in the hands of a determined contractor. A couple of seasons in a minor capacity, with two or three years' technical study, is a training such as will enable an ambitious young man to become a thoroughly efficient inspector.

Towns and cities, all municipalities, are frequent offenders in the matter of inspection. Much municipal work has no inspection whatever. Inspectors, when employed, are apt to be local men with a little influence who have been failures in their own line of work or business. They have great respect for the opinion of the contractor who is doing the work, and very little for the engineer who has designed it. The inferior results and failures throughout the Province in municipal improvements are the unfortunate verification of this situation. When failures occurs, the public look to the engineer as the responsible official and the reputation of the engineering profession has suffered much in consequence.

TRANSPORTING DON JOSE.

What Sir William Van Horne Found When He Went to Cuba.

Before Sir William Van Horne built the Cuba railroad, the transportation problem worried none of the Cuban Dons greatly. The country, according to Norman Rankin in July Canada Monthly, lay dreaming under a centuries-old habit of Spanish leisure. "In fact," he says, "nobody cared much whether school kept or not.

"Under the Spanish regime in Cuba traveling was a serious business. Does Don Jose Miguel Fermandez Filipe Sebastian y Herera desire to go anywhere? That, look you, is a matter for thought. He discusses it gravely with his family and friends for a week or so, over coffee and cigarettes; perhaps at the end of that time he does not feel that there is need for instant haste, and loafs over more cigarettes and fresh coffee for another ten days.

"At last, summoning up his energies, he languidly sends for Pedro, and requests that the conveyance be made ready.

"In a reasonable Spanish time (which anywhere else would be an outrageously unreasonable one) Pedro returns. The volanta-wagon is minus a wheel. Que calamidad! What misfortune! Car-r-ramba! Likewise Voto a Dios! It is to repair it. Exit Pedro.

"Business of interval, and more cigarettes. Re-enter Pedro. The volanta-wagon is repaired, but he is desolated to inform the senor that the off mare is ill. Ah, child of a pig that she is to fall ill on this most auspicious day of days! But, Santissima Maria,—with an outward gesture of the hands that casts Pedro a passive wreck at the senor's illustrious feet—the fact remains that the off mare cannot stand up. More impassioned Spanish, and another interval.

"Eventually on some one of those vista to-morrows, the volanta-wagon is at last ready. Don Jose Miguel Fermandez Filipe Sebastian y Herera deposits himself and all his names in the creaky, wooden-wheeled contraption—and spends heaven only knows how many days of hay-foot straw-foot travel in reaching anywhere.

"But it is so seldom that one wants to reach anywhere," says he, "that what does it matter? Except Englishmen and Americans, who are always wanting some mad thing. It is much better to remain in the cool patio and smoke cigarettes!"

Quebec had a magnificent Labor Day celebration, and the procession was one of the grandest ever seen in the ancient capital.

Stockers and Feeders.

Harry Murby reports the trade for feeders as being brisk, and more choice steers around 900 to 1000 lbs. each would have sold. The stockers trade, that is, light weight steers around 600 to 700 lbs., was not as good as it might be, and several loads of this class were left unsold in the dealers' hands. Prospects point to a slightly easier trade this coming week, as the presence of a lot of farmer visitors at the market, who are attending the exhibition, had a tendency to inflate prices for the day. Mr. Murby bought 100 cattle as follows: Best steers, 900 to 1000 lbs. each, $5 to $5.40; best steers, 800 to 900 lbs. each, $4.85 to $5.25; best stockers, 600 to 700 lbs. each. $4 to $4.50.

Veal Calves.

Two hundred and eleven calves sold at prices ranging from $4 to $7.50, with a very few at $8 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep were unchanged at $4 to $4.75 for ewes, and $3 to $3.50 for rams. Lambs sold from $5.85 to $6.20, the average price being $6 per cwt.

Receipts from all sources were 2460 for the two days. Prices were unchanged at $9 for selects fed and watered, and $8.65 to drovers for hogs f.o.b. cars at country points.

Despite the efforts of the fire brigade this building was destroyed, together with the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Cheesewright. The Bank of Hamilton was almost burned. The buildings are partially covered by insurance. The fire is supposed to be the work of an incendiary.

The Round-Up

A Romance of Arizona

Novelized From Edmund Day's Melodrama

By JOHN MURRAY and MILLS MILLER

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

Returning to the mouth of the arroyo, McKee motioned to his companion to bring out the horses. When this was done the two men cinched the saddles and made every preparation for sudden flight. Lane and the horses remained outside the station behind a freight car on a siding, while McKee stole softly through the open door to "Ole Man" Terrill's side.

Now, the agent used as a safe deposit vault his inside waistcoat pocket, the lock upon which was a huge safety pin. For further defense he carried a revolver, loosely hung at his hip and easily reached. His quickness on the draw in the hour of need and his accuracy of aim made him a formidable antagonist.

Some men are born into the world to become its watchdogs, others to become its wolves. The presence of a human wolf is, as it were, scented by the human watchdog even when the dog is asleep. McKee was known instinctively as a man-wolf to the born guardians of society. Slim Hoover, himself a high type of the man mastiff, used to say of the half breed: "I can smell that b'ar grease he slicks his hair with agin the wind. He may be out o' sight an' out o' mind, when somethin' tells me 'McKee's around.' Then I smell b'ar grease, an' the next thing Bucky shows up with his ingrasheatin' grin. It's alluz 'grease before meet,' as the sky pilot would say."

"Ole Man" Terrill was of the watchdog breed. Whether warned by the instinct of his kind or wakened by the scent of McKee's bear grease, he suddenly opened his eyes. Like all men accustomed to emergencies, he was instantly in full possession of his wits, yet he pretended to be slightly confused in order to get a grasp upon the situation before greeting his visitor.

"Howdy, Buck?" he said, adjusting his revolver as he swung half round in his chair that he might reach his weapon more readily in an emergency. "Bustin' or busted?"

"Well, I'm about even with the game," replied McKee, pulling from his pocket a bag of tobacco and papers and deftly rolling a butterfly cigarette. "Goin' to shake it before I lose my pile. It's me fer the Lazy K. Dropped in to say goodby."

Terrill, who had recently had an expensive seance with McKee at poker, remonstrated.

"You ought to give me another chance at you, Buck. Yer goin' away with too much o' my money."

"Well, ole man, I'm likely to rob you uv a lot more ef you hain't keerful," answered McKee.

"You can't jest yit awhile," said Terrill. "Dead broke."

"Aw, come off! Everybody knows yer a walkin' bank. Bet you got three thousan' in that inside pocket uv yourn this minute."

Terrill started at McKee's naming the exact amount he was carrying. He forgot his customary caution in his surprise. "Well, you did jes' hit it, shore enough. I believe yer half gypsy instid o' half Injun. Jes' like yer knowin' I stood pat on four o' a kind when you had aces full an' throwin' down yer cyards 'fore I c'u'd git even with you. How do you do it, Buck?"

McKee gave a smile of cunning, inscrutable superiority. "Oh, it's jes' a power I have. 'Keen sabby,' as the greasers say—I'm keen on the know how. Why, I kin tell you more about the money. It's fer Jack Payson"—

"Now, there's whar yer way off as a cleervoyant, Buck," said Terrill triumphantly. "You guessed oncet too often. The three thousan' is county money, consigned to Sheriff Hoover. Jack Payson has jes' lef' with a package from K. C., but it wasn't money. It was a purty gilt chair—a weddin' present fer the gal he's goin' to marry."

At that moment the sounder of the telegraph began clicking the call of the station. Terrill whirled about in his swivel chair and faced the table.

McKee stood close behind him. His lips twitched nervously. His eyes narrowed as he watched every movement of the agent's big shoulders as he operated the key. At the same time the half breed drew his revolver and covered the back of Terrill's head.

The agent completed his message and turned to continue his interrupted conversation. He found himself gazing into the muzzle of a 44—big, it seemed, as a thirteen inch gun. "Why—what?" he stammered.

"I'm actin' jes' now as Slim's deppity," said McKee. "Unbutton an' han' that money over."

Once having his victim in his power, all the innate cruelty of the Indian blood of his maternal ancestors flashed to the surface. Terrill was at his mercy. For one desperate moment he would play with him, even torture him as his forefathers had once made miserable the last moments of a captive. He knew that unless he silenced Terrill his life must pay the forfeit. Death was the penalty of detection. The arm of the express company was long. Ultimate capture was certain.

Gazing into the muzzle of a 44.

Pursued out of Arizona by the sheriff, he would be trailed through every camp and town in the far west.

With an oath, Terrill tried to rise and face his antagonist, reaching for his revolver as he did so. The butt of his weapon had caught in the arm of his chair, hampering his movements.

McKee threw him roughly back into the chair.

"Throw up yer han's!" he cried. "Don't try that!"

Up went Terrill's hands high over his head. He faced the open window. Not a sign of help was in sight.

Quickly the agent turned over in his mind various schemes to foil McKee, who now stood behind him with the muzzle of his revolver pressing into the middle of his back. Each was rejected before half conceived.

McKee laughed sneeringly, saying, "You oughtn't to be so keerless to show whar you cache yer roll."

Terrill made no reply. His hope of escape was slowly fading.

McKee had reached his left hand over his prisoner's shoulder to disarm Terrill, who moved slightly away from him, drawing in his feet as he did so.

One chance had come to him. He knew that if he failed death was certain, yet he determined to take the risk in order to retrieve the slip he had made in admitting that he had money in his possession to a gambling crony, and so to keep clean his record for trustiness, of which he was so proud. This last desperate resource was an old wrestler's trick—one with which he had conquered others in the rough games of the corral.

Again Terrill moved to the right and farther under McKee, who had to extend his arm and body far beyond an upright position. Holding his revolver against Terrill handicapped the half breed in his movements.

With a quick turn Terrill grasped McKee's left arm, jerking it down sharply on his shoulder. With his right hand he grasped the back of his antagonist's neck, pulling his head downward and inward. Using his shoulder for a fulcrum, with a mighty heave of his legs and back he sought to toss McKee over his head.

So surprised for an instant was the cowboy by the suddenness of the attack that he made no effort to escape the clutches of the desperate express agent.

His feet had left the floor and he was swinging in the air before his finger pressed the trigger.

There was a muffled report.

The two men fell in a heap on the floor, McKee on top. Dazed and shaken, McKee scrambled to his feet. The air was pungent with odor of powder smoke. Terrill rolled over on his side, trembled convulsively and died. He had paid the penalty for a moment's indiscretion with his life.

McKee quickly unfastened the pin and seized the roll of bills. Skimming through the package, he smiled with satisfaction to see that the most of it was in small bills and none of them stained.

Carefully avoiding the fast forming pool of blood which was oozing from the hole in the dead man's head, he hurried to the door.

A glance showed him the coast was clear. Running across the tracks, he joined Lane, who was waiting for him behind the freight car with impatience.

In silence they mounted their horses. For a short distance McKee led the way upon the railroad track in order to leave no hoofprints and then struck across the desert toward the hills in the south.

"Why did you shoot?" gasped Lane.

"He drew on me," snarled McKee. "It wasn't Dick's money, but you'll get half. Shut up."

The burning sun rose higher and higher. The buzzard dropped lower in the sky. The silence of death brooded over the railroad station.

CHAPTER V.

UNKNOWN to Bud Lane and Buck McKee, who were rioting in Florence, Jack Payson had hurried up the wedding. Colonel Jim had wheedled Josephine into consenting that it should take place two months ahead of the time that had been fixed. "April is the month fer flowers, Josie, an' we'll let you weep all you please."

Two weeks' notice, however, gave scant time for preparation for the important ceremony that Mrs. Allen deemed necessary. During this period the busiest spot in Arizona was the kitchen of Allen Hacienda. An immense cake, big as a cheese, was the crowning effort of Josephine, who wept copiously at the thought of losing her daughter as she measured and mixed the ingredients. A layer of frosting an inch in thickness incrusted this masterpiece of the art of pastry making. Topping the creation were manikins of a bride and bridegroom.

There was a muffled report.

This climax of the bridal cake had been brought up by wagon from Tucson with more caution than if it were a month's cleanup of a paying mine. Mrs. Allen permitted no one to go near the artistic achievement. Others might look at it from afar, but at the slightest movement to get close to it she would push the observer back with the warning: "Keep yer dirty fingers off o' it. 'Tain't common icin'; that's confectionary."

Enough chickens to feed a darky camp meeting were killed for the feast. Fried, roasted, cold or minced as tamales, the dishes filled ovens and tables and overflowed into the springhouse. Favorite recipes carried across the plains by the wives of the argonauts met in rivalry with the dishes of the cooks of old Mexico.

Colonel Allen wandered aimlessly about the ranch while the preparations for the feast were in progress. The women folk drove him from one favorite loafing place to another. His advice was scorned and his wishes made a subject for jests.

Defiantly he had taken full charge of the liquid refreshments. A friendly barkeeper in Tucson, acting under his orders, had shipped to him cases of champagne, a barrel of beer and a siphon of seltzer. Why the seltzer he never could explain. Later the unlucky bottle marred the supper and nearly caused a tragedy. A guest picked it up and peered into the metal tube to see how "the durned thing" worked.

A Lesson In Anatomy.

A professor at one of our universities is very witty upon occasion.

A medical student once asked if there were not some works on anatomy more recent than those in the college library.

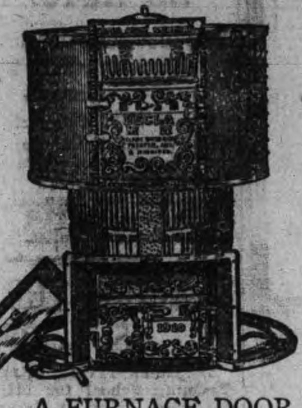
HECLA FURNACE

—And The Little Things That Mean So Much to You

We are not going to talk about the big features of the "Hecla"—the FUSED JOINTS, that keep the house free of gas and smoke—or the STEEL RIBBED FIREPOT, that saves one ton of coal in seven.

The talk is of little things that our 30 years experience has perfected.



A LARGE DOOR, big enough to take the biggest shovel of coal or chunk of wood.

A DUST FLUE, that actually carries off all dust so that you don't look as if you had fallen in the flour barrel after you shake the furnace.

A DAMPER REGULATOR, by which you can regulate the drafts and checks without going into the cellar.

A FURNACE DOOR that really locks, and locks airtight. INDIVIDUAL GRATE BARS that enable you to clean your fire without getting down on your knees with a poker.

There are many other big and little things about the "Hecla" that should be familiar to every man who is going to put in a new furnace this year.

They are all illustrated and described in our new furnace book, "Hecla Heated Homes."

A young man from Peterborough arrived in town on the 10 o'clock train last evening in search of a young chap who he claims broke into his trunk and stole $265. Both men were guests at the Prince George hotel, where the robbery took place. The Peterborough man refused to give his name, but stated that the thief registered as James Ferguson, of Toronto.

He visited all the local hotels last evening, but failed to locate his man, who, perhaps, did not come this way. The Peterborough police are also scouring the country for the accused robber.

OBITUARY

Death of Two Infants

Death claimed Gerald Patrick McGarrity, this morning, the three-months' old child of Mr. Thomas McGarrity, 650 Concession street. The little fellow had been ill only a short time. The funeral will take place tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock to St. Joseph's cemetery, Douro.

The death occurred this morning at seven o'clock, of James Harold Watson, aged one year. He was the son of Mr. John Nicholas Watson, 425 Chambers street. Cholera infantum was the cause of death. The funeral will be held at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon to Little Lake cemetery. Rev. Canon Davidson will conduct the service.

CAME TO CITY THIS MORNING

Rev. Mr. Carpenter the New Curate of St. John's Has Arrived in Peterborough

Rev. Charles Carpenter, the new curate at St. John's, arrived in the city from Montreal this morning and will take up his duties at once.

He was met at the train by Rev. Canon Davidson and Mr. R. J. Devey, organist of St. John's.

TRUSTEE BOARD IN SESSION

The Trustee Board of Mark street Methodist church were in session last evening, and a couple of important matters of business were disposed of. Owing to the departure of Mr. Allan McCarthy, secretary of the Trustee Board, who has gone to Toronto, it was necessary for a successor to be appointed. Mr. Samuel Taylor was the unanimous choice of the members of the Board. He has had previous experience in this capacity and is a zealous worker in the church.

Another matter which came up was the resignation of Miss Spiers, organist, which was accepted. Correspondence is being carried on with the object of engaging Miss Tate, a clever organist and vocalist, of Hastings. If Miss Tate is secured it is probable that she will open up classes in the city for students of piano music and voice culture.

BY THE WAY

The deed is done, the street is sprayed
With stuff—the dust lies smothered,
And henceforth with a coat of white,
Our clothes will not be covered.

But let us hope, that when we leave,
This world of knocks and toil,
The streets which lead up to the gate,
Will not be spread with oil.

The kids once more to school have gone,
Their books to ponder o'er,
And incidentally, find a place,
To hide the wee small core.

The summer has just passed us by,
Once more we feel the chill,
And stand aghast—our last year's coat
This year won't fill the bill.

The Gordian Knot

ELLIOTT—HOUSON.

One of the most charming weddings of this summer was solemnized in the Methodist church of Norwood on Wednesday, Sept 7th, when Miss May Elizabeth Houson, of Norwood, was united in marriage to Mr. Laurie Benjamin Elliott, C. E., of Calgary, Alta. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Houson, of Norwood. Only a few intimate friends of the bride and groom were present at the ceremony, and the Rev. W. B. Tucker, B.A., of Norwood, officiated.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was prettily attired in a handsome costume of cream liberty satin, entraine embroidered in seed pearls, with yoke and sleeves of carrick, macross lace with a surplice bodice effect, and pleated girdle with a cabachon of pearls falling in directoire lines with a fashionable overdress of embroidered chiffon. The bridal veil was caught with a chaplet of orange blossoms. She carried a beautiful bridal bouquet of cream la France roses.

The two bridesmaids, Miss Edith Elliott, of Dartmouth, N.S., and Miss Anna Houson, sister of the bride, were also charmingly attired, Miss Elliott wearing a gown of cream silk, finished with rich trimmings of fashionable embroideries and insertions, while Miss Houson's dress was of nattier blue satin with bebe Irish lace yoke and sleeves edged with gold cloth. Both bridesmaids wore black picture hats.

Mr. William R. Houson, of Stirling, acted as groomsman.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Elliott were assisted in the receiving by Mrs. Alfred Elliott, of Dartmouth, N.S., mother of the groom, and by Mrs. W. R. Houson, mother of the bride.

Mrs. Elliott wore a very beautiful costume of black silk with net yoke sleeves and black hat to match. Mrs. Houson wore a pearl grey mousselaine satin gown and black sequin hat.

Among the guests from a distance were Dr. and Mrs. O. C. Houson, of Kalazamoo; Mrs. Alfred Elliott, Miss Edith Elliott and Mrs. H. B. Russell, of Dartmouth, N.S.; Miss Jones, of Calgary, Alta.; Miss Leitch, of Toronto; Mrs. Stevens, Miss Clemens and Miss Rutledge, of Bowmanville.

Mr. Elliott, the groom, is a civil engineer in the employ of the Dominion Government at Calgary, Alta.

Mr. and Mrs. Elliott left on the 4.05 C.P.R. train on a wedding tour to Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago and St. Paul en route to their home in Calgary.

GIBSON—PARRINGTON

The marriage took place in Holy Trinity Church, Toronto, on Monday, September 5th of Alice Parrington of Aylmer Street, Peterboro', to Mr. Ernie Gibson of Toronto. The young couple were unattended. Rev. Canon Dixon officiated, the bride looking very graceful in a navy blue travelling suit with hat to match. After a dainty wedding breakfast, the couple left on a tour extending over the Western States. On their return they will reside in Toronto.

The bride was the recipient of many handsome and costly wedding gifts among them being a beautiful diamond ring, the gift of the groom.

HENRY—BRODIE.

The following is from the Toronto Star of Saturday, September 3rd. The bride is a granddaughter of his Worship County Magistrate Edmison, K. C., and he with other members of his family, attended the nuptials;

A pretty wedding took place this afternoon at three o'clock, when the marriage of Marjorie Helen, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Brodie, and Mr. Norman F. Henry, son of Mr. K. J. Henry, of Rockliffe, Ottawa, was performed by Rev. Mr. Stephens. The wedding took place in the Avenue Road Presbyterian Church, which was beautifully decorated with palms, ferns, and pink asters. The guests' seats were tied with white satin ribbon and large bunches of white asters.

To the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by the organist, the bride entered the church on the arm of her father. Her gown was handsome in its simplicity. It was ivory duchess satin, silver net yoke, Dutch neck and short kimona sleeves. She wore a tulle veil caught with a coronet of orange blossoms which had been worn by her mother. Her bouquet was a shower of lilies of the valley and roses. Her only jewellery was the groom's gift, a gold chased bracelet.

Miss Leslie Forbes was bridesmaid, wearing white coin spotted net over white satin, a wide sash of satin ribbon threaded through large medallions tied the skirt in near the hem. The sleeves were made in kimona style, a berthe of applique touched with pale blue being draped around the yoke. Her hat was a Charlotte Corday shape, trimmed with blue plumes and pink roses. She carried a large bouquet of Killarney roses tied with satin ribbbon. The groom's gift to her was a pearl bow-knot brooch.

The ushers were Mr. Kenneth Green and Mr. Austin Reiffenstein, both of Ottawa. The groom's gift to them was pearl tie pins. Mr. Willis O'Connor, of Ottawa, was best man, and received gold cuff links.

Before the ceremony the guests sang "The Voice that Breathed o'er Eden," and during the signing of the register Mrs. Herbert Plant sang "O Fair, O Sweet, O Holy." Mrs. Plant wore her wedding gown of satin and chiffon and a large white picture hat with lilacs. On leaving the church the organist played Mendelssohn's wedding march. The groom gave Mrs. Plant a pretty pearl brooch.

Mrs. Brodie held a reception at their residence, 125 Kendall avenue. Refreshments were served from a table decorated with lilies of the valley and roses. About eighty guests were present. Mrs. Brodie wore a becoming pearl grey crepe de chine, face garnitures. Her hat was of grey velvet with plumes to match.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry left for a trip to New York and then Bermuda for a month. On their return they will reside at 125 Kendall avenue. The bride's travelling gown was of Alice blue Rajah silk and felt toque, silk and Persian touches, and a feather mount.

SPORTING NEWS

WILL PACE THAT KILLS GET BLACK CHAMPION

Jack Johnson, great fighter that he is, will only hold the championship title until a better man comes along and whips him, as will surely happen in due course of time. Johnson is no more formidable than Sullivan was in his time, or more to be feared than Jeffries at a later date.

Peter Jackson, Joe Walcott, Joe Gans and George Dixon were all high-class negro fighters, and yet they met their conquerors by staying in the game too long. Johnson will meet his and it may not be as long as some men think before he loses first place in the pugilistic ranks to a younger and better man. Johnson has made a great deal of money in his last two fights and the theatrical exhibitions which followed, and he is sure to take life easier and live faster than he would when he was only getting $50 or $100 for a bout and had to keep down to plain grub and cheap lodging.

The luxurious life which Johnson will lead in the next few years is bound to undermine his great strength and sap his vitality and in the mean time some husky, hearty young fellow will come along and once more there will be an upset such as happened when the stripling Corbett beat the hitherto unbeaten champion Sullivan at New Orleans, when Fitzsimmons beat Corbett at Carson City and when Johnson sent Jeffries into pugilistic oblivion at Reno.

The finest steel will lose its edge with careless handling, and, while Johnson looks at this writing as the one man in the whole army of pugilists, yet he will soon go to pieces unless he keeps himself in perfect condition, which it will be almost impossible for him to do for any length of time with a bank roll of over $1000,000 and surrounded by the temptations to take things easy, as he surely will be.

WALTER JOHNSON'S REACH GIVES HIM GREAT SPEED

Chicago, Sept. 8.—Ever since Walter Johnson, of the Washington American team, broke into fast company, opposing players have marvelled at his great speed.

With an easy motion, Johnson seems to be able to send the sphere through space at such a terrific pace that even the batsman knows that the ball will come on a straight course he is unable to meet it with his stick.

Johnson gets his speed by reason of his wonderful reach. He has longer arms that any other pitcher in the country, and pitches with the least effort.

When his arms are stretched out they measure 77 3-4 inches from finger tips to finger tips. This is 2 3-4 inches longer than Jeffries' reach and 5 3-4 inches longer than Jack Johnson's.

When he releases a ball after having wound up his long right arm it goes through space with the speed of a bullet.

Few, indeed, are the pitchers who can score strikeout after strikeout without resorting to the use of spit balls or curves, as does Johnson. He has frequently struck out three men on nine pitched balls without ever using a curve.

It is Johnson's speed that makes him one of the most marvellous pitchers the game has ever produced, and it is his great long arm that gives him the speed.

Not since the days of Amos Rusie, the famous pitcher of the New York Giants, in the early 90's, has the game shown a pitcher with the speed of Johnson. Unitl Johnson made his appearance in fast company no pitcher had ever been seen in the big circuit who had anything like the speed Rusie possessed.

BRIEF AND BREEZY

Peterborough is entering a fast junior team in the O. R. F. U. this year according to reports from the Lift Lock city. They have had some cracking good junior teams in Peterborough before.—Toronto Telegram.

T. A. S. baseball team will practice at Riverside Park at two o'clock Saturday afternoon in preparation for the proposed game on the following Saturday.

W. H. Brooks a Kingston wrestler, will meet Hassan Abaddallah, the Turk wrestler, in North Cobalt Park, September 20th, for a side bet of $200 and gate receipts. The Turk has been in Cobalt district for six weeks, taking on all comers, but has not met Brooks yet. Both men are in fairly good condition, but Brooks has been on the sick list for two weeks and has not been able to practice, but will be on the mat again this week, if possible. Brooks is quite confident of winning on the 20th.

The first big bet on the coming world's series of baseball games was made by a prominent Pittsburger, who, assuming that the Cubs and the Athletics will be the contestants, wagered $1,000 to $800 on the Cubs.

The Leafs wafted safely fifteen times yesterday, winning from Buffalo 9—1. McGinley made the only error.

Lajoie, of the "Big Four" made two hits, Speaker and Wagner one each, but Snodgrass didn't hit.

Mr. Charles Armstrong has sold his stallion, "Harry R.," to Mr. G. A. Sayers, of Latchford, Temiskaming, for the sum of $750.00. This splendid animal is a son of Hermit, 2.16 1-2, and stepped a trial heat a few days before the sale, in 2.25.—Havelock Standard.

In the latter days of the English prize ring innumerable expedients had to be devised to bring off a fight. A favorite plan was to pitch the ring on the border of two counties, so that the question of magisterial jurisdiction might be rendered difficult. Another plan was to charter a steamboat and proceed down the Thames to some lonely police forsaken spot in the marshes of Essex. For the memorable contest between Sayers and Heenan in 1860 a special train was run from London bridge to a secret destination. But the passengers, who comprised members of Parliament, peers, pickpockets, pugilists, clergy, and, it is said, a few bishops, cheerfully took tickets simply marked "excursion." They presently found themselves near Farnborough, in Surrey, where the fight occurred.—London Chronicle.

Mrs. Jessie Smith, an aged lady, fell downstairs at London, and died of shock in a few minutes.

Statistics prove indisputably that the increased use of such a pure and wholesome beverage as Regal Lager ensures a decrease in any community's record of intemperance. That alone suggests the truth that Regal is NOT an intoxicant.

Building Superstitions.

In remote times a sacrifice of some kind was always offered at the completion of a building, either public or private. Sacrifices were not only offered at the completion of structures of all kinds. The foundations themselves were usually laid in blood, whether the structure was a castle, bridge, cottage or church. Originally—tracing the subject back to heathenish times—the sacrifice was offered to the god under whose protection the building was placed. In early Christian times the bloody rite was retained, but was given another significance. In those days it was generally believed that no edifice would stand unless the cornerstone was laid in mortar mixed with blood. Usually the blood was obtained by sacrificing a dog, a pig, a wolf, a black cock or a goat, and not infrequently some malefactor's blood was poured out to make the ceremony more impressive.

PEACE NOW THE MANIA IN BRITAIN

London, Sept. 9.—(Mail Correspondence.)—There is no denying that we are wonderfully amiable these days. Ever since the death of Edward the Peacemaker, when the country had an object lesson in the amount of distinction that can be obtained by one man alone by the mere effort to induce opposing nations and sections of thought to be reasonable and compose their differences, the attitude of pacific good nature has been assiduously cultivated by many worthy sections of the community until, as the "Commentator"—a new periodical—remarks, it has become a mania.

As all the world knows the Lords and Commons have been subjected to the conciliating process for weeks by means of the veto conference. The suffragists have been dealt with by a Conciliation Bill, which passed its second reading in the Commons and may, so the ladies hope, pass the third at some vague date in the autumn. Conciliation boards arbitrate in the disputes between capital and labor and up to recently the popular pose has been one of unqualified approval of their result. In short, if one is to judge by what one hears and reads, the inference is that all the lions and all the lambs are about to lie down together in accordance with programmes planned a few centuries ago and the millennium may be expected any minute.

ARTIFICIAL PEACE.

This is all very pretty and no one would object to the very laudable desire for peace which it reveals if it were not also a bit artificial. For while sundry people are purring over the "success" of the conference—the result of which has not yet been announced—we find the Lords accused of disfranchising sundry worthy voters who didn't manage to pay their taxes before July 20th, as the taxpayers were sent to them later than usual owing to the passing of the bidget being postponed in consequence of its rejection by the Upper House. The "reconciled." Liberals—who insisted on the veto being considered before the budget—were properly shocked at this. Also the Suffragettes, having heard rumors that their bill was to be dropped, are breathing out threatenings and slaughter if it fails to pass in the autumn session. Truly, under such circumstances one is justified in suspecting that the present popular conciliatory pose is "too sweet to be wholesome," and that after all the millennium is side-tracked — and is likely to postpone its long expected arrival.

Nevertheless peace is the ideal of the the moment and there is much applause for Sir Wilfrid Laurier's suggestion to the farmers of Western Canada when in response to demands for "reciprocity with the United States and free trade with Britain—he told them that as Americans by birth and Britons by adoption they have it in their power to bring about an alliance with the two countries which when accomplished would ensure the peace of the world for generations.

But, as Sir Wilfrid Laurier himself admits, such dreams are too bright to be realized, though it is natural enough that most people should like to dream them. The Canadian Premier's words have delighted many shades and sections of thinkers in this country, only the British imperialist remains deaf to their charm. This sturdy upholder of the Empire is greatly struck by the demand of the Western farmers for "reciprocity with the United States and free trade with Britain." He takes his stand on the fact that it is a contradiction in terms since for Canada to enter into a commercial connection with her Southern neighbor would be to retire with her behind a high tariff wall built up against Great Britain. Moreover, Canadian correspondents to the imperialist's favorite papers assert that the Western farmer is trying to break down the tariff wall, now the only real barrier between the United States and Canada, as the first step towards annexing the latter country to the former. The "free trade with Britain" clause being thrown in to give a flavor of loyalty to the flag under the protection of which they live, and so, if possible, catch the vote of the loyal East Canadian. Consequently the British imperialist distrusts the Western farmer, regarding him as one who is willing to betray the land in which he earns prosperity to the land of his origin with the Judas kiss of pretended loyalty to the former. He is confirmed in this view by letters written to the papers by Canadians now in England who claim to know Canada from East to West and who amplify the views of the regular correspondents.

Nevertheless even the imperialist has moments when he drops his suspicions and is inclined to listen happily to the note of the dove of peace. Indeed few people could find much to object to in the suggestion now being put forward that in 1914 there should be a monster demonstration both in the United States and Great Britain of the unbroken peace which if all goes well should then have endured between the two countries for a century. In good sooth the idea is captivating, and would, if carried into effect, do much to sweeten the world's politics.

CENTENARY OF PEACE.

Another celebration which the United States and Great Britain are likely to join hands is in the commemoration of the centenary of the birth of Charles Dickens which takes place next year. Dickens is the most spontaneous enthusiasm which the average American of literary tastes cultivates for any author who is not of his own country. Shakespeare and Browning have hosts of enthusiastic admirers in the United States, but in a great number of cases the taste for these authors is an acquired one, having been carefully cultivated by societies formed for the purpose. But Dickens seems to appeal to the average American to an extent that puzzles many who remember how severely the great novelist lampooned the great Republic at one time. The fact of the matter is that the high spirits of "Boz," his quotable wit, and his knack of creating lovable types pleases the good natured humorous American immensely. Neither "Martin Chuzzlewit" nor "American Notes" will hinder our transatlantic cousins from joining in next year's celebrations if—as Mrs. Gamp would say—"they feel so disposed." In the meantime the occasion has brought to light certain circumstances in the Dickens family which will certainly have to be rectified if the celebration is to be seemly. It is stated that among the descendants of the genius of whom England is so proud are certain members who are so straitened in means as not to be far removed from actual poverty. A novel scheme to help has just been evolved. It is proposed that a small stamp shall be issued commemorating the centenary and that those who own sets or even scattered copies of the novelist's work should buy them at a penny each and stick them on each book inside the cover. It is estimated that this will raise a substantial fund if the idea finds favor with the majority of Dickensites in this country.

Another original philanthropic scheme has been devised for the benefit of the Slum Children's Fresh Air Fund. It happens that the Bioscope Company has the films illustrating King Edward's funeral procession so treated that it will last for a very great many years to come. This has been sold at a reduction to the promoters of the F.A.F. who will exhibit the scroll at a variety of special bioscope theaters and devote the proceeds to providing poor children with a short country holiday. The Bioscope Company has given as a contribution the use of three or four of its numerous theatres gratis on a certain afternoon in the current week. It is to be hoped that these performances are largely attended and there is little doubt that they will prove attractive. For there was general regret when the cinematograph representation of the King's funeral was withdrawn in favor of the trivial little skits and farces which are generally the subject of moving picture shows. Those who saw both the funeral and the bioscope reproduction of it declare that the latter was an eminently satisfactory way of witnessing the great event having the added advantage of no long waiting and no inconvenience from the heat of the sun and other disagreeables.

HISTORY IN PICTURES.

The fact that a film may be preserved for as many as forty years suggests that the cinematograph has a future before it as a recorder of historic events. In days to come people who want to realize the magnificence of epoch-making happenings which took place before they were born, or desire to see how historic personages really looked and moved on special occasions may only have to "turn on" a cinematograph and they will have the whole thing before them, vivid, accurate and lifelike. It has scientific possibilities also as a cinematograph recently proved who took two days and two nights to photograph the growing budding and blossoming of sundry flowers. The process compressed down into two minutes when shown at a London music hall last week is said to have been one of the most interesting of all the trurns.

In short there seems to be no end to the wonders that the age is producing for our edification, and one achievement of the human genius follows so fast upon another that we are beginning to take it as a matter of course. Three years ago the man who attempted to take a jaunt via the air from Wales to London and who did so in the errie dark of the night—occasionally, as day approached, using a megaphone to enquire of the few people he saw below whether he was on the rigth road, would have created a great sensation. Yet when Mr. Willows flew from Cardiff to within a short distance of the Crystal Palace a few nights ago, the fact, though duly advertised in the largest type on newspaper placards caused very little excitement. And yet the event was a memorable one. And yet the event was a memorable one. The hero of the trip is the first man to cross the Bristol Channel by air and that he did so in a machine which he designed and built himself makes it all the more remarkable, especially as he is only twenty-four years of age.

It looks as if we were satiated with wonderful achievements and perhaps some of our apathy owes its origin to a good many keen spirits being out of town just now while those who still linger are a bit tired after the whirl and emotional excitements of the embroidery and cut-velvet, that surpass all that one has ever dreamed of in these arts, till the very wonder and admiration of it all brings overwhelming fatigue. It is better to rest outside among the gay flower beds and dazzling white buildings, listening to the exquisite playing of the various military bands — a sphere of music in which Great Britain excels all other nations—and in watching the cosmopolitan crowd that passes by marvelling at the fascinating result which ensues when East and West meet in friendly rivalry.

For those who care for a little gentle excercise, there is the Garden of Peace where one wanders about among surroundings that may be described as novel, but which are nevertheless strangely familiar. That pointed bridge over a little narrow canal, that conical hill up which a corkscrew path meanders, that symmetrical waterfall dropping so neatly from a neighboring height—all that one has seen before. A pause for reflection, and memory prompts one faithfully—the Garden of Peace and the scenery of the Willow Pattern Plate are identical.

Good, Better or Best?

A VITAL DIFFERENCE IN BREADS

QUALITY you know is comparative. Just as much so in bread, as in woolens or linens.

If you make bread at all you naturally want it to be good—as good as, or better than your neighbor's.

But is your bread as good as it ought to be? Does it furnish its full quantum of health and strength? Is it nutritious as well as delicious?

Ordinary flour makes fairly good looking bread. But if you care for food value, for nutrition, for digestibility, for bone and muscle and blood building quality, you will want a flour rich in the highest quality of gluten. You will want the flour that makes bread not only good-to-look-at, but also makes it strength-producing, health-producing.

But where can you get such flour and how can you tell it from the kind that isn't nourishing?

The safe way is to get OGILVIE'S "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD". Then you can't make a mistake.

"ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" is the finest flour in the world and makes the best bread in the world.

And it is just as good for Pastry as it is for Bread. It is the one flour which has proved an unqualified success for every household purpose. And its absolute uniformity guarantees you against failure—

ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR isn't just ordinary wheat sent to an ordinary mill and ground by the ordinary process. It is Manitoba Red Fyfe Wheat which is especially rich in high quality gluten, scientifically milled and subjected to scientific chemical tests as well as baking tests before it comes to you in sack or barrel, etc.

No wonder "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" makes the finest and most nourishing bread. No wonder it makes the most delicious and healthful pies, cakes, biscuits, muffins, rolls.

Bread made from ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR is vastly more nourishing than bread made from ordinary flour. Also it is lighter, flakier, more delicious as well as more nutritious.

Order "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" at once. Don't delay. The sooner you commence using this finest of all flours the better for your family.

What is believed to be the most important agricultural discovery of the last half-century is reported from the session of the British Association. Drs. Russell and Hutchison announce the discovery of the microbe which destroys the bacteria which are essential to fertility of the soil.

Rev. W. M. Grant, pastor of St. Andrew's, Markham, has resigned his charge and will spend two years in post-graduate work in Scotland.

A BIG MIDWAY FOR THE PETERBORO' FAIR

"Tickets here!"

The Midway is always the main parade of any fair, and this year the directors promise to be able to substantially back up any advance announcements in connection with the Midway of Peterborough Fair. Special pains and expense have been gone to to secure the best Midway attractions available.

A FEATURE TROUPE.

The grandstand performance will be a vaudeville bill of high standing, including a troupe of Japanese balancing and acrobatic artists that have created a furore at the big American summer parks during the past summer. The performance will be given on all three days of the fair, and on the evening of the second day when the round of entertainment will be supplemented by the most gorgeous display of fireworks ever seen in Peterborough. The fireworks programme will be a novel and mammoth one, and many fantastic and bewildering designs of an ingenious character in fireworks display will be introduced.

"SCHOOL DAYS."

The merry-go-round now being operated at the National Exhibition, Toronto, will be on the grounds, and another novelty of special interest to the little ones, as well as the big ones, who were little themselves once, will be the miniature railway.

Taking everything into consideration the Peterborough Fair this year promises to put a deep shadow over all preceding successes in the way of the Electric City's fall exhibitions.

INTERESTING LETTER FROM TRAVELLERS IN THE WEST

Mr. J. G. Weir who, with Mrs. Weir, is on a trip to the western provinces, writes the following interesting letter to the Review;—

Lake Superior S.S. Assiniboia, Sept 8th, 1910.

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—My wife and I have spent six weeks very pleasantly on our trip to the west, going by C. P. R. S.S. 'Athabaska' from Owen Sound to Fort William. We were in company with a lot of ministers and delegates on their way to the Methodist General Conference at Victoria, B.C. At Calgary we were joined by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his party, and were at his receptions and meetings in ten different cities—Calgary, Banff, Field, Vancouver, New Westminster and Victoria, B.C. From Victoria Sir Wilfrid and party journeyed north to Prince Rupert, and we came east to Revelstoke, and south on the Arrow Lakes and Columbia River to West Robison, on the C.P.R. palatial steamer, and from there to the cities of Trail and Rossland. At Rossland we went down in the mines 2,300 feet, where they get gold, silver, copper and lead. At the city of Trail we remained eight days with Mayor Weir. From Trail we came up the beautiful and wonderful Kootenay valley to the city of Nelson, where we were again joined by the Laurier party on August 29th. From Nelson we all travelled by C.P. R. steamer to Kootenay landing, where the party took the government train and we the C.P.R. train to the Crow's Nest, where we all remained over night at the summit, where the water divides, one stream wending its way to the Pacific Ocean and the other to Hudson Bay and on to the Atlantic Ocean. There, too, is the boundary between Alberta and British Columbia. Next day we attended Sir Wilfrid's meeting at Lethbridge, and the next at Medicine Hat, where the city was beautifully decorated, in honor of the distinguished guests. The city fathers allowed the natural gas well to burn, and this made a magnificent display. In Winnipeg, on Sunday last, we parted with Sir Wilfrid's party, but we had the company of a lot of ministers returning from the conference at Victoria, B.C., and also a lot of Roman Catholic clergymen going to the Eucharistic Congress at Montreal. So, you see, if we are not good Liberals and Christians it is not the fault of our company.

From the mountains to near Moosejaw the crops and grass is dried out, and worthless, even up to Calgary. From Moosejaw to Winnipeg the grain crop is the best I ever seen.

Yours truly,
J. G. WEIR.

FLYING BEING MADE A BUSINESS IN ENGLAND

London, Eng., Sept. 9.—England has suddenly waked up to the possibilities of the business side of flying, and young men who not many months ago had never seen an aeroplane, are now the owners of machines, and are risking their necks in their hurry to be able to compete for the great prizes that are being offered at aviation meetings throughout Europe.

The rewards of the successful European aviator are on a colossal scale. Morane, the young Frenchman, cleared up as the result of the recent Bournemouth meeting, seventeen thousand dollars. Claud Grahame White in the same time made seven thousand dollars, and has been engaged to give a fortnight's exhibition flights at Blackpool at a fee of ten thousand dollars. Louis Bleriot, hero of the first flight from Dover to Calais, Louis Paulhan, who won the "Daily Mail" fifty thousand dollar prize, and Henri Farman, have made great fortunes in the past twelve months, and will make much greater sums—with more safety—in the future, as dealers of aeroplanes and teachers of aviation.

It was not until the beginning of this spring that Englishmen realized the possibilities before the successful aviator, who was willing to take his life in his hands at any moment of the day and make a flight for the amusement of the paying public. The great meeting at Rheims last year first opened the eyes of the world to the wonders that had been accomplished in the science of flight mostly by Frenchmen who had profited from the experiments and experience of Orville and Wilbur Wright, and who, if they did not actually steal the Wright brothers' patents, at any rate stole their principles, and prospered by the work the Wrights had been carrying on silently and patiently for so many years.

A three-year-old boy named John A. O'Brien fell off his father's waggon at Richmond, N. S., and received injuries of which he died.

CHARGE MIGHT HAVE BEEN ONE OF MANSLAUGHTER

William Wallace Had Narrow Escape--His Assaulter Fined $40.50

William Wallace, who was assaulted, last Saturday evening and taken to the Nicholls Hospital, suffering from wounds on the head, was discharged yesterday.

This morning Magistrate Dumble heard Wallace's version of the affair and imposed a fine of $20 on his assaulter, with $10 compensation and costs amounting in all to $40.50.

His Worship's comment was that he regarded the offence as a serious one and added that the accused was lucky in not having to face a charge of manslaughter.

County Crown Attorney Wood, prosecuted and Mr. A. P. Pousette acted for the accused.

THE ASSAULT.

Wallace denied having been intoxicated at the time. He had treated a friend and then invited the other man to have a drink. Jokes passed between them, and the third man said, "I don't like you." He (Wallace) retaliated with "I don't like you, you're not of much account anyway." Then while partly turned, he was struck on the head. The man carried a pair of pole climbers over his shoulder and it was these, he thought, were used in dealing the blow.

Dr. Leach was called and attended to his injuries. It was at first thought that his skull had been fractured. Four stitches were used to sew up the wounds, two in number, and one and one-half inches in length.

CAR FERRY FOUNDERS ON WAY TO MILWAUKEE

Number 18, While on Her Way From Ludington, Mich., to the Wisconsin Side, Begins to Sink and Thirty of Her Crew Are Drowned.

Ludington, Mich., Sept. 10.—Thirty lives were lost yesterday when Pere Marquette car ferry No. 18, bound from Ludington to Milwaukee, went to the bottom of Lake Michigan half way across the lake.

The dead include Capt. Peter Kilty of Ludington, S. F. Sezpanek of Chicago, purser and wireless operator, whose signals of distress brought assistance to the sinking steamer, and two members of the crew of car ferry No. 17, who lost their lives in an effort to rescue the crew of No. 18.

Elicott Bean of Saginaw, Mich., a member of the crew of No. 18, would make a thirty-first victim, but it is believed he was not on board when No. 18 set out from here Thursday night on her fatal trip.

The steamship company issued a list of 35 names of survivors of the wreck, all members of the crew, and most of whom were brought here last might aboard car ferry No. 17. Eight bodies were recovered.

With her flag floating at half-mast, and thousands of anxious watchers waiting at the pier, ferry No. 17 steamed into this harbor last night. There was a moment of tense silence as the steamer came through the piers into the harbor. Then men and women struggled with insane eagerness to get first tidings of the fate of relatives who went away from here Thursday night, as members of the crew of the ill-fated car ferry.

The cause of the disaster is enveloped in mystery. F. F. Potvin, cabin watch, said that the boat was very low at the stern when the first alarm was given. He said they pushed 29 railroad cars into the lake to ease the vessel, but without avail.

Seymour Cochrane of Chicago, another survivor, said he was reading a magazine in his berth, when a cabin boy rapped on his door about 4.30 a.m., and shouted that the boat was sinking. Cochrane floated on a cabin door, until picked up by No. 17. The purser had given him $1,000, which was due Cochrane's employers. Cochrane would not load himself down with the coin, and tied the money to the steamer's rail as the boat went down.

Many of the lifeboats were stove in by wreckage stumbling in every direction on the tossing sea, the occupants of the small boats being thrown into the water, and many of them drowned.

The sum total of the catastrophe is 29 lives lost and a financial loss exceeding half a million dollars.

Ferry No. 18 left Ludington Thursday night at 11.30 o'clock with 29 loaded cars on deck. At 4.30 o'clock word was sent to Captain Kilty that his boat was rapidly making water aft and that pumps were unable to keep even.

The captain promptly headed his ship toward Sheboygan on the Wisconsin shore. In spite of every effort it became evident that the boat was gradually but surely sinking.

At 7.30 yesterday morning, without warning and before the horrified gaze of the men on board Pere Marquette car No. 17, which had just arrived on the scene, in response to a distress signal, the great black bow of the flagship rose high in the air, the stern settled swiftly toward the bottom and with a roar the ship shot downward and was lost to view.

The crew of number 17 rushed overboard with a lifeboat with four men. The waves picked it up in an instant and crushed it against the ferry's side. Two of the sailors were rescued by those on board, while the other two immediately sank.

Another lifeboat was successfully launched. This boat did heroic work and in less than an hour picked up fourteen survivors who were floating about and clinging to bits of wreckage.

Then another lifeboat was manned, and in the face of great danger, more than thirty persons were saved.

BRAKEMAN IS BLAMED

Durand Wreck Laid at Door of George W. Graham.

Durand, Mich., Sept. 10.—The coroner's jury sitting on the Grand Trunk wreck of Aug. 24, in which ten lives were lost, brought in a verdict charging Brakeman George W. Graham of train No. 14 with gross negligence and laying on his shoulders the responsibility for the wreck.

Engineer Spencer of train No. 4 was censured for not having seen the lights of train No. 14, but no blame was attached to him.

The jury accused Graham of not properly flagging train No. 4 and not taking proper precautions to prevent a wreck.

It is not known what further steps will be taken, but the State Railway Commission will now probably take up the matter and may accuse either the G.T.R. or Graham of manslaughter.

DEFENDING WINCHESTER

London, Sept. 10.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Col. Mason, Major Rennie and Capt. Higginbotham will accompany Sir Henry M. Pellatt to Balmoral Castle with Col.-Sergt. Macdonald and Sergt. Passmore, Corporals Freeman and New, Privates H. M. Dunn, P. Newton, Hammond, McRae, W. P. Muir, Stickney, Forsythe and J. Scroggie.

The Queen's Own, with the second division, arrived for manoeuvres on Thursday. Not a man fell out during the whole march despite the heat.

It is a fact, however, that several were very footsore. On Wednesday night one officer's feet were almost raw, but he marched again next day.

At every centre of population the Canadians got a hearty reception.

Yesterday the Queen's Own participated in the defence of Winchester.

NOVA SCOTIANS ARE PLEASED

Halifax, N.S., Sept. 10.—The fishing decision of The Hague is looked upon here as a striking vindication of the colonial legislature to enact and enforce regulations for the prosecution of the fisheries in its own territorial waters, and the principle, it is thought, can be advantageously applied to Nova Scotia.

As to the fifth point, the tribunal has made authoritative pronouncement upon a much-contested question of territorial delimitation of bays and inlets. From Nova Scotia's point of view this was the most important question before the tribunal. The decision of the tribunal places beyond dispute the right of Canada and Newfoundland to exercise territorial control over small bays and inlets on the coast. Americans will thus be excluded from prosecuting fishing operations inside the headlands, even where they would be beyond the limit of three marine miles from shore. This is of special interest to Nova Scotians, for it will prevent American seiners from operating in many bays along the coast.

ADOPTS LOCAL OPTION PLANK

Ontario Grits Will Sing Local Option as Battle Cry.

Toronto, Sept. 10.—There will be no provincial Liberal convention for some time, but meanwhile Hon. A. G. MacKay is willing to do all that he can to put life into the party in this province.

"We can't win in the elections unless we have our candidates in the field in reasonably good time," he told the Ontario General Reform Association, in annual meeting yesterday. "And I will personally agree, if necessary, to attend conventions in every one of the 106 ridings before the next election. My time will be at the disposal of the party. But above all things, the party, in or out of power, should take solid and emphatic ground upon every question, and it will be inevitable that good results will accrue to its members and adherents, and to the province at large.

"I should like to see every Liberal candidate in the field before we meet next year. Indeed all ought to be on hand before the printing of the lists in June."

Mr. MacKay, referring to matters of policy, favored standing by local option as against a campaign for prohibition of the liquor traffic.

"The local option movement," said he, "which is a Liberal measure, is admitted by temperance men to be the best thing that the province has ever had. It insures a union of all temperance factors. There has been a slight demand in Ontario for the provincial convention to create a provincial issue on the question of temperance. and on the local option side of the case the candidate can stand on solid ground."

JEALOUS OF WIFE, MURDERED HER

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 10.—Bloodhounds are being used in an effort to run down George Reid, wanted for the murder of his wife in a farm house near Clayburn. A reward of $500 is also offered. Tuesday was the murdered woman's birthday and the day of the murder. She was 25 years old. Reid left a letter declaring that he killed his wife because he believed she paid attention to other men and he was insanely jealous of her.

The couple were married thirteen months ago near Midland, Ont., where Reid worked in a sawmill. They then went west, stopping for several months in Moose Jaw.

Reid is about 35 years old and was formerly employed in Chew Bros.' mills at Midland. He was regarded as quiet and industrious, and was a member of the Salvation Army. His parents live near Wyevale. His wife was Agnes, daughter of W. J. Houden, Midland.

Looks Like Disastrous Struggle.

Newcastle-on-Tyne, Eng., Sept. 10.—Reports to-day from the various union centres involved in the present lock-out of boilermakers engaged in the shipping industry indicate that the men are voting against the proposal of giving assurances to the Shipbuilding Employers' Federation that the national agreement of 1909 will henceforth be regarded as inviolable.

BABES DYING

Epidemic of Infant Paralysis Spreads in Hamilton—Outbreak in Quebec and Toronto.

Hamilton, Sept. 10.—The dread epidemic, infantile paralysis, which is spreading over Ontario, is growing in Hamilton, and it is estimated that there are over a hundred cases here now.

Thursday the disease claimed another adult, and yesterday two more adult cases were reported.

In Mount Hope and vicinity three adults have died within the past few days.

In Hamilton the health department is placarding all houses where the disease is known to exist.

Outbreak In Quebec.

Sherbrooke, Que., Sept. 10.—Considerable concern is being felt in this city regarding the outbreak of what is diagnosed to be infantile paralysis. A number of cases have developed but not only children but older persons are attacked. This disease has appeared in the New England States.

Toronto, Too.

Toronto, Sept. 10.—Another case of infant paralysis, that of a child three years old, was reported yesterday.

"Medical men are reporting all forms of infant paralysis to me," said Dr. Sheard. "These may result from many affections of the spinal cord. There is no occasion for alarm; no indications of any contagious disease have been discovered. The form of the disease in Toronto is quite different from that existing in Hamilton."

GOLF DEFINED

(The Argonaut.)

On the terrace of a country club, overlooking a green dotted with sheep, a group of non-golfers were taking tea.

A male non-golfer, who took his tea through a straw, said, thoughtfully;

"Golf might be defined as billiards gone to grass."

"Spleen on the green, I'd call it," said a female non-golfer.

"Or the last flicker of the dying fire of athletics," sneered a young footballer.

"The misuse of land and language," said a real estate man.

MUST NOT READ NEWSPAPERS

Rome, Sept. 10.—Pope Piux X. has issued a motu proprio giving new and practical measures to be adopted against the growing modernist campaign. The pontiff reiterates all of the rules previously set forth against modernism, especially in the encyclical pascendi, and adds that the bishops and the rectors of the Catholic colleges must watch attentively the development of the young clergy, seeing to it that they are well prepared to fight error, forbidding them to read newspapers and periodicals, and avoid distracting them from their studies.

FINED $300 FOR AIDING IMMIGRANTS

Niagara Falls, Sept. 10—Morris Landenski, Hamilton, was given the alternative of paying a $300 fine or spending three months in jail at hard labor by Magistrate Fraser yesterday, upon conviction on a charge of aiding immigrants to enter Canada illegally. Three men he attempted to bring in, Sam Greenburk, Henry Handelsmann and William Schmitmann, were dismissed. Later they were charged with attempting to gain an entrance to the country after having been rejected by the immigration official Thursday.

Landenski swore that he had been sent from Hamilton Thursday to bring men into the country to act as strike-breakers for the Copley Co. of Hamilton, whose employes are now out on strike with the garment workers.

THREE DEAD ONE WOUNDED

Chicago, Sept. 10.—Two women and a man were burned to death in South Chicago Thursday night when the automobile in which they were riding, and which was speeding at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour, collided with a train of three moving caldrons of molten metal and slag on 104th street, near an entrance to the Illinois Steel Co.'s plant. A third woman was seriously, but not fatally burned.

Committed for Trial.

St. Catharines, Sept. 10.—John R. Shea was committed for trial yesterday afternoon on a charge of making false entry with the Williams Sewing Machine Co., regarding the sale of a sewing machine, made by Shea, when in the company's employ. It is alleged that Shea sold the machine for $20, and filed a lease with the company for $40, in order to obtain a larger commission.

BORDEN AGREES

He Approves of Suggestions in Gen. French's Report And Thinks Militia Will Endorse it.

Toronto, Sept. 10.—Gen. French's report on the condition of the Canadian militia meets with the approval of Sir Frederick Borden, and in the latter's opinion, it will be as warmly endorsed by the members of the militia themselves.

The Minister of Militia so declared himself at the Exhibition directors' luncheon.

Sir Frederick, referring to the forecast of Gen. French's report published yesterday, said the report had not yet been given to the press.

"Not having read this particular report, I cannot say how good a guess has been made. I believe it has been kept strictly within the knowledge of four gentlemen besides myself, and no one connected with the press or outside has seen it."

The speaker added that the reason for withholding the report was to await the return of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The Governor-General, before starting on his northern trip had said, "Of course the report cannot be given out until the Prime Minister returns," will prove satisfactory.

"The only thing I have to say in advance is that I approve of every word, and certainly every idea expressed in that report, and I believe that the militia generally will approve of it," he continued. "Gen. French was not brought here for the purpose of handing us taffy, but for the purpose of looking at the militia from an independent standpoint, and for the purpose of pointing out weak points of the militia so that they might be corrected and the militia made stronger."

In some quarters it was charged that Canada was given to undue militarism, but the country was only spending 18 cents per head of population on the militia. Others complained of militarism in the schools, but the training was limited to physical drill and a little rifle practice. Militarism consisted of a great standing army.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Mary R. Rinehart, the Pittsburg authoress, is in danger of becoming totally blind.

The Oriental Hotel and three other buildings at Compton, Que., were destroyed by fire.

R. J. Kinler was killed by a fall at Cobalt while supervising the erection of a new mill at the Hudson Bay mine.

The regulations regarding the transportation and muzzling of dogs in Ontario will not be relaxed until December at the earliest.

The Dominion revenue for August shows a large increase, and it is estimated that the total for the year will amount to about $120,000,000.

Coroner W. A. Young's jury investigating the double tragedy at the home of Gustave Merkt in Toronto, censured the asylum authorities for permitting Merkt to be at large.

C.N. RAILWAY AGAIN BALKED

Winnipeg, Sept. 10.—The Canadian Northern Railway is again balked in its efforts to locate its line west from Edmonton towards the Yellow Head Pass Unless the C.N.R. can convince the Railway Commission of the necessity for running parallel to the G.T.P., material change in plans will be required. It is probable that the C.N.R. may find it necessary to run south of the Grand Trunk Pacific.

Interesting and vigorous representations are to be made to the Railway Commission on behalf of the C.N.R. In the meantime, work on the line west of St. Albert is abandoned, although the company is under contract with the Alberta Government to build a certain distance this year.

NOT GUILTY OF BRIBERY

Chicago, Sept. 10.—Lee O'Neil Browne, minority leader in the Illinois Legislature, charged with bribery in connection with the election of Wm. Lorimer to the United States Senate, was found not guilty by a jury in the Criminal Court yesterday. This was Browne's second trial. The jury disagreed in the first trial.

Mackenzie Visits Coal Felds.

Vancouver, Sept. 10.—W. J. Coulson, director and manager of mines, Canadian Collieries (Dunsmuir, Ltd.), left Thursday night for Edmonton with Wm. Mackenzie, president of the C.N.R., for the purpose of visiting the Brazeau coal fields, west of Edmonton, to report on a plan of development.

U. S. Solicitor-General Dead.

Boston, Sept. 10.—U. S. Solicitor-General Bowers died at Touraine Hotel here yesterday morning from complications rising from bronchial trouble.

GREAT CROWD WILL BE IN MONTREAL TO-MORROW

Twelve Thousand Persons Get Into Notre Dame at Great Mass Gathering—Sir Wilfrid Laurier Makes an Address to His Countrymen.

Montreal, Sept. 10.—It now looks as if a quarter of a million strangers would be in the city on Sunday next. Whole parishes are buying tickets at the railway stations along the line of the C.P.R. and the G.T.R., and it may be that when the great procession starts there will be at least a million people in the city or thereabouts.

Father Vaughan is still whacking the non-Catholic, and in fact leading Canadian members of the congress to say that the learned Jesuit did not show good taste in attacking those who have done so much to help along the demonstration.

In the midst of it all comes the announcement that an ex-Italian ecclesiastic, Miraglia Guillotti, will preach here in the Italian Methodist Church on Sunday afternoon, the sermon to be preached on "The True Religion of the Eucharist: Destroy the Vatican or Destroy Italy."

Indeed, the history of the congress is a history of crowds. Last night the great temple of Notre Dame, which seats 15,000, was turned for the nonce into a vast amphitheatre, given over to the speech of the laity equally with that of the clergy.

Fully an hour was taken up in seating the assemblage, and at the close ground floor, gallery and side aisles were packed. The speakers addressed their audience from within the space railed off by a brass railing, and rows of chairs within the sanctuary accommodated the principals in the action of this long-to-be-remembered night.

A triumphal peal from the organ announced the coming of the long chain of bishops and archbishops who preceded the cardinal legate, who, as he moved along continually waved his hands, partly in blessing, partly in greeting.

His appearance was the signal for clapping and cheers, renewed again and again as other prominent figures, such as Cardinal Logue and Sir Wilfrid Laurier, came into view. For some time the feelings of the assembly refused to be subdued, and handkerchiefs waved from the standing audience and cheers and clapping continued until the dignitaries were seated.

Bishop Heluyn of Belgium also spoke and declared that Canada had given an example for Christian tolerance the world over, after which Mgr. Bruchesi introduced the Prime Minister of the Dominion, saying that although many congresses had been held, this was the first one addressed by the Premier of the country, which was certainly a good omen for the future of Canada and her citizens.

Sir Wilfrid, who was received with continued applause, appeared to be at his best and nothing indicated that he was tired. The Prime Minister proclaimed himself, not only a Catholic, but a fervent Catholic, and he said the eucharist was the fundamental basis of the Catholic faith, consequently it was right that the faithful of this country should strive for the triumph of that faith.

This has been a day of clouds and sunshine. Beginning with the disappointment occasioned by the inability of having the grand mass at the foot of the mountain, to which so many had looked forward, the day developed, as the morning wore on, with buoyancy and brightness. Though so unpropitious as far as the weather was concerned, the early hours found pedestrians making for Fletcher's Field, where the altar, majestic in its beauty, is erected. By 8.30 a.m., the hour appointed for the mass, thousands covered the field adjacent. Nine hundred singers, members of thirty-nine choirs, had joined for the singing of the plain chant mass of the 2nd tone, but their services were not required that day. An hour after the time appointed word went round that the mass was postponed until the following morning, weather permitting.

By noon the clouds had dispersed, and the sun showed its face. Meantime, on all the streets leading into St. James' square, the children of the city schools were deploying into line to attend the cardinal legate in a special reception given for their benefit.

By two o'clock the congestion about St. James' Cathedral was something wonderful.

As day succeeds day the wonder of the transpiring events becomes more marked, and the children's opportunity of showing their fealty to the Pope's representative, is, in some respects, the most marvelous yet. Thirty thousand is perhaps a conservative estimate of the number of boys and girls in line.

On they came in schools, the boys carrying banners, and the girls in white, many wearing white veils, and carrying small flags and flowers. The youth of Canada's commercial metropolis filled the streets for miles, the last of the children being far away when the first lines received greetings from the cardinal.

To attempt to get into the cathedral would have been folly. So the scarlet canopy was placed outside, before the door, and here the legate smilingly received the little ones. Probably nothing since his coming has pleased him more than the magnificent showing made by the schools of Montreal. From the outskirts of the crowd the voices of the children sounded sweetly in the open air, and the numberless spectators looked with justifiable pride upon the children who form so large a percentage of the future important citizens of Canada.

Had His Leg Fractured.

Belleville, Sept. 10.—A foreigner named Sayere, employed at the Lehigh Cement Works, by the falling of some cement, had his right leg fractured and badly cut.

CIRCLED THE DOME OF ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL

A WONDERFUL FLIGHT

Special to the Review.

London, Eng., Sept. 10.—Cruest Willows, the aviator, performed a wonderful achievement this morning, flying from the Crystal Palace to St. Paul's Cathedral, circling the huge dome of the cathedral twice, and then passing over the centre of the city before returning to the Crystal Palace.

Willows' flight covered a distance of fifteen miles, which carried him twice across the river Thames.

Nearly all London turned out to witness the daring aviator.

OLD LAW REVIVED IN QUEBEC

Quebec, Sept. 10.—The Provincial Treasury was increased by $1,500, fifteen women having been fined each $100 and costs for selling liquor without a license.

A sensation has just been sprung among the liquor license-holders of the City of Quebec. A law very old, yet never put into force, prescribes that licenses are only granted to hotelkeepers and restaurant-keepers, and the law respecting the latter is as follows:

"A restaurant is an establishment where, in consideration of payment, food (without lodging) is habitually provided, and where intoxicating liquors are sold." Section 100 of the license law provides that every restaurant must be suitably furnished to provide meals for at least ten persons at the time."

HAS A MEMORIAL TO KING EDWARD

London, Sept. 10.—The Earl of Plymouth proposes that the Crystal Palace should be made an empire centre at a cost of $3,750,000, as a memorial to King Edward. Amongst suggestions was one that the overseas dominions should erect permanent pavilions there for exhibition purposes.

Crippen Case Adjourned.

London, Sept. 10.—The trial of Dr. Hawley H. Crippen, for the murder of his wife, has been adjourned until Sept. 14.—The defence wishes its experts to view the remains before the medical testimony is gone into.

HALIFAX CONGRESS FINISHED

Annapolis, N.S., Sept. 10.—Here, on the very spot where the lilies of France and the leopards of Britain contended two hundred years ago for the sovereignty of the western world, on the spot where the English history and the civilization of Canada began, were celebrated yesterday the culminating ceremonies of the magnificent bicentenary celebration, that has made the present week an historical landmark not less important, if less outwardly spectacular, than the gorgeous and ever-memorable tercentenary of Quebec.

DOUBLE DROWNING AT MOOSEJAW

Moosejaw, Sept. 10.—A double drowning fatality occurred here Thursday evening in an attempt to change places in a boat when in the centre of the river. Joseph Laing, aged 23, a boilermaker in the C.P.R. shops here, and John Montgomery, fireman, together with Bert Knox, fireman, were returning to the boathouse after a trip up the river in a rowboat, when in exchanging seats the boat upset. Laing and Montgomery were drowned.

Largest Canadian Freighter.

Collingwood, Sept. 10.—The big steel freighter for the Playfair Co., now under construction by the Collingwood Shipbuilding Co., is booked to be launched on the 20th day of October. When the vessel is completed she will be the largest steel freighter in the Canadian lake marine.

I had consulted a score of physicians taken all kinds of blood medicine, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicines the symptoms would break out again—running sores, blotches, rheumatic pains, looseness of the hair, swellings of the glands, palms of the hands scaling, itchiness of the skin, dyspeptic stomach, etc. I had given up in despair when a friend advised me to consult you, as you had cured him of a similar disease 8 years ago. UNION LABEL

REPORT ON PUBLIC UTILITIES

There has come to hand a copy of a report made for the city of Edmonton, Alta., on its public utilities, including the whole civic administration in its relation to water, power and sewage disposal. The report was prepared by Mr. Walter J. Francis, C.E., of Montreal, who was commissioned by the city to make the investigation, chiefly having in view the reorganization and betterment of the mechanical appliances and in some respects the public service. Mr. Francis spent some considerable time and made a most thorough search into all departments in connection. His report is voluminous, and the Edmonton Herald declares that the city council is to blame for being gold bricked. The power plant is declared to be a museum of machinery, a monument to the enterprise of the manufacturers' agent. The report advised the rejection of a six million gallon pump as not being up to the contract, and that the power house walls must be razed and rebuilt. The Herald regretted that the report did not fix the blame for the civic blunders upon any individual, but attributes the blame not to any one official but rather as a result of the rapid growth of the municipality in recent years.

The report, the Bulletin adds;—"'Is not designed to tickle our pride with flattery about the way our civic affairs have been run. About the only ground for congratulation in it is that no taint of official dishonesty was found and that some officials have been doing good work under very trying circumstances."

Commenting on the prevalent practice of interfering with officials in the discharge of their duties, as shown to have been the case, Mr. Francis says in part;—"'Department heads should be responsible alone to the Board of Control. No tinkering should come from the councillors. Again, as in a business, did you ever hear of the superintendents being responsible to the shareholders? No, they must answer to the general manager."

Following on, the report, which is most thorough, and in which the City Council have the greatest confidence, a reorganization is to take place. One point recommended in the report was that a purchasing agent be appointed. He was to purchase all the necessaries for the workings of civic administration. Such a man, it was pointed out, would keep thoroughly in touch with all market prices, and be able to secure closest quotations on city needs. He would not only save "overlapping— but would work for an economic condition of civic affairs.

It is highly creditable to Mr. Francis that he should have been selected by the Western city to make the investigation, and prepare the report. And the lesson for all municipalities is that no public work of any magnitude should be carried out without the advice of some expert competent to advise, and to report on construction and administration. Had our neighbor, Lindsay, enjoyed such competent advice it would have been saved the fiasco in its ozone water purification installation.

THE OBJECTION

Alderman Sam Penfold, Guelph, is an objector. The other night at the the Council meeting in Guelph, Mr. Penfold asked for light on some matters. He wanted to know if the street railway was paying its sinking fund. It is well to have objectors in every city, every town and village. The answer to Ald. Penfold's question will be awaited with interest, for Guelph, the self contained municipally-owned city, was, and yet is, supposed to be on the soundest financial basis. Objectors in civic life, in church life, in social life are not popular, but they are necessary. The Pullman was invented by a man who objected to loss of sleep. The telephone and telegraph, the flying machine, all these discoveries were invented by men who objected to their limitations.

SEPTEMBER TENTH

Time is flying. August gone, 'twill soon be good-bye September. And what has this glorious fall in store for us? There will be plenty of chances for fault finding, and there will be many a time when we can remain splendidly silent. Time passes as a dream, doesn't it?

"The days go by like phantom boats
Adown the stream of time,
But the sweetest days, the fleetest days,
Are the days of Auld Lang Syne."

A fine rhyme, but its wrong. Now is the time. Twenty more times this month the sun will rise across the horizon in the far east and slowly cross to rest. Twenty days of opportunity. What kind of a twenty days will it be? Life is a business, and this month's ending should give us a wider circle of friends and a more clear cut conception of what we are here for anyway, what we are driving at and what we intend to be. You have some specialty, something you can do better than anything else. Cultivate this specialty in September. If we are not in the niche for which nature intended us, may we get in the proper one—in August.

FLYING BEING MADE A BUSINESS IN OLD ENGLAND

London, Eng., Sept. 9.—England has suddenly waked up to the possibilities of the business side of flying, and young men who not many months ago had never seen an aeroplane, are now the owners of machines, and are risking their necks in their hurry to be able to compete for the great prizes that are being offered at aviation meetings throughout Europe.

The rewards of the successful European aviator are on a colossal scale. Morane, the young Frenchman, cleared up as the result of the recent Bournemouth meeting, seventeen thousand dollars. Claud Grahame White in the same time made seven thousand dollars, and has been engaged to give a fortnight's exhibition flights at Blackpool at a fee of ten thousand dollars. Louis Bleriot, hero of the first flight from Dover to Calais, Louis Paulhan, who won the "Daily Mail" fifty thousand dollar prize, and Henri Farman, have made great fortunes in the past twelve months, and will make much greater sums—with more safety—in the future, as dealers of aeroplanes and teachers of aviation.

It was not until the beginning of this spring that Englishmen realized the possibilities before the successful aviator, who was willing to take his life in his hands at any moment of the day and make a flight for the amusement of the paying public. The great meeting at Rheims last year first opened the eyes of the world to the wonders that had been accomplished in the science of flight mostly by Frenchmen who had profited from the experiments and experience of Orville and Wilbur Wright, and who, if they did not actually steal the Wright brothers' patents, at any rate stole their principles, and prospered by the work the Wrights had been carrying on silently and patiently for so many years.

At the Rheims meeting there was not a single British competitor, nor was there one at either of the meetings at Blackpool or Doncaster in the north of England last September, if we exclude the American, S. F. Cody, who became naturalized a few days before the Doncaster meeting. In the winter it occurred to a few daring young Englishmen that there were possibilities in the new game. Anthony Rawlinson, a celebrated polo player and racing automobilist, went over the Chalons and took lessons in flying at Henri Farman's school. Captain Dickson, a young officer of the Royal Artillery, went to Pau and was taught by Bleriot, and made experiments at the Aero Club's flying ground, at Sheppey, near London. Rawlinson and Dickson learned so quickly that they were able to compete at the big meeting at Nice last March. Although Rawlinson dropped a hundred and fifty feet into the sea and had a narrow escape from drowning, he managed to clear up a substantial sum in prizes. So, too, did Dickson, and their success prompted scores of other young men to follow their example.

Claud Grahame-White, a young automobilist learned so quickly that he was able to make a race for the "Daily Mail" London to Lancaster contest with Louis Paulhan, perhaps the world's most expert aviator next to Wilbur Wright—for it is generally admitted that no flying man has yet approached the perfection of art reached by Wilbur Wright. The Hon. C. S. Rolls, whose death was the tragedy of the Bournemouth meeting also proved an apt pupil, and within a few months of his turning his attention seriously to the science flew across the English Channel from Dover to Calais and back again.

To-day a large number of rich young men who have a bent towards mechanics, have had some experience with automobiles and have plenty of nerve and daring, are leaning to fly either at one of the big schools or at home. There will no longer be any need for young Englishmen who wish to learn flying to go to one of the great schools of aviation in France. Armstrong Drexel, the wealthy young Philadelphian, who flew from Bournemouth to the Isle of Wight the other day, and won an altitude prize has established a school of flying in Hampshire, close to the residence of Lord Montagu of Beaulieu at Brockenhurst. Claud Grahame-White has also established a school, and there is very keen rivalry between these two teachers, both of whom are as yet little more than boys.

The Round-Up

A Romance of Arizona

Novelized From Edmund Day's Melodrama

By JOHN MURRAY and MILLS MILLER

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

As he gazed and pondered, shaking the bottle in his effort to solve the mystery, he pressed the handle. The stream struck him fairly between the eyes. Shocked, surprised and half blinded, he pulled his gun and declared immediate war on the "sheep herder who had put up the job on him." Allen's other supplies were of the kind taken straight in the southwest and downed with a hasty gulp.

Driven from the house on the day of the wedding, Allen took refuge on the piazza. From behind the hacienda floated dreamily on the sun drenched air the music of guitars and mandolins played by Mexicans, practicing for the dance which would follow the ceremony.

The colonel dozed and dreamed.

Suddenly the peace of the afternoon was shattered by the wild "yipyips" of a band of cowboys riding up the trail. Revolver shots punctuated their shrill cries.

Allen bounded from his chair, shaking himself like a terrier. This riotous sound was the music he longed to hear.

When the staccato beats of the ponies' hoofs ceased he shouted: "Come on, boys. Make this your home. Everything goes, and the Sweetwater outfit is always welcome."

The foreman was the first to pull up in front of the house. "Hello, Uncle Jim!" he cried.

"Hello, Sagebrush!" answered the colonel, a broad smile illuminating his face. Holding his pipe in one hand, he licked his lips at the thought of "lickering up" without the invention of an excuse for his wife. Then he joined in a hearty laugh with the men about the corral as he heard the grunts and stamping of a plunging mustang. A cow pony had entered into the spirit of the occasion and was trying to toss his rider over his head.

Fresno, one of the Sweetwater's cowpunchers, was the victim of the horse's deviltry.

His predicament aroused wild shouts of mirth and sallies of the wit of the corral.

"Hunt leather, Fresno, or he'll buck you clean over the wall!" shouted Sagebrush.

"Grab his tail!" yelled Show Low, with a whoop.

"All over," was the chorus as Fresno, with a vicious jab of his spurs and a jerk of the head, brought the animal into subjection.

"Come right in, boys," called Allen. "Let the greasers take the horses."

With shrill shouts, whoops and much laughter the guests crowded about the ranchman.

Each wore his holiday clothes. New handkerchiefs were knotted about their necks. Fresno had stuck little American flags in the band of his hat, the crown of which he had removed. "I want head room for the mornin' after," he had said.

Show Low's chaps were conspicuously new, and his movements were heralded by the cracking of unsoftened leather.

Last of the band was Parenthesis, short, bowlegged, with a face tanned and seamed by exposure. The cowboys ran stiffly, toeing slightly inward. Long hours in the saddle made them apparently awkward and really ungraceful when on the ground.

They greeted Allen with hearty enthusiasm, slapping him on the back, poking him in the ribs and swinging him from one to the other with cries of "Howdy, Uncle Jim?"

"Howdy, Sagebrush? Hello, Fresno! Waltz right in, Show Low. Glad to see you all!" cried Allen as he in turn brought his hand down with ringing slaps upon shoulder and back.

Meantime Parenthesis hopped about the outer edge of the ring, seeking an entrance. Failing to reach his host, he crowed, "How de doddle do!" to attract his attention.

Allen broke from the ring. Grasping Parenthesis by the hand, he said: "I'm tolerable, thankee, Parenthesis. Where's Jack? Didn't he come over with you?"

"What—the boss? Ain't he got here yet?" asked the foreman. Tall and lean, with hardened muscles, Sagebrush Charley was as lithe as a panther on horseback. His first toy had been a rope with which, as a toddler, he had practiced on the dogs and chickens about the ranch yard. He could not remember when he could not ride. Days on the round-up, hours of watching the sleeping herd in the night watch, had made him quiet and self contained in his dealings with men. His eyes looked out fearlessly on the world. All of his life he had handled cattle. Daily facing dangers on the long drives or in the corral, he schooled himself to face emergencies. Acquiring self control, he was trusted and admired. When Lyman, the old foreman of the Sweetwater, resigned, Jack Payson promoted Sagebrush, although next to Bud Lane he was at the time the youngest man in the outfit. He made his employer's interests his own. At the mention of Payson's name he always became attentive. With a shade of anxiety he awaited Allen's answer.

"No," replied the ranchman, looking from one of his guests to the other.

"Why, he started three hours ahead of us!" explained Parenthesis.

With a challenging note in his tones, as if his word was disputed, the host answered, "Well, he ain't showed up."

The little group had become silent. Arizona was in a period of unrest. Rumors of another Apache uprising were growing stronger each day. Then Payson was successful and therefore despised by less fortunate men ever eager for a quarrel.

After a moment's thought Sage-

The stream struck him fairly between the eyes.

brush brushed aside his fears and brightened up his comrades with the remark: "Mebbe he rid over to Florence station to get a present for Miss Echo. He said somethin' about gettin' an artickle from Kansas City."

"Mebbe so," agreed Allen, eager to cast out any forebodings. "It's time," he continued, "he wuz turnin' up if this weddin's to be pulled off by the clock."

"Has the sky pilot got here yet?" asked Sagebrush.

"No," replied Allen. "He's started, though. There's one thing sartin—we can't tighten up the cinches till the bridegroom gits here."

The absence of Jack Payson and the failure of the minister to arrive aroused the suspicions of Sagebrush. Coming closer to Allen, he smiled knowingly and, speaking in a confidential tone, asked:

"Say, Jim, they ain't figgerin' on gittin' away on the sly-like, are they?"

Show Low interrupted with the explanation, "You see, we're goin' to decorate the wagon some."

The suggestion that any one connected with Allen Hacienda would ride in anything on wheels except the driver of the chuck wagon on the round-up aroused the indignation of the old cattleman. For him the only use to which a wheeled vehicle drawn by a horse should be put was to haul materials that could not be packed on a horse.

"They ain't usin' any wagon!" he fairly shouted. "They're goin' away in the leather."

The idea of carrying out the traditions of the horse in Pinal county even to a wedding journey tickled the boys immensely.

Slapping one another on the back and nodding their heads in approbation, they shouted: "That's the ticket! Hooray!"

"This ain't no New York idea, where the bride an' groom hits the life trail in a hired hack!" cried Fresno.

Allen's feelings apparently were not yet fully soothed. Turning to Sagebrush, he said: "Wheels don't go in my family. Why, her ma an' me were married on hossback. The preacher had to make a hurry job of it, but it took."

"Hush, now," was Parenthesis' awed comment.

"For her pop was a-chasin' us an' kept it up for twenty miles after the parson said 'Amen.'"

"Did he ketch you?" asked Fresno, with great seriousness.

"He sure did," answered Allen, with a twinkle in his eye, "an' thanked me for takin' Josephine off his hands."

The boys laughed. The joke was upon themselves, as they had expected to hear a romantic story of earlier days.

When the laughter had subsided Show Low suggested, "If we can't decorate the wagon, let's put some fixin's on the ponies."

The proposal was received with more whoops, shouting and yipping. They waltzed about the smiling rancher.

"That's what!" cried Sagebrush enthusiastically.

Allen grew sarcastic, remarking, "I reckon you all must have stopped some time at the water tank."

Renewed laughter greeted this sally.

"This is my first weddin'," explained Sagebrush rather apologetically.

"I want to know!" exclaimed Allen in surprise.

"I'm tellin' you. I never seed a weddin' in all my life," replied Sagebrush, as seriously as if he was denying a false accusation of a serious crime. "Mother used to tell me about her'n, an' I often wisht I had been there."

Fresno shouted with amusement. He had Sagebrush rattled. The coolest man on the range was flustered by the mere thought of attending a wedding ceremony.

"He's plum locoed over this one. Ain't you, Sagebrush?" he drawled tauntingly.

Sagebrush took his gibing in the best of humor. It was a holiday, and they were with people of their own kind. Had a stranger been present the remarks would have been resented bitterly. On this point cowboys are particularly sensitive. In the presence of outsiders they are silent, answering only in monosyllables, never leading in any conversation, and if any comment is necessary they make it indirectly.

"Well, I ain't no society bud like you are," laughed Sagebrush. The others joined with him in his merriment over Fresno's discomfiture. "Weddin's ain't so frequent where I come from as they is in Californy."

"It's the climate," answered Fresno, with a broad grin.

"So you ain't never been at a weddin'?" asked Allen, who was looking for another opening to have more fun with Sagebrush.

Again the cowboy became serious and confessed: "Nope; I've officiated at several plain killin's an' been chief usher at a lynchin', but this here's my first weddin', an' I'm goin' to turn loose some an' enjoy it."

Sagebrush grinned in anticipation of the good times that he knew lay in store for him at the dance.

"You're fixed up as if you was the main attraction at this event," said Allen, looking Sagebrush over carefully and spinning him around on his heel.

"Ain't I mussed up fine?" answered Sagebrush.

"You're the sure big turkey," interrupted Parenthesis.

"Served up fine, with all the trimmin's," laughed Fresno, taking another jab at his friend.

Their sport was broken up for the time being by the appearance of Polly at the door of the ranch house. "Hello, boys!" she shouted, with the fascinating cordiality of the western girl, wherein the breath of the plains, the purity of the air and the wholesomeness of life are embraced in a simple greeting and the clasp of a hand.

The cowboys took off their hats and made elaborate bows to the young woman. "Howdy, Miss Polly?" they cried.

"You sure do look pert," added Sagebrush with what he considered his most winning smile. Fresno snickered and hastily brushed back the hair from his forehead.

"Where's Jack?" she asked the two men, who at once ranged themselves one on each side of her.

"He did not start with the boys," explained Allen. "He'll be along soon, Polly."

"Well, now, when it comes to lookers, what's the matter with Polly Hope?" exclaimed Sagebrush slyly.

tea is the result of care and experience in blending—must be the combination of fine flavor, smooth strength and richness. Because all these elements are so generously included in Red Rose Tea it well merits the term "good tea."

BROUGHT THE CUP WITH THEM

Local Dalegates to Underwriters Association Return With Trophy

The delegates from the local association of the Dominion Life Underwriters' Association, which met in Toronto during this week, have returned home, and brought with them the silverware, in the form of a cup presented by Past President Jno. R. Reid, to the association showing the greatest percentage of increase in membership during the past year. As the Central Ontario Association increased 650 per cent. they won the cup. They were closely followed by the eastern townships of Sherbrooke, Que., with 600 per cent, and they, too, were awarded another cup for their exceptionally good increase.

The meeting just closed was largely attended and was an important one to life underwriters. A notice of motion was made to have the association incorporated, which, if carried out, will have a far-reaching effect on the standing of the life assurance man of the future. The association is determined to rid the field of the undesirable men who, through ignorance or intention, misrepresent life insurance.

The cup can be seen in the window of Mr. R. J. Sodon.

A METHUSELAH OF "EASIEST WAY"

The fallacy of judging by appearances was strikingly shown in the case of Thomas Bennett, aged 80. His flowing snowy beard and patient face betokened an old Hebrew patriarch. But the magistrate was not deceived in this morning's police court.

"Here again," he murmured, following it up with the statement that old Tom had sixteen previous convictions of theft.

"Some of those were another man having the same name," was Bennett's contention.

"Yes, but a great many were you, all right."

To-day's charge was that he had slipped into Mrs. Catharine McConnell's home, 879 Yonge street, and picked up a purse and chateline. When the lady of the house caught him in the act, old Santa meekly asked;—

"Any groceries to-day, mam?"

The stolen purse was identified by the owner and a neighbor, Mrs. Jeffrey. Bennett had taken out 44 cents and thrown the empty purse over the fence.

"You'll go to the Central for nine months' hard labor," was the sentence, and the tottering old man slowly descended the stairs. "That will tide you over the winter."—Toronto News.

AFTER FOUR YEARS OF MISERY

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Baltimore, Md.—"For four years my life was a misery to me. I suffered from irregularities, terrible dragging sensations, extreme nervousness, and that all gone feeling in my stomach. I had given up hope of ever being well when I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Then I felt as though new life had been given me, and I am recommending it to all my friends."—Mrs. W. S. FORD, 1938 Lansdowne St., Baltimore, Md.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. SUMMER TIME A TIME OF DANGER

Summer time is a time of danger to all babies—but more especially to those living in the towns and cities where the heat is so excessive as to make it almost impossible to keep baby's food in proper condition. It is then that the little one suffers from those stomach and bowel troubles that carry off so many precious little lives. During the summer the mother must be especially careful to keep baby's stomach sweet and pure and his bowels moving regularly. No other medicine will be of such great aid to mothers in summer as Baby's Own Tablets. These little Tablets never fail to regulate the bowels; sweeten the stomach and make baby well and happy. Mrs. D. Devlin, St. Sylvester East, Que., says;—"I think Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine for little ones for stomach and bowel troubles and I would not be without them." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Cause and Cure of Headache

The cause of headache as you know, is the stoppage of the circulation resulting in pressure on the delicate nerves of the head. In time nature will start the blood going again, but meanwhile we suffer and are unfit for duty.

Assisted by two ZUTOO Tablets, which by the way are as harmless as the soda they contain, nature will remove the pressure and stop the headache in twenty minutes. Why continue to suffer? Why be unfit?

It is really remarkable how many people now use ZUTOO to cure their headaches. Do you? If not, why not?

HAD FINGER TAKEN OFF

Mr. Cecil Soucie, an employee of the punch-press department of the C.G.E., had the misfortune to lose the second finger of his right hand last night while at work. He failed to withdraw his hand from the descending blade quickly enough, with the result that the finger was practically severed.

Dr. Young dressed the wound at Nicholls Hospital.

McGREGOR—DIXON.

A very pretty wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Dixon, Drummond Station, on Wednesday evening at six o'clock, when their second daughter, Alice Jean, was united in marriage to William James McGregor, son of Mr. W. J. McGregor, of Peterborough. The Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, rector of St. Luke's, officiated. The bride entered the drawing room to the strains of the wedding march played by her sister, Miss Emma Dixon, leaning on the arm of her father. She looked charming in a dress of cream mull with Irish lace trimmings, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses, while the bridesmaid, Miss Matilda McGregor, Peterborough, sister of the groom, in a dress of pale blue mull carried pink roses. The groom was supported by Mr. Fred Dixon, brother of the bride. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch and chain; to the bridesmaid a bracelet; to the groomsman a tie pin set with pearls. The presents were both numerous and costly, testifying to the high esteem in which the young couple were held. After congratulations had been bestowed the guests sat down to a sumptuous wedding supper, after which the young couple took the train for Toronto and points west. The bride travelled in a suit of alice blue broad cloth with hat to match. On their return they will reside in Otonabee. The young couple have the best wishes of a large circle of friends for a long and happy wedded life.

DREWERY—ALLEN.

The wedding took place yesterday at the home of Mrs. Rosborough, 721 Harvey street, of Mrs. Annie Allen, of Norwood, and Mr. James F. Drewery, of Haliburton. The couple were unattended.

Rev. C. H. Coon officiated.

BALDRY—HALES.

At 9 o'clock this morning a very quiet wedding was solemnized at Charlotte street church Parsonage, when Miss Edith Maude Hales was united in marriage to Mr. John Ernest Baldry, both of Peterborough. Rev. Dr. Langford performed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Baldry will reside in the city.

THE ROYAL BANK ABSORBS THE UNION

The Royal is Now in Control—The Purchase Confirmed by Shareholders

Banking circles and the business community are all interested in the purchase by the Royal Bank of the Union Bank. It is officially announced that the deal was completed on the 8th. This consolidation easily makes the Royal Bank the third largest in Canada, and with a capital of $6,500,000, reserve of $7,100,000 and assets of $90,000,000. The deal has been ratified by the Union Bank of Halifax, on Wednesday, and by the Royal Shareholders on Thursday.

The Royal Bank has now 180 branches, covering the country in a chain from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and of these no less than 15 are in the West Indies.

It is gratifying that in the hands of the local manager, Mr. V. Eastwood, the agency in Peterborough is doing a large and substantial business, and is a favorite among business men.

The next step will be to obtain the approval of the Governor-in-Council of the sale and purchase, which it is expected will take effect on the 1st of November next.

WESTERN PROPERTY SELLING RAPIDLY

The Canadian West Land & Development Company who have opened offices, corner George and Hunter Sts. are more than pleased with the business they have been doing, handling Western property, especially in the new City of Edson, Alberta, which is being opened up by the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Canadian Northern lines. Edson is the seventh divisional point on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway line, and will be the supply station for material to build this Great Transcontinental Railway in through the mountains which may take a course of two years. Edson is also claimed to have a better combination of natural resources assuring the growth of a larger city than any other town in that section. Branch lines are to be built into the Grand Prairie country, north of Edson, also a line to the Brazeau coalfields, south of the City of Edson. The Grand Trunk Pacific have their eastern terminus at Edson and the Canadian Northern Railway may also have their headquarters in this City. Edson is one hundred and thirty miles west of Edmonton and promises to be a city of great importance in the near future.

PROVINCIAL OPTICAL CONVENTION

Mr. Browett of the Optical Institute in our city has returned from the Provincial Optical Convention held in Toronto, and reports two interesting sessions. Representatives were present from London, Toronto, Hamilton, Belleville, Oshawa, Kingston, Ottawa and many other places. Mr. W. Madill and Mr. Browett represented Peterboro Optometrists. In addition to election of officers for the ensuing year, considerable business was put through, with a view to legislation on Optometry requiring a certain government standard of education, and the passing of certain examinations under government supervision from all who hereafter practise Optometry. This act will not disqualify those who are now in business, nor will it prevent the sale of spectacles and eyeglasses by those who offer them for sale when such selection is made by the purchaser without the aid, advice, or selection of the seller, but will prohibit the peddling of spectacles from door to door or house to house through out the country. The aim of this Convention is to elevate Optometry, and safeguard the public from incompetent and unqualified men.

Peerless Peninsular

Little Conveniences That Mean Much To The Housewife

A Lady said, not long ago to one of our dealers, that "Peerless Peninsular" Ranges could not have been more conveniently planned if they had been designed by the women who use them.

This was a high compliment, but only indicative of the years of effort to meet all points of convenience that have culminated in the production of our "Peerless" Ranges.

The front Key Plate of the range is fitted with a handle by which it can be raised for broiling and toasting.

The Back of the Oven is Aluminized to reflect light into the usual dark corners.

The Clean-out Door under the oven is where it can be reached without the usual struggle.

The Oven Door drops down level with the oven floor and forms a shelf for basting or inspection of cakes, pies, etc.

The Oven Damper is adjustable—not simply open or shut, but slides so that the heat can be regulated to a degree.

The Oven Thermometer, Peninsular Grate Bars and Low Closet for holding flat irons, pots, pans, etc., are only a few of the other "little things" that you should see before buying your new range. When you do see them, you will buy a "Peerless".

"Peerless Peninsular" is the range shown above.

"Harmony Peninsular" is similar in essentials but more elaborately decorated.

"Constant Peninsular" is different from the others mainly in plainer design and finish.

"Adanac Peninsular" is plain in design with swing door for those who prefer it. 110

JUDGMENT FOR $100

Payment of Commission for Sale of Farm Was in Dispute

Judge Huycke, yesterday, in Division Court, gave judgment in favor of C. Blewett for $100 against D. Kerr of Smith. The dispute arose over the sale of a farm to Mr. Deyell of Otonabee. Kerr claimed that he made the sale for which he was to get the commission of $100. Mr. G. N. Gordon who appeared for Mr. Blewett, proved that the commission was due his client he being instrumental in making the sale. Mr. W. H. Moose appeared for Kerr.

Wages Case

A young lad who had been working for a farmer, claimed that he did not receive all of his wages. The case was settled satisfactorily to both parties.

A PRETTY GOOD MARKET

A slight falling off in attendance was noticeable at the market to-day. Whether the reason was the cool weather or lack of the necessary coin is a matter of conjecture. The produce brought in this morning was of good appearance, however, potatoes and apples being especially large and plentiful.

An abundance of plums, peaches and pears was the noticeable feature this morning. Several loads of hay were also on the square and sold at $14 and $15 a load. The following is a price list of the articles to-day:—

Potatoes—20 cents peck or 75 cents a bag.
Corn—10 cents a dozen.
Celery—10 cents a bunch.
Beets—5 cents a bunch.
Tomatoes—25 to 30 cents a basket.
Carrots—5 cents a bunch.
Cucumbers—10 cents a dozen; 40c. peck.
Onions for pickling—60 cents a peck.
Turnips—5 cents a piece.

Butter—25 cents a pound.
Chickens—50 cents and 75 cents a pair.

Four lonely piglets at the marked price of $8 a pair were the only representatives of their kind to-day.

MANY LOOKING FOR EMPLOYMENT

Mr. Arthur Northcott, formerly of this city, now of Toronto, has returned from a two months' visit to his native town of Reading, England. In conversation with a representative of the Review he confirmed the oft-repeated statement of lack of employment and consequent hard times in the old land. The Review man asked whether he tried to obtain a job under the plea that there is always work for the willing, to which Mr. Northcott replied that seeing so many good men looking anxiously for a billet he concluded that it amounted practically to searching for the proverbial needle in a bundle of hay—so he wasn't having any. The return trip found the boat packed with emigrants.

SPEEDIER FIGHTER THE MAN TO BEAT JOHNSON

His Defence Will Only be Penetrated by an Opponent Who Excels the Champion in Speed—A Wonderful Fighting Machine

Who will you fight next Jack? This from the gallery of the theatre at Toronto, where the champion heavyweight pugilist, has been appearing before packed houses this week.

But there is no answer. Just that famous smile, characteristic of the colored fighter.

Johnson, says a localite, who witnessed a boxing performance between the negro and his partner is an entirely different man, from the impression the pictures and newspaper descriptions give. He has enormous jaws, his head is squarely set on a huge neck. He possesses immense shoulders. The left arm is twice the size of the right and this accounts for the phenomenal uppercut. He exercises coolness and judgment, backed up by extreme speed in hitting where necessary. In defensive fighting, he excels and it is this that allows him the opportunity at the proper time, of hitting his opponent sideways with a well directed blow from his powerful arm. His body and legs are light, but not too light. Like Fitzsimmons, he makes no use of them to get out of the way, but simply shuffles with his eye always on his opponent.

The man who will beat him, will be one who is a shade faster, for, it is only in this way, that his defensive will ever be penetrated. His coolness is greater than any other pugilists's. In a moment of danger, he though a champion, will not hesitate to back up, and in this way, he spoils many a move of his antagonist. In a less successful fighter, it might be put down as discretion being the better part of valor but it has long since been admitted that Johnson does not lack in courage.

Nature has endowed him with a perfect fighting physique, with great speed and strength, and much natural stamina and excellent health. He is not such a fool as to dissipate, and here his judgment serves him again. It is generally acceded that it will be a long day, before his equal, let alone his superior, appears above the pugilistic horizon.

Sullivan was a champion fighter, and above all things a smasher, both those who have seen both men, say that Johnson is Sullivan's equal as a hitter and is superior, in many other ways. Strange to say, while he does not telegraph his blows with his hands, he does so with his shoulders. In breaking from clinches he has the adroit way of letting his hand, slip over that of his opponent, and in doing this, brings on the hook, that others can only bring about, under more favorable circumstances. He is such another fighter as Fitzsimmons but much speedier.

BALL PLAYER TO GET SLICE OF LARGE FORTUNE

Watrous, Sask., Sept 9.—Lying in wait for the relatives of the Stillson estate of Edinburgh, Scotland, is property approximating two million dollars in value, which for the last twenty-five years has been in litigation, and a few days ago Fred. F. Farrar, the left handed pitcher of the Regina baseball team of last year, and of the Maroons for the earlier part of the present season, now residing in this town, received word that it would be to his advantage to make tracks to Scotland to receive his part of the estate, which will amount to five hundred thousand dollars. The two million dollars, which includes interest at five per cent., will be divided among four persons, William Stillson, of Missouri; Gillman Stillson, of Spokane, Wash.; Mrs. E. H. Mundenhall, of Lisbon, North Dakota, and Fred F. Farrar, of this town. What the future will be for Mr. Farrar he is uncertain as he intends to go to Scotland as soon as possible and claim his share of the estate. Mr. Farrar came to Watrous a few months ago from Winnipeg on account of his wife's health, and since then she has recovered to such an extent that she will accompany her husband to Scotland in a few weeks.

BRIEF AND BREEZY

The Leafs took another from the Bisons yesterday. Dr Newton was in great form and not one Buffalo player went further than second.

In the first innings at Rochester McGinnity was walloped for five hits, two of which were doubles and one a three bagger.

Philadelphia has a lead of 104 points in the American.

Winnipeg sports have been taken in and the Free Press hastens to say: Isn't it about time that Winnipeg has had enough of these so-called wonders of the ring; the has-beens and the never-wasses? To the sportsmen there is nothing more enjoyable than to watch two clever boxers in the ring, for Britisher, American, Frenchman, Jap, and all the nationalities of the world love the manly art of self-defence. When such men as Tony Caponi, Billy Lauder, Kid Lucca, and one or two others stand up in the ring the public as generally treated to a good exhibition, but such a sorry spectacle as was that of Monday night had better be forgotten. The two were hailed as top notchers and the record books certainly showed that Gardner was at one time in the very front rank. That was seven years ago, and either Gardner has deteriorated in a deplorable manner or else he is not the same George who stood up for twenty rounds against old Bob Fitzsimmons. The fans who paid their good money to gaze upon the ex-champion were badly stung. It was a big black mark against the fistic game in Winnipeg, and unless something good is brought along the sport will die a natural death.

The measurements of the two champion walkers who meet at the Toronto Exhibition meet this afternoon are as follows:

GEORGE GOULDING

Of George Goulding the physique is directly in contrast to that of Webb.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor of the Review.
September 10th.

JIM CROWE'S OBITUARY.

The late Jim Crowe was a man of education and refinement, whose great ideal in this life was to sow the seed of brotherly love and good fellowship among the different creeds in the city and cement in bonds of friendship all within its borders.

Jim Crowe was consistent and sincere and many will miss his teachings and writings. From the depths of his warm affection and promptings of his noble manhood he was able to spread that broad mantle of charity round a bigoted heretic—of a soulless religion, and the crowning effort of his life and proof of his noble character is pictured in his letter of July 19, which reads as follows:—

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—At a meeting of the City Council last night it was decided to employ Mr. Willis Chipman as consulting engineer, he to appoint a resident engineer in connection with the sewer system in the south end.

I therefore move and second the following:—"That whereas, one Robert Hicks is chairman of the Board of Works, and whereas in the case of other sewer work in Peterborough, he, feeling himself responsible for the proper workmanship of same, objected to any foreman not "known" to him, and whereas the two engineers now to be employed are from outside the city. Be it resolved, that every opportunity be given to the aforesaid Robert Hicks and the Board of Worthies, of knowing the aforesaid, gentleman and of ascertaining whether both or either of them are members of the Roman Catholic church." In case one or the other should be a Catholic, I suggest that the matter be referred to the Board of Works with power to act.

Yours truly,
JIM CROWE.

Following the exertions of such writing Jim became weary—retiring early that evening. "He dreamed" that he did not know the two following quotations had ever been written:—

'Let him in a manly and straightforward manner disclose his identity and not hide behind a name that every scientific jackass has brayed forth for the past hundred years.'

He may retain his name is he wishes, but I certainly don't purpose following the ravings and wanderings of a man who will not come out in the open, who, like a social and religious misfit, has recourse to most extravagant opportunisms and is afraid of having his inflated reputation punctured by facts and arguments charged with wholesome truth.

In the morning after such a pleasant dream Jim Crowe awoke—and the shock killed him.

The doctor filled in the certificate. "Died with inconsistency."

The burial was private.

"And no man knows that sepulchre,
And no man saw it ere,
The Angel of God upturned the sod
And laid the dead man there."

The food for all folks

For old and young, in any season, in any clime, Shredded Wheat is the one perfect food. It contains all the rich, body-building nutriment of the whole wheat, made digestible by steam-cooking, shredding and baking. In the summer is a healthful and satisfying substitute for heavy meats and soggy pastries. It costs much less, tastes good, and is far more nourishing. Its continued daily use keeps the system in perfect trim and the brain clear and active.

SHREDDED WHEAT BISCUIT

Because of its porous shreds and its biscuit form, Shredded Wheat makes delicious combinations with berries, grated pineapple, sliced peaches, bananas, baked apples or other fruit, fresh or preserved. For breakfast heat the biscuit in the oven to restore crispness and serve with milk or cream, adding salt or sugar to taste. It is far better than mushy porridges or ordinary breakfast foods.

HAVELOCK HAPPENINGS

Live Items From Railway Town

Havelock Sept. 10.—Mr. T. L. Ackerman, father of Mr. Geo. Ackerman, of town, passed away in Toronto, on Tuesday of this week at the age of 72 years. The funeral took place on Friday afternoon, Sept. 9th, to the Norwood cemetery.

The Electro Theatre in Smith's Falls has been purchased by Mr. Samuel Aboud, of town, who intends making a number of improvements and equipping it with the latest picture machine.

WEDDING.

The marriage of Miss Annie Ethel Nixon, daughter of Mrs. Robt. Nixon, of town, to Mr. Archie Hall, of Campbellford, was solemnized at the Methodist parsonage on Wednesday afternoon last, the ceremony being conducted by Rev. R. J. Real. The young couple left on the 3.55 west train on a short wedding tour in Toronto. They will reside in Campbellford where Mr. Hall is engaged in business.

INJURED IN RUNAWAY.

Mr. H. Meads, of town, had his wrist very badly broken and Mrs. Meads was severely bruised in a runaway accident on George street on Thursday evening. They were driving eastward when the horse became scared in some unknown manner and dashed down the street at a vigorous rate. Mr. Meads was able to keep the animal under control until they reached the east end of the town. Here the horse swerved into the ditch, throwing the occupants of the rig out on the road. Mr. Meads in falling tried to save himself by putting out his hand and as a result, caused a very bad fracture of the wrist. Mrs. Meads was thrown against the fence and very badly bruised about the body.

FELL DOWN A WELL.

Ernest, the four-year-old son of Mr. James Fowler, of town, had a narrow escape from death on Wednesday afternoon. He was playing at the back of the lot and fell into an old well, which although not very deep, was pretty well filled with mud and water. Although the youngster is very young, he succeeded in grabbing a projection at the side of the well and keeping above water long enough to yell for help. His cries attracted attention and he was soon on firm ground. Although it might have turned out much worse, the little fellow was none the worse of his dip, only for a splendid covering of muddy water.

AN OPERATION.

Mrs. Ernest Curtis, of Rush Point, had her left leg amputated above the knee on Sunday last, the operation being performed by Dr. Holdcroft, of town. Mrs. Curtis has been unable to walk for two years on account of an injury to her leg and the bone having become affected, it was found necessary to amputate the member. She is doing as well as can be expected.

A PETERBOROUGH PUPIL STUDYING IN GERMANY

Appeal in Behalf of Miss Gladys Seward, the Talented Young Canadian Pianiste.

It may not be generally known that last year, through the kindness of interested citizens of Peterborough and Toronto, a fund was raised by which Gladys Seward, a talented child of Peterborough, was sent to study music in Dresden, Germany, under the noted pianist and teacher, Mr. Harry M. Field, he having promised to give her tuition free of charge.

Those interested will be glad to know that she is working most diligently, and that Mr. Field predicts a great future for her, provided she can stay in Dresden as long as necessary, the time required being three year.

Though she only left Canada last November, Gladys Seward has already astonished the musical public of Dresden, but owing to lack of funds it may be necessary to recall her before she has been even one year away. After reading the criticisms and comments below, who is there who will not admit that it would be an actual crime to bring her back and mar such a career as hers should be?

The money comes in very slowly, and it has just lately occurred to those who are taking most interest in this affair, that if more people knew of the good work this child of Peterborough is doing they would heartily respond to the call for money, without which the plans cannot be carried out. We know that there are public spirited citizens who will help in this good work, and we ask all who can help even by small donations, to give what they can at the earliest possible date.

Gladys Seward is a Peterborough child, and her gifted father was for years a resident of Peterborough, and we hope that as Peterborough is one day to be proud of "a pianist of first rank" her people will now do everything in their power to give this great talent a chance.

All information re the fund can be obtained at the Review Office or from Messrs. W. H. Hill and Henry Rush. Below are given a few of the press notices and extracts from Mr. Field's letters.

Donations of any amount will be gladly received, and if only ten of Peterborough's wealthy citizens would each give $100 the entire amount required for the remaining two years would be raised.

Below are several press notices taken from Germany and New York papers of recent dates, referring to Miss Seward's public appearances;

The Dresden Daily Record, May, 1910—"Something like a sensation was caused by the playing of Miss Gladys Seward, and only the lack of time induced the audience to refrain from demanding an encore. The 'Chant Polonais' of Chopin-Liszt, and the 'Troika Fahrt' of Tschaikowsky, both call for no mean standard of technical skill, but the young artist rose to the occasion magnificently. Her finger work was strikingly fine, her tempo good, while the insouciance of youth imparted an additional charm to her performance."

Guide To Dresden, May 28, 1910.—"Mention should also be made of a talented young pianist, Miss Gladys Seward, of Canada, who contributed selections from Chopin and Tschaikowsky. Young as she is, she evinces strong musical endowments, intelligence and feeling—as well as a natural sense of technical brilliancy—or is it the 'fault' of her esteemed teacher, Mr. Harry M. Field, to whose pedagogic powers she certainly does full justice?"

The New York Musical Courier, Wednesday, June 8th, 1910:—"Perhaps the most pleasing talent of these good pupils is that of Gladys Seward, who gave with great maturity and much musical feeling, as well as with surprising repose and securtiy, the "Chant Polonais" of Chopin-Liszt, and the Troika Fahrt of Tschaikowsky."

The Dresden Daily Record, May 15th; 1910:—"Miss Gladys Seward again exhibited her marked talent at the piano, once in solo and on the second occasion with Frl. Kormann."

The New York Musical Courier. August 10th, 1910:—"Another young talent also deserves notice, and it is that of Miss Gladys Seward, the youthful pianist, who assisted at this concert, and who is a pupil, in piano, of H. M. Field. This is such a marked pianistic talent that it is easy to predict a successful career for her. At the second recital, given in May, she was easily, with Gordon Langlois, the star of the occasion."

In keeping her friends on this side of the ocean apprised of Miss Seward's welfare and progress, Mr. H. M. Field, her teacher, praises very highly the work she is doing. Following are several extracts from Mr. Field's letters:—

January 20th, 1910:—"She has an extraordinary talent and with work she can become a pianist of the first rank. She is showing herself a good girl, and she is working very faithfully. She has astonished me and everyone in the class by her playing of Beethoven's Variations on a Russian dance theme (Bulow-Ausgabe.) She played them almost faultlessly. I am working very hard with her and taking the greatest of pains. I do hope she can stay for at least three years to accomplish what she is capable of doing, as you know this cannot be rushed in a few months; she should have a course just the same as a university student. I am willing to do everything for her in her music in order that Canada may be proud of her. I trust that those who have already helped her so kindly will still do so. This child has a God-given talent, and I consider it a sin not to give her every chance."

(Signed), HARRY FIELD.

H. M. Field, May 30th, 1910:—"She had great success at Fraulien Gliemann's concert, and she quite astonished many musicians who were there. I have given her the Chopin E. Minor Concerto, which I hope she will have up to play by the fall, and then I want to arrange for her to play it at one of the Symphony concerts next winter. I am sure Gladys will make her name and I am working hard with her."

July 27th, 1910:—"Gladys is creating quite a sensation with her playing. She is the greatest talent I ever had."

August 7th, 1910:—"She is working well and is making great strides, and I have no doubt but that she will be a first-class pianist. The best player in the Conservatory here played here with Gladys, and Gladys played all around her. I expect Gladys to do wonders."

SAVED FROM THE KNIFE

Appendicitis Cured By "Fruit-a-tives"

NEWBURGH, ONT., Feb. 12th. 1910.

"Just about a year ago, our daughter Ella (fourteen years), was taken with terrible pains in the right side. The pain was so severe that we had to carry her to bed. We at once put her under the care of a first-class doctor, who pronounced it a case of Appendicitis and advised an operation.

We took her to a hospital in Kingston where she was again examined by an eminent specialist. He said she had Appendicitis and must be operated on at once if we wanted to save her life. As we had taken her to Kingston to have this done, we were ready, but our daughter was afraid and cried and begged so pitifully, that we postponed it for that day. Luckily for us and for her an uncle came in with some 'Fruit-a-tives' and insisted on Ella taking them. Good results were apparent, almost from the first dose, and the continuous treatment cured her.

'Fruit-a-tives' saved our daughter from the surgeon's knife and to-day she is enjoying the best of health."

J. W. FOX, (Father).
LILLIAN FOX, (Mother).

Words cannot express the gratitude of Mr. and Mrs. Fox. And Miss Ella will always remember "Fruit-a-tives"—the discovery of an eminent physician, and the only medicine in the world made of fruit. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. At dealers, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

It Saves You Waiting

On Saturdays we have so many persons who drive long distances or come by train, that we are unable to promise appointments for that day, but we wait upon persons in turn. Many persons call write or phone for appointment, we then reserve time for such and it saves them much waiting, as the time so given is kept open for them. We make such appointments for any day or evening other than Saturday. Evening is quite as good as day time for the eye examination, but it is necessary to arrange for this a day or two in advance.

CONROY BROS. WERE GIVEN ONE MONTH'S EXTENSION

In Connection With the Construction Work for the New Sewer System in the South End of the City—Other Business at the Board of Works Session.

Through their solicitor, Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C., Messrs. Conroy Bros., whose tender for the south end sewage construction work has been accepted, stated to the Board of Works last night that the 28th of August, the time the contract calls for the work to be completed, would be an entirely too short time in which to be given for the completion of the work. Not that it couldn't be completed in that time, provided everything went well, but unforseen difficulties were liable to block the work of construction to such an extent that the work couldn't be carried on to completion within the period specified. And as the contract read there would be a fine of $100 a week for every week over the specified time that the construction was delayed.

The Board thought that the extension of time till December 15th was only reasonable and it was further specified that an allowance be made for any unforseen difficulties.

City Engineer Hay was instructed to consult Mr. W. Chipman, the city's consulting engineer, on the work with the view of having him consent to the proposed modifications of arrangements.

Petitions for granolithic walks on the north side of Victoria avenue, the north side of Dale avenue and the west side of Engleburn avenue were granted.

The engineer reported that it would be advisable to build granolithic walks on the west side of Rogers street and the north side of Douro street inside the tree line. The report was adopted.

The engineer reported that a threshing engine had broken through a bridge on Mark street on the north side of Hunter street, and the engine was damaged to the extent of about $250. This bridge was one of those that it had been recommended to replace by a concrete culvert and it was decided that this would be done at the earliest convenience.

E. Oliver, 464 Hunter street, asked that steps be taken to remedy the sunken pavement in front of his store at the above address. This will be done.

The report of the Board of Health recommending the construction of a sewer on Inverlea street, was adopted.

ENTHUSIASM AT THE Y.M.C.A.

The most enthusiastic meeting yet held in connection with the big campaign for five hundred new members for the Y.M.C.A. was held last night. Most of the workers were present and the enthusiasm was at a high pitch from start to finish. Lists of names are now in from the several districts and will be put in shape for the campaign. Prospects are bright for the addition of a large number of the best men in this city to the ranks of the local association.

The banquet which will inaugurate the campaign, will be held on the evening of Tuesday, September 20th, when addresses will be delivered by a number of speakers, both local and from neighboring cities. A great deal of advertising is being done and during the ten days of the campaign the city will be sown deep with association literature.

BRITISH LABOR MEN INVOLVED IN SERIES OF TROUBLES

Strife Chiefly Within the Organizations Themselves is Causing Great Deal of Unrest Throughout United Kingdom.

London, Sept. 12.—The labor crisis impending in the shipyards, railways, mines and cotton factories affects the relations of the workingmen and the trade union officials rather than the relations of the employers and employed. It is civil war within the unions and not an aggressive campaign against capital.

The locked-out boilermakers, by a vote of 2 to 1, have thrown over their leaders and have declined to empower them to make peace with the Employers' Federation by offering guarantees that breaches of the agreement shall not be repeated.

The employers, not having any responsible trade union leaders to treat with will be forced to lock out 17,000 men in addition to the 38,000 already suspended. About twenty-five other unions are involved in the federated shipbuilding industry, and if there are fresh lockouts or strikes vast congeries of trades will be paralyzed, from the inability of the labor leaders to enforce discipline and carry out their engagements with the employers.

There are signs of a similar revolt against the conciliation scheme adopted by the railway corporations and the Amalgamated Society of Railway servants. Something like a deadlock has arisen on the Great Northern Railway, and there are other indications that the railway servants dislike an agreement which binds them to keep the peace for a term of years, according to David Lloyd-George's arrangement.

The Welsh miners are also agitating for a labor revolt in defiance of the agreement made with the federation of employers, and the Lancashire cotton mill owners, emboldened by the decisive action of the employers in the shipbuilding trade, are also threatening to order a general lockout unless a small body of Oldham strikers accept arbitration.

These various revolts, if the worst comes to the worst, will involve about three-quarters of a million workmen and cause a general prostration of industrial activities. The most obvious moral to be drawn from these labor conflicts is that the trade union officials have got out of touch with organized labor. Theey are overwhelmed with routine work and are not allowed to employ an adequate staff of secretaries, and their duties have multiplied until they are unable to keep themselves informed respecting the real feeling of the unions on important questions.

AN ABBE KILLED AT DEMONSTRATION IN MONTREAL

Montreal, Que., Sept. 12.—The only fatality in connection with the Eucharistic demonstration so far reported is that of the Abbe Verrett, Cure of Sylvesters, Que., who was crushed by a team while getting off a car on St. Lawrence street Saturday, and died yesterday morning in the Hotel Dieu.

The Abbe told one of the nursing sisters he had a presentiment that death would overtake him and prevent him taking part in yesterday's demonstration.

Some sixty women fainted from fatigue and the pressure of the crowd on Fletcher's Field yesterday ,but fortunately they were removed without causing trouble.

There was a terrific stampede at Windsor street station last night. One of the station hands was seriously hurt.

FIFTY THOUSAND PERSONS TOOK PART IN PROCESSION

Splendid Pagent of Prelates, Clerics, Dignitaries, Sisters and Societies Takes Four Hours to Pass—Parade Ends at Electrically Lighted Altar in Fletcher's Field at Dusk—To be Held Next Year in Spain.

Montreal, Sept. 12.—The cardinal legate was seen at night by your correspondent and stated that the Montreal Eucharistic Congress has been the greatest gathering of the kind ever seen in the world, and that not only was the congress the most important event in the history of the Catholic Church in Canada, but perhaps throughout the world. His eminence will go to Ottawa on Thursday, calling on Mgr. Emard en route, after which he will be received at the capital by the Ministers, and then the legate will go to St. Paul, and thence to New York, sailing for Europe early in October. Owing to the brief time at his disposition, it is not the legate's present intention to visit Toronto.

It was announced here yesterday that the congress will meet in Seville, Spain, next year; in Vienna in 1912, in Lyons in 1913 and four years hence it will probably come back to America, New York or Baltimore being the prospective place of gathering.

Never has such a spectacle been witnessed in Montreal as the procession of the Blessed Sacrament yesterday. It is estimated that over 50,000 people took part in the procession, and that fully half a million witnessed it. People poured into the city from all parts of the Dominion and United States, and Montreal yesterday had within its gates more people than it ever had before.

Some idea of the size of the procession may be got from the fact that it took nearly four hours to pass a given point. In the procession walked cardinals, archbishops, bishops, thousands of priests and sisters, besides members of the religious institutions, judges, members of Parliament, mayor and aldermen, and thousands of others. The route of the procession, which was over the three principle streets of the east end of the city, was three miles long. The principal figure in the procession was the papal legate, Cardinal Vannutelli, who carried the Host, the 65th Regiment of Montreal forming the escort.

As the Host passed through the crowded streets thousands of people knelt in adoration. The procession passed off without accident or hitch, the weather being ideal.

From early dawn contingents and parishes were arriving from many parts of the United States and Canada. And during the morning hours thee great churches of Notre Dame, St. James and St. Patrick's, as well as the many minor churches, were filled several times over with citizens and visitors.

At 12.15 p.m. the societies began to muster. On came the hosts, gathering in the streets and avenues, until miles of massed men who had as their centre the Cathedral of Notre Dame, stretched out and covered the City of Montreal. Everything had been outlined previously, and so it was in an orderly and systematic way that the different bodies deployed, every one to its allotted place.

At 2.30, the hour appointed for the body to begin to move, people stood lining the entire route from Notre Dame to Fletcher's Field. Grand stands, twenty-five in number, were arranged at intervals, and ten choirs were stationed ready to play their part in the final setting of the marvelous event. Above, miles of roofs, steps and windows were filled with thousands of faces.

Societies were there from New York, New Jersey, Brooklyn, Toronto, Ottawa, Quebec, and all the surrounding parishes of Montreal, and from the city itself. Italians, Poles Chinese, Indians, Japanese, French, Irish, English, the church, the bar, sailors, soldiers, the Government, none were lacking. As the societies marched to the field they deployed and covered the great area, until acres of living humanity covered the green sward.

The sun sank to rest in the blue heavens and the moon has risen above the mountain, that now showed darkly against the sky, before the first rocket announced that the great concourse of ecclesiastics, having in their midst the papal legate, carrying carrying the sacred Host under the golden canopy and guarded by officers with drawn swords and the 65th Rifle Regiment of the Canadian militia, and accompanied by the highest church dignitaries, had arrived.

At the moment the country around presented the appearance of the historic field of gold, the numerous silken flags and standards giving a weath of coloring indescribable.

The fair white altar was now outlined with electric bulbs, the cross of light towering above all. A thousand singers sung the chants and thousands joined in the salutations and hymns.

The solemn benediction given by the cardinal legate was heralded by a blare of trumpets, the peal of bells and flights of rockets, then the procession reformed for its final goal, the adjacent Hotel Dieu.

Tons of flowers, sent from all over Canada, were scattered along the route, and the close found many carrying one or more blossoms as souvenirs to preserve forever.

The last scene was one of inspiration and majesty. Mounted police preceded the 65th Regiment, then came dozens of acolytes in red cassocks and white surplices. Then the canopy, covering Cardinal Vannutelli, in vestments of gold and walking, despite his years and the length he had already traveled, as straight and commanding as a general at the head of an army. Lastly, one hundred and forty bishops and archbishops in cope and mitra marching, and singing—these were the last pictures that the dispersing thousands carried with them, pictures to live in memory throughout even the longest life time.

Young Men Parade.

Another of the mammoth processions took place in the afternoon, when the young men's societies, massed in companies and brigades, and to the accompaniment of bands and waving flags, paraded and deployed through the streets. Their rendezvous was in the Arena, on St. Catharine street, where their special reception by Cardinal Vannutelli took place.

In his address to the women in Stanley Hall, Archbishop Bourne of Westminster dwelt on the systematization of work amongst women, as helpers in the needs and carrying on of church energies. The local press, commenting on the address, said the remarks of his grace were full of good pointers, irrespective of creed or sect.

His grace told of the work of the women of London amongst the poor. "Thanks be to God," he said, "you do not know here the depth of poverty which obtains in England."

Referring to the many ways by which the church provides avenues for women's activities, Archbishop Bourne said: "I think perhaps you will agree with me that the Catholic Church is able to fit women for any circumstances in which they may have to live in the future. God forbid that circumstances should ever be such as to take away from them the gentleness and the charm of every womanly character, for women who are devout are the very salt of the earth; they can go in and out in paths which others may find difficult, and go unscathed."

CAPTAIN DID NOT REALIZE HIS PLIGHT

Ludington, Mich., Sept. 12.—That the cause of the disaster will never be fully known is the conclusion reached by General Superintendent Trump of the Pere Marquette Railroad, who came here Saturday to investigate the wreck of the Pere Marquette Car Ferry No. 18 here Friday.

According to the report sent by Mr. Trump to Pere Marquette headquarters in Detroit Saturday, Capt. Russell of steamer No. 17 was merely asked by Capt. Kilty of No. 18 to stand by when he arrived at the scene, Capt. Kilty evidently not believing that his vessel was in imminent danger. Capt. Russell, however, observed that No. 18 was sinking and lowered his lifeboats just before No. 18 went to the bottom.

According to Mr. Trump, there were 32 people on the steamer No. 18. The 16 above the regular crew were employes of the Chicago Navigation Co., with Seymour E. Cochrane, vice-president of that company, and a corps of extra scrubbers, carpet layers, etc., who were working while the boat was moving, in order to save time. Mr. Cochrane was saved, but his four men were lost. The first intimation those on board No. 18 had that anything was wrong was when the helmsman, about 4 o'clock a.m., found that the vessel was not responding quickly.

The compartment aft of the engine room was then found to contain a considerable amount of water, though not enough to disturb the firemen and deck hands sleeping there.

Distress signals were given as the vessel continued to sink, and the lifeboats on the port side were lowered, but not cut away from the ship. Capt. Kilty continued to head the steamer for the west shore of Lake Michigan. All of the survivors jumped or were thrown from the boat when she sank, and were picked up by boats from steamer No. 17.

MINISTERS CAN'T LIVE ON SALARY

Charles City, Ia., Sept. 12.—When the Upper Iowa Methodist Conference convenes in Charles City this week it will find itself face to face with a decided shortage in preachers. Fifty charges in the conference will have to be filled from a source not known at present.

Fifty-seven men, the greater part of them young men and but a few years out of the seminary, will quit the ministry at this time. The complaint is that the salary paid is not sufficient to maintain a decent standard of living for the minister and his family and to educate the children. The salaries average between $450 and $1,200 yearly.

NINE KILLED BY COLLAPSE OF TUNNEL

New York, Sept. 12.—At least nine laborers were killed outright yesterday and ten others injured, one of them critically, and all seriously, in the collapse of an overhanging shoulder of rock above the western mouth of the old Erie tunnel under Bergen Hill, connecting the Erie terminal in Jersey City with its westward divisions.

Of the known dead, four were Americans, three were unidentified, and two were foreigners. The American dead are: James Feshan, 60 years old; Fred. Shuver, 20; Wm. Halliday, 28; Joseph Bewmann, 19; all living in the near vicinity of the accident.

Of the known injured, the only one in immediate danger is John James, an American, 30 years. Surgeons had to cut the flesh from his right thigh to free him from the debris.

Several years the Erie has been working at the task of cutting an open cut for its passenger trains through the solid rock of Bergen Hill, which in some spots is 300 feet high. The cut was opened for travel not long ago, but there still remains the task of hewing a common portal for the old tunnel, and the new cut out of the ledge where they will meet west of the boulevard. It was there that the fall came yesterday.

A wall of rock from four to ten feet thick still separated the two sets of tracks, and eight sets of drills were pounding away at it yesterday. Their jar loosened a strip of rock from this wall forty feet wide and twenty feet high. It peeled off like wallpaper and crashed upon the gang which was tearing down the brickwork at the mouth of the old tunnel.

BYE-ELECTIONS IN ALBERTA

Edmonton, Sept. 12.—At a meeting of the Provincial Cabinet on Saturday, the issuing of writs for bye-elections in MacLeod and Gleichen were authorized. Election will be held in both constituencies on Monday, Oct. 3. The date of the next session of the Legislature is practically settled for Nov. 3. It was also decided by the council that the report of the Great Waterways Royal Commission would be laid before the Legislature without previous publication.

S.O.E. Protest.

Montreal, Sept. 12.—The Montreal District Council of the Sons of England, representing 2,700 Englishmen, members of fourteen lodges in the city, meeting in Westmount lodge rooms in Victoria Hall, entered a formal protest against the statements of Father Bernard Vaughan, made in the Monument Nationale on Tuesday evening last. The protest was embodied in a motion.

A VICTORY FOR UNITED STATES

Washington, Sept. 12.—The general result of the fisheries award by The Hague tribunal is regarded as a substantial victory for the contentions of the United States, according to an unofficial, tentative analysis of the decision given out by the Department of State. As to question one, wherein the British claim of inherent sovereignty power to make the fishery regulations without the United States Government's consent was sustained, the department says that while the United States thus lost its extreme contention that the 1818 treaty established an international servitude, exempting American fishermen absolutely from British fishing regulations, the decision in practical effect appears to secure the same measure of protection against unfair exemption which this contention was designed to secure.

Regarding the decision on question five, defining "bays," the Department says: "It cannot be regarded as laying down any general rule regarding the determination of the extent of bays in other waters than the bays on the non-treaty coasts, or regarding the extent of bays in those waters, except as to the fishing rights renounced by the United States."

WAS DRUNK ON THE JOB

Winnipeg, Sept. 12.—Because Towerman Leland at Woods' Siding on the C.P.R., seven miles east, was drunk on duty, the Kenora local was derailed, the engine, baggage car and three passenger coaches leaving the rails, and Fireman S. Pattison of Winnipeg was killed, while Engineer T. Elliott of Winnipeg was injured in the back and leg. Both men jumped. The passengers escaped with a severe shaking up. Pattison, who leaves a wife and child, had only moved here a month from Fort William. Leland is under arrest in the city jail, pending enquiry.

BADEN-POWELL AT ST. JOHN

St. John, N.B., Sept. 12.—Gen. Sir Baden-Powell arrived here yesterday in connection with the boy scouts organization work. He will review the scouts from Nova Scotia and P.E.I. on the Dominion Exhibition grounds this afternoon, and will also address a citizens' meeting in the interests of the movement. He will leave for Ottawa to-day, and will sail for England in two weeks. The egeneral said he expected to be in New York on Sept. 23 in connection with the boys scouts there.

BRITISH ARMY AT WORK IN GRAND SERIES OF MANOEUVRES

Mr. Haldane's System of Reorganization

Being Tested by Sham War in Which 70,000 Men Are Engaged.

London, Sept. 12.—The autumn army manoeuvres now in progress are Mr. Haldane's convincing defence of the efficiency of his system of reorganization. These have opened with the operations of two divisions and a cavalry brigade massed in two camps and numbering 20,000 men, in mimic warfare. The theatre of war will be enlarged this week until it comprises an area of 100 by 50 miles in four counties — Hants, Wilts, Dorset and Somerset—with 70,000 troops under arms. These manoeuvres, while rivalled annually in Germany and France, have never been approached in England in time of peace.

The reserves have rejoined their battalions in order to make up one division to its absolute war strength, and four divisions with cavalry brigades will be commanded by veteran officers. Three brigades of the territorial army will be mustered with the regulars, and all branches of the service will be brought into the field as if an actual campaign were going on.

It is a thorough training for the regulars and home guards, and it is costly. Not less than $1,250,000 will be the extra expense of these manoeuvres. Full use will be made of the resources of invention and science. Aeroplanes will be employed for carrying despatches, and airships will be tested, medical and general stores will be moved by motor transport and field telegraphs will be filled out with wireless messages.

The general staff has been allowed full play for proving that it is not behind the times. The Queen's Own Rifles of Toronto, Can., after a fortnight of training at Aldershot, will take an active part in the manoeuvres, and will represent with fine mettle the quality of the soldiers of the Empire beyond the seas.

Boston's Population.

Washington, Sept. 12.—The population of Boston, Mass., is 670,585, an increase of 109,693, or 19.6 per cent. as compared with 569,892 in 1900.

This announcement leaves Boston the fifth city in the United States.

An Old Salt.

Joliet, Ill., Sept. 12.—Conrad Vandelsen, a centenarian, for many years a vessel owner and captain on the great lakes, died Saturday at his home near Joliet. He sailed the great lakes for sixty years.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

The new Grand Trunk Pacific elevator at Fort William, said to be the largest in the world, is open for business.

Two attempts to wreck trains on the London and Port Stanley Railway took place on Saturday night. The police are investigating.

The C.P.R. night operator at Indian Head was held up by an armed man and robbed of ten dollars. Twenty dollars was also taken from the till.

John F. Ehrgott of Yarmouth, N.S., was arrested at Boston and taken to New York to face a charge of defrauding the U. S. customs eight years ago.

An Italian Government agent has been inspecting land in the west, and says the Italian Government is about to encourage the emigration of a good class of farmers.

Queen Alexandra has given expression to her desire that the designation "Queen Mother," given her in the prayer book issued after the death of King Edward, should no longer be employed.

The Michigan State Railroad Commission may order that the G.T.R. immediately dismiss all green hands, the inquest having shown that the Durand disaster was due to the negligence of inexperienced trainmen.

MURDERED HIS LODGE BROTHER

Philadelphia, Sept. 12.—Declaring that his victim was a member of the blackhand, who had been following him around this country for two years, Francesco Scagtio, aged 21 years, yesterday shot and fatally wounded Guiseppe Ceraclo. The shooting occurred in the heart of the Italian district and was witnessed. Scagtio was captured aftere a chase of several squares. Ceraclo was taken to a hospital and died shortly after being admitted.

Scagtio, in his statement to the police, said that Ceraclo and he had been members of the same secret society in Italy. He failed to obey the command of the order, and came to this country to escape punishment. He was followed by Ceraclo, who, he says, dogged him through several towns in the mining regions of this state, and followed him to this city.

Determined to end the suspense, Scagtio yesterday sought Ceraclo, and saying, "I'll get you first," shot him.

ROOSEVELT HAS A GUARD

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 12.—Coming Saturday to the scene of the street car strike riots, which kept Columbus in a state of disorder for weeks, former President Roosevelt, in a speech here, denounced in strongest terms acts of lawlessness and men who committed them. The state capitol is still being guarded by militia, and Col. Roosevelt himself was escorted by United States troops from the Columbus barracks.

As the strike is still on, J. A. Metcalfe, chairman of the Roosevelt reception committee, asked President Taft to assign the regular troops, to guard the former President, and the President consented.

It has been announced that after today Governor Harmon will withdraw his control of the situation here, and the municipal government, under Mayor Marshall, will have full charge.

TOBACCO GOES UP IN PRICE

Leamington, Sept. 12—Farmers within the Essex country tobacco belt will reap a rich harvest this year from a war between two rival companies, which are trying to buy in the crop and have forced prices up to the highest mark known in years. The price has gone up to 17 and 18 cents, while some of the growers believe in will eventually go as high as 20 cents.

Last year the growers sold their crops at the rate of 15 cents, and this was considered unusually high. In former years the price has been as low as 6 cents. The crop this year is considered quite as good as last. Growers will receive more than half a million dollars for it.

Q.O.R. OFFICERS FOR BALMORAL

London, Sept. 12.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Sir Henry Pellatt and other officers, with twelve men, of the Queen's Own, went to Balmoral Castle last night. Capt. Pellatt is making slow but satisfactory progress towards recovery.

Gen. Macready, representing the adjutant-general, and Sir James Whitney, were amongst the crowd at Euston station who gave the Q.O.R. men en route to Balmoral a hearty send-off.

Authorized Deemonstrations.

Madrid, Sept. 12.—The Spanish Government has authorized the holding of Catholic demonstrations in the principal cities of Spain on Oct. 2, against the "prevailing impiety." Cardinal Aguirre, primate of Spain, has sent his blessing to the juntas, inviting them to maintain order, and recommending the invocation of Christ and of the Virgin.

WAS STRICKEN IN THE PULPIT

Leamington, Sept. 12.—Rev. Jasper Wilson of Hespeler, was stricken with paralysis ,while occupying the pulpit of the Methodist Church here yesterday morning, and is now lying in a dangerous condition. Rev. Mr. Wilson is a former much loved pastor of the local church, and had been invited to conduct the harvest home services, which were to have taken place yesterday.

He had just finished the opening prayer when he sank unconscious into the pulpit chair. He was carried to the home of a member of the congregation, where his condition was found to be so critical that his family was summoned to his bedside.

NO CREED, NO CONFINEMENT

St. Catharines, Sept. 12.—What is to become of George Cook, the young Indian lad convicted of the theft of a bicycle and sentenced to two years in St. John's Industrial School at East Toronto by County Judge Carman. He has been refused there because he is not a Catholic, and previously Victoria Industrial School would not have him because he is not a Protestant.

UNION LABEL

THE TEN DOLLAR COLLECTION

Brigadier Bond, editor of the War Cry, visited Peterborough on Sunday, and at the evening service the Brigadier asked the officer in charge for a $10 collection. Then the Ensign roasted the moving picture shows and the money spent on them. However, the older the Ensign gets he will discover that there are others who would like the nickels and dimes that go to the moving picture men, the cash register behind the bar and the cigar store men and pool room keeper. These others are, of course, the grocer and butcher, the baker, the milkman and the shoemaker.

MONTREAL IS RICHER

Rev. Robert Pogue, in his address last night, paid a splendid tribute to Rev. Mr. Potter, who preached his farewell sermon last night in Peterborough. Rev. Mr. Potter was first a good citizen and then a good minister. His idea was to uplift civic life seven days of the week in Peterborough. Sunday was but an opportunity for Rev. Mr. Potter to enunciate from his pulpit that which he strove to live on the other six. Montreal is richer and Peterborough poorer because he is going. Rev. Mr. Potter had enemies. Well, so had Christ, and so has every Christ for a good cause.

OPINION OF A GREAT BANKING HOUSE

The banking house of Henry Clews and Company have their financial finger on the money pulse of America. They say that times are bright for the future, and that there is no cause for pessimism. So let every one smile.

PEOPLE FIND WHAT THEY ARE LOOKING FOR

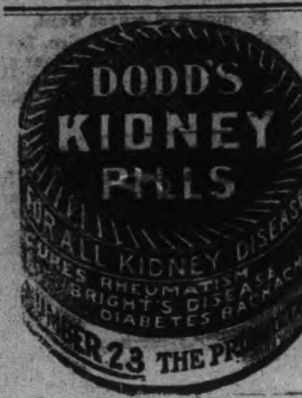
Last Sunday night Rev. Robert Pogue in his sermon said many good things. He preached on "Reasons for one being a Christian." In the course of his remarks he said that if people were looking for Counterfeit Christians they could easily find them. If they were looking for genuine Christians they, too, were easily discovered. People find what they are looking for. Hundreds of thousands have gone to Toronto during the last few weeks. Thousands visited the places of amusement. Were they looking for tinsel and fleshlings and fine fat legs they were seen in the play houses that pander to those of that calibre. Was it the intellectual uplift they sought, then there are many places where this also was to be found. Thousands of visitors to Toronto never got past the Ward and red light district, many thousands more admired High Park, Riverside, Queen's Park, and the scores of Governmental, municipal and private buildings.

'TWAS COMPETITION DID IT

Ten additional orders have been secured as a result of the canvass for rural subscribers for the Guelph Exchange.—Telephone Gazette.

Competition, or the next best thing, the fear of competition is the life of trade. The time was when the farmer had to canvass the company. Now the boot is on the other foot.

In a town near Niagara Falls there was once but one bus line and the drivers were not anxious whether the company was well satisfied or not, whether the busses were clean or the business well looked after. One day a man in an automobile came along, one of those big fellows carrying 20 persons. Presto change! the busses were cleaned, faster and more stylish horses put on. 'Twas competition did it. Once in a little burg near Guelph there was but one barber shop. The razor was not any too sharp, or the towels any too warm. But one day a live barber appeared and lo! the razor took on new edge and the towels were hot and much cleaner. 'Twas competition did it.



A FAULT OF THE AGE

The Lethbridge Herald criticizes the car window critic. An Ontario man travelling west wrote back his impressions of the country. This is the fault of the age—our superficiality. We are tradesmen before we are out of our knee pants, lawyers and doctors before the fluff on our face has turned to hair. We write a book in a week, it is read and forgotten in a night. It can be well and truly said that generally speaking we are living in a superficial age. This is especially true of the United States. But in England this fact is generally lacking. A man knows his trade and has mastered his profession usually before he is unloaded on an unsuspecting public.

PUSH IT ALONG

The Y.M.C.A. fills the bill. From the days of the founder to this afternoon hour, September 12, 1910, is a great gap. It has risen to become a world-wide institution. Many a homesick young man in the strange city afar from his native town has it mothered, many the young chap out of work has it fathered,—piloted to a position. It a clean institution. Take ten men, young or old, who are members, and faithful ones, and ten who scoff Y.M.C.A work and tilt their elbows on the bar, or play cards in the side room, or pool, or billiards, and there is no comparison in the prospects or hopes of this day's work done, or a greater vision in the future. The Y.M.C.A. deserves to achieve its aim, and we believe it will "get there" in the most approved fashion. This day during the campaign for larger membership, be a member of the Boost Club. It is a good thing, push it along. Be an optimist.

'Twixt optimist and pessimist
The difference is droll,
The optimist sees the doughnut,
The pessimist, the hole.

THE NEW LIBERAL ARGUMENT

"You want a postoffice here, and you certainly need one badly, but you will never get it so long as you vote Conservative."—E. M. Macdonald, M. P., at Lethbridge.—"To the pure all things are pure." Sir Wilfrid Laurier. This is pure politics.

RATHER WHERE DID THE MONEY GO?

It was a highly improbable story, indeed, says the London Free Press, that came from Ottawa to the effect that in an old strong box in the treasury department had been found half a million dollars, for which no one could account. It is the money that is missing rather than the money that is found that Ottawa is usually unable to account for.

WAKE UP, CASH UP

Canon Davidson deserves success, and what is more, he is securing it. He wants chimes, good chimes, and he won't rest till he gets them. No city with any claim to importance, but that has chimes. They are tuneful, edifying and inspiring. We must have the chimes. Canon Davidson will not be disappointed at a twenty-five cent contribution, nor surprised at one for one hundred dollars. Bring on the chimes and loud may they ring. Little Oakville, population 2,500 in summer, 1,500 in winter, has a peal costing several thousand dollars. Wake up, cash up, Peterborough, and dig down in your jeans.

SIDE LIGHTS

HORRIBLE MOTIVE

Boston Herald.

Edward H. R. Green, the son of the richest woman in the world, is a bachelor.

"The reason why I am a bachelor," said Mr. Green to a St. Louis reporter, "is that I'm so big that I can't disguise myself sufficiently to pose as a poor man. In my own person I'm afraid of being married for the wrong reason.

"I'm afraid lest like the lady with the doughnuts, I may be the victim of ulterior and insulting motives.

"The lady I refer to, after assisting a tramp, received another visit an hour later from the same man.

" 'Madam,' he said, 'you gave me three doughnuts a while back. Would you mind adding another one to make it four?'

" 'Gladly,' said the lady all smiles, and she wrapped a doughnut in a newspaper and handed it to him. 'So you like my doughnuts do you?'

" 'No, madam, it ain't that,' said the tramp. 'Me and some friends down in the Loller wants to have a game of quoits.' "

THE WHITE ROSE OUT OF REACH

Florence A. Jones.

The red rose, close by my garden wall,
Has climbed up over my window sill,
And flaunts like a laughing light o' love
Her scarlet heart—as a red rose will
A white rose, stately and cold and sweet,
Just over the narrow wall I see;
The farthest bound of the farthest star,
Is not so far as that rose from me.
I may wear the red rose if I will,
But my heat cries out—the old, old cry,
'Oh, give me the white rose out of reach—
Pray, what do I care for the rose near by."
Thus ever I hold out empty hands
With world-old longing too deep for speech
For what to me is the rose near by;
I want the rose that is out of reach!

IT ALL DEPENDS.

Hamilton Times.

Those Protestants who very naturally resent Father Vaughan's attacks on Protestantism, which might very well have been omitted from his Eucharistic Congress address, now know how it is themselves. They can probably put themselves in the other fellow's place and imagine his feelings when he reads the brutal and offensive articles which Brother Hocken, of the Orange Sentinel delights in. How much better if the zealots would treat one another's religious peculiarities with forbearance and charity!

THE GENUINE ALWAYS SUPERIOR TO THE IMITATION

The experienced buyer never permits the shrewd merchant to convince him that an imitation is superior to the genuine advertised article. In refusing a substitute he protects himself and the manufacturers who have expended enormous sums in giving the public information regarding their products.

Advertised articles have stood the test of public approval on their merits and materials embracing their make-up. The mere fact that they are imitated is competent testimony of their worth.

You are safe in rejecting the article offered as "just as good."

The Round-Up

A Romance of Arizona

Novelized From Edmund Day's Melodrama

By JOHN MURRAY and MILLS MILLER

Copyright, 1908, by C. W. Dillingham Co.

Glances of admiration were cast at the girl, who was dressed simply and plainly in a little white gown which Mrs. Allen had made for her for the wedding. Polly's youth, good nature and ability to take care of herself made her a favorite on the ranch. She had no need of defenders, but if an occasion should arise that Polly required a knight there were a score of guns at her service at an hour's notice.

"Howdy, Miss Polly!" they cried.

"Looks like a picture from a book," said Fresno, hoping to win back the ground he had lost by Sagebrush's openly expressed admiration.

Polly was flattered by the comments and the glances of the boys, which expressed their approval of her appearance more loudly than spoken words. She pretended, however, to be annoyed. "Go 'long,' she said. "Where's Bud Lane? Didn't you give him his invite?"

The boys turned from one to the other with feigned glances of disgust at being slighted by Polly for an absent one. The one sided courtship of Bud and Polly was known up and down the valley, and indefinite postponement of their wedding day was one of the jests of the two ranches.

"Oh, we sent it on to him at Florence. He'll git it in time if he ain't gone to the Lazy K with Buck McKee," said Sagebrush; then, turning to the other cowboys, he added in an aggrieved tone, "Polly ain't got no eyes for no one excep' Bud."

Polly stepped to Allen's side and, laying her head on his shoulder, said, "Ain't I?" Allen patted the girl's head. He was very fond of her, looking upon her as another daughter.

Polly smiled back into his face and then, with a glance at the cowboys, said, "Say, Uncle Jim, there's some bottles to be opened."

The invitation was an indirect one, but all knew what it meant and started for the house.

"Root beer," added Polly mischievously. "The corks pull awful hard."

Allen glanced at her in feigned alarm.

"What do you want to do—stampede the bunch?"

Before she could answer the approach of a horse attracted the attention of the group.

"There's Jack now!" cried Sagebrush in tones which plainly showed his relief. "No, it ain't," he added reflectively. "He rode his pacin' mare, an' that's a trottin' horse."

The cry of the rider was heard quieting his mount. Allen recognized the voice. "It's Slim Hoover," he cried.

Polly clapped her hands and said mischievously to Sagebrush: "Now you'll see me makin' googoo eyes to somebody besides Bud Lane. I ain't a-goin' to be the only girl in Pinal county Slim Hoover ain't set up to."

"An' shied off from," added Sagebrush, a little nettled by Polly's overlooking him as a subject for flirtation. "But what's Slim doin' over this way?"

"Come to Jack's weddin', of course," replied Polly, adding complacently, "An' probably projectin' a hitch-up of his own."

Slim ran around the corner of the house directly into the crowd, who seized him before he could recover from his surprise and proceeded to haze him, to their intense delight and the sheriff's embarrassment, for he knew that Polly was somewhere near enjoying his discomfiture. Polly waited until her victim was fully ready for her particular form of torture. The reception of the cowboys was crude to her refined form of making the fat sheriff uncomfortable.

With the velvety cruelty of a flirt she held out her hand, saying, "Hello, Slim."

The sheriff flushed under his tan. The red crept up the back of his neck to his ears. He awkwardly took off his hat. With a bow and a scrape he greeted her, "Howdy, Miss Polly, howdy?" Meantime he shook her hand until she winced from the heartiness of the grip.

"What's the news?" she asked as she slowly straightened out her fingers one by one.

"There's been a killin' over Florence way," announced the sheriff, putting on his hat and becoming an officer of the law with duty to perform.

"Who is the misfortunate?" asked Sagebrush as they gathered about Hoover and listened intently.

Murder in Arizona was a serious matter until punishment was meted out to the slayer or he was freed by his fellow citizens. Far from courts of justice and surrounded by men to whom death was often merely an incident in a career of crime, the settlers were forced to depend upon themselves to keep peace on the border. They acted quickly, but never hastily. Judgment followed quickly on conviction. Their views were broad, and rarely were their decisions wrong.

"'Ole Man' Terrill," replied the sheriff. "Happened about 10 this mornin'. Some man caught him alone in the railroad station an' blowed his head half off."

"Do tell!" was Allen's exclamation.

"Yep," continued the sheriff. "He must have pulled a gun on the fellow. He put up some sort of a fight, as the room is some mussed up."

"Robbery?" queried Polly, with wide open eyes.

"That's what," answered Slim, turning to her. "He had three thousan' dollars pinned in his vest, county money for salaries. You know how he toted his wad around with him, defyin' man or the devil to get it away from him? Well, some one who was both man an' devil was too much for him."

"Who found him?"

"I did myself. Went over around noon after the money. Didn't stop to go back to town fer a posse. Trail was already too cold. Could tell it was a man that rode a pacin' horse."

His auditors looked at each other, striving to remember who of their acquaintance rode a pacing horse. Sagebrush Charley shook his head. "Nobody down this way, 'ceptin', of course, the boss, rides a pacer. Must be one of the Lazy K outfit, I reckon."

"Most likely," said the sheriff. "He struck out south, probably to throw me off scent. Then he fell in with two other men, an' this balled me up. I lost one of the tracks, but follered the other two round Sweetwater mesa till I come where they rode into the river. Of course I couldn't foller the trail any farther at that p'int, so, bein' as I was near Uncle Jim's, I rode over fer help to look along both banks an' pick up the trail wherever it comes out of the river. Sorry I must break up yer fun, boys, but some o' you must come along with me. Duty's duty. I want Sagebrush anyhow, as I s'pose I can't ask fer Jack Payson."

Sagebrush pulled a long face. At any other time he would have jumped at the chance of running to earth the dastardly murderers of his old friend Terrill. But in the matter of this his first experience of a wedding, he had tickled his palate so long with the sweets of anticipation that he could not bear to forego the culminating swallow of realization.

"I don't see why I shouldn't be let off as well as Jack," he grumbled. "Our cases is similar. You see, it's my first weddin'," explained the foreman to the sheriff.

The other cowboys howled with delight. The humor of the situation caught their fancy, and they yelled a chorus of protestation in Hoover's ears. In this Colonel Allen joined.

"Don't spile the weddin'," he pleaded. "This here event has already rounded up the Sweetwater outfit fer you an' saved you more time than you'll lose by waitin' till it's over. Then we'll all jine you."

Hoover commanded silence and, rolling a cigarette, gravely considered the proposition. He realized that the murderers should be followed up at once, but that if he forced the cowboys by the legal power he exercised to forego the pleasure they had been anticipating so greatly they would not be so keen in pursuit as if they had first "given the boss his sendoff." The considerations being equal, or, as he put it, "hoss an' hoss," it seemed to him wise to submit to Allen's proposition, backed, as it was, by the justice of his plan that the occasion of the wedding had already saved valuable time in assembling the posse. He assented, therefore, but, to maintain the dignity of his office and control of the situation, with apparent reluctance.

"Well, hurry up the sacreements an' ceremonies, then, an' the minute the preacher ties the knot every man of you but Jack an' the parson an' Uncle Jim gits on his hoss an' follers me, I'll wait out in the corral."

At this there was another storm of expostulation, led this time by Allen. Of course Hoover was to come to the wedding and be its guest of honor. "You shall be the first to wish Jack an' Echo luck," said Allen. "That means you'll be the next one to marry."

The ruddy faced sheriff blushed to the roots of his auburn hair.

"Much obliged, but I ain't fixed up fer a weddin'," and he looked down at his travel stained breeches, tucked in riding boots white with alkali dust, and felt of his buttonless waistcoat and gingham shirt open at the throat, with the bandanna handkerchief around his neck in lieu of both collar and tie.

Polly assured him that he would do very well as he was; that for her part she "wouldn't want no better dressed man than him to be present at her own weddin', not even "the feller I am goin' to hitch up to," whereat Slim Hoover was greatly set at ease.

Polly was bounding up the piazza steps to tell Echo of the accession to her party when Hoover held up his hand. A terrifying suggestion had flashed through his mind.

"Hold on a minute!" he exclaimed, and, turning to Allen, he asked anxiously, "Does this here guest of honor have to kiss the bride?"

The question was so foreign to the serious topic which had just been under discussion that every one laughed in relief of the nervous tension.

Allen's fun loving nature at once bubbled to the surface. With an air of assumed anger he said to the sheriff:

"Of course; every guest has to do it." Then, turning to the cowboys, he asked, "Is there any one here as holds out strong objection to kissin' my daughter?"

"Not me," laughed Sagebrush. "I'm here to go the limit."

"I'm an experienced kisser, I am," said Parenthesis. "I don't lose no chance at practice."

"I'll take two, please," simpered Fresno.

Show Low interrupted the general sally which followed this remark, saying, "I strings my chips along with Fresno."

"Slim's afraid of females!" drawled Polly provokingly.

"Oh, thunder!" exclaimed Slim to Polly. "No, I ain't, nothin' of the sort. I'm a peaceful man, I am. I never likes to start no trouble."

"Get out! What's one kiss?" laughed Allen.

"I've seen a big jack pot of trouble opened by chippin' in just one kiss," wisely remarked the sheriff.

Sagebrush at this point announced decisively, "The bride has got to be kissed."

Slim tried to break through the group and enter the house, thinking that by making such a move he would divert their attention and that in the excitement of the wedding he could avoid kissing the bride, an ordeal which to him was more terrible than facing the worst gun fighter in Arizona.

"I deputize you to do the kissin' for me," Slim said to Parenthesis, who had laid his hand on the sheriff's shoulder to detain him.

"No, siree," the cowboy replied; "not me. Every man does his own kissin' in this game." Slim halted as if undecided. Suddenly he turned on his heel and started for the corral. "I'll wait outside," he shouted.

"No, you don't!" cried his companions. Slim turned to face a semicircle of drawn revolvers. He looked from one man to another as if puzzled as to what move to make next. Allen was annoyed by the sheriff's actions, taking it as an insult that Hoover would not kiss his daughter, although he had started to twit the sheriff in the beginning.

"You ain't goin' to insult me an' mine that way. No man sidesteps kissin' one of my kids," he said angrily.

Slim was plaintively apologetic. "I ain't kissed a female since I was a yearlin'."

"Time you started," snapped Polly.

"No, you don't!" cried his companions.

"You kiss the bride or I take it pussenel," said Allen, thoroughly aroused.

"Well, if you put it that way I'll do it," gasped Slim in desperation.

The agreement restored the boys to their good nature.

"You will have to put blinders on me, though, an' back me up," cautioned Hoover.

"We'll hog tie you an' sit on your head," laughed Sagebrush as the guests entered the house.

LOCAL SERMONS ON EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS

CANON DAVIDSON.

At St. John's church yesterday Canon Davidson referred to the Church of England bi-centenary at Halifax, and also to the Eucharistic Congress held in Montreal, and also dealt with certain utterances proceeding from the Eucharistic Congress. In regard to the latter he pointed out that the exclusive attitude of the Roman Church, gave us an opportunity to show a kindly spirit. People should carefully distinguish between what was Catholic and what was Roman Catholic, a very different thing.

"Our branch of the church," said Mr. Davidson, "is a living part of the Catholic Church of all ages, and our creeds are the creeds of the Catholic Church in which every day we profess our belief. But the river of Catholicism which has come down to us has been enriched by the tributary stream of Protestantism, which has made our religion rugged and pure, and brought out the individual responsibility and relationship to God.

"We are thankful for our heritage of truth, whether it comes from Catholic or Protestant sources, and lieve that both sides have important contributions to make."

Notice was given of the harvest festival to be given next Thursday, with addres by Rev. C. A. Seagar, M. A., of Toronto. Rev. Charles Carpenter, the newly appointed assistant of St. John's, was present in the congregation yesterday, but took no official part in the services. Mr. Carpenter, who is resting at the rectory, after his long journey, will not enter upon his work for a few days.

An appeal was made, morning and evening, for further support for the Chimes Fund, and deep gratitude expressed for contributions received from citizens, and bygone members of the congregation. It was suggested that those who had not subscribed should do so at once, and that subscriptions already made should be promptly paid, in order to put the fund in the best possible shape.

REV. H. J. KEITH.

Taking for the subject of his sermon "Signs of the Times or the Significance of the Eucharist Congress," Rev. H. J. Keith, pastor of the Knox Presbyterian church, spoke of the necessity of spiritual life among the people rather than outward show and clerical dominance.

One of the signs of the times, he said at the opening of his sermon, was the materialism of the age. Illustrative of this was the Toronto Exhibition, for instance. This was an immense plant of unquestionable educational value, but it tended only to encourage the appreciation of wealth and things material. Our country was never so prosperous as it is at present, but material prosperity was often the keynote of danger and decay.

Another sign of the times was the clericalism of the age as illustrated by the Eucharistic Congress at Montreal, the outward display of which was opposed to the spirit of Christ. The church was not to be judged by its dogma, but by the life and faith. The true church was to have its sacrifice, not the mass without spiritual foundation, not mere symbols, but the spirit of Christ Himself.

Obviously referring to the statement made by Father Vaughan concerning race suicide, Mr. Keith said that race suicide was to be deplored at all times, but stated that generally speaking, it was most prevalent in Catholic countries.

REV. C. H. COON.

At the Mark St. Methodist church last night Rev. C. H. Coon based his sermon on the subject of "The Eucharist and Its Abuses."

He stated that the term "Eucharist," while not a scriptural term, was, in a sense and to an extent, a fairly well chosen term, as applied to the rite more commonly spoken of among Protestants as the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

Names, however, had only a relative value. The more essential things were to see the true significance of the rite, and to perpetuate its proper observance within the church.

He said that the sacramental observance instituted by Christ was to be perpetuated as a commemoration of the Saviour's stoning, suffering and death, and a means whereby worthy participants should obtain in larger fullness the benefits and blessings which by His suffering and death were secured.

It was to be forever a commemorative act, a means of grace, a solemn act of worship, and a symbol of inward and actual participation of Christ in the soul, which is by faith.

There was a relation between the paschal feast of the Jew and this New Testament rite; the new transcribing the old in this way; That whereas the first was but a bare commemoration, the second united the idea of commemoration with the idea of actual participation in the spiritual blessings it commemorates.

This sacrament was a "Holy Communion," and it was love expressed in sacrifice which constituted the unifying power by which men are joined to Christ and held together in Christian brotherhood.

Referring to the Eucharistic procession held in connection with the great congress in Montreal, the speaker expressed a hesitancy to criticize the beliefs and customs of co-religionists, and would not for a moment question the honesty of conviction which underlaid the magnificant demonstration, but deplored the fact that the simple elements used in the sacrament should be carried through the streets amid gorgeous trappings, worshipped and adored by a great multitude of clerics and lay people, and that a company of our Canadian militia should be loaned to act as a body guard to the so-called sacred host.

There was being witnessed in Montreal what was perhaps the most extravagant and gorgeous spectacle ever witnessed on the American continent under religious auspices, and while we may justly commend a congress of devout religionists for the purpose of advancing the work of the world's uplifting, and should be ashamed and humiliated were there not shown to such a gathering proper courtesy and respect, yet we would be recreant to duty as Protestants if we did not demur against what we believe to be an unscriptural and idolatrous form of worship, under the circumstances referred to, within the streets of a Canadian city.

In the word of God there was not a shred of evidence that the doctrine of transubstantiation was true; but, supposing it were true, one could not think that the ascended Lord would, with approval, look down upon Himself being carried about thus before the gaze of men, the centre and object of this extravagance and display to which our attention was being invited.

Mr. Coon urged Christians to familiarize themselves with the truth concerning the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and to often avail themselves of the privileges of that sacred feast, which tells of a Saviour Who gives salvation and life, and deliverance from the chains of sin and death.

PRIZE WINNING HORSES AT PETERBOROUGH FAIR A SPECIAL ATTRACTION

One of the many special attractions at the Peterborough Fair will be the horse exhibit.

The horses, fourteen in number, owned by Mr. J. R. Stratton, Senator Beith and Messrs. Crowe and Murray, and which took fancy prizes at the Cobourg Horse Show and the Toronto Exhibition, will be shown. The animals will be exhibited in front of the grand stand on the afternoon of Friday.

From Peterborough they will be shipped to Ogdensburg. The secretary, Mr. Fred. Hall, is a busy official these days, and he reports entries to be still pouring in.

The football competition for the R. R. Hall trophy promises to be productive of some good sport, and if arrangements can be completed two fast baseball nines will put on an exhibition game.

Bicyclists Collided

Two bicyclists collided at the Grand Trunk crossing on Saturday evening about 5.30, with the result that both bit the dust. No ill-feeling appeared to exist between them, however, over the affairs as they both arose and shook hands, before proceeding on their way.

The Grand Trunk has served notice on the city of Guelph that they will take proceedings to expropriate Jubilee Park in that City.

THEATRICAL

For the opening attraction at the Grand Opera House, the management could not have provided a cleaner or more wholesome offering than "Ole Olson" which introduced Ben Holmes to its patrons, in two performances, Saturday. Each of the cast fulfilled his or her character acceptably, and splendid support was given Mr. Holmes in his work as Ole Olson. Paul Jordan, "who inspires to fill a dead man's shoes" was an effective villain and he had an able pal in Jefferson Bassett, the first husband of Mrs. Jordan at whom the designs of the two are directed. Ole Olson with the assistance of Gracie Dimple, with her ready tongue, plucky spirit and true nature, is more than a match for the pair and eventually all ends well.

The comedy by Mr. Holmes in his character of the big good natured Swedish boy is breezy at all times, and his singing of Strawberries and Memories of My Swedish Home, received a warm hand.

A young Finlander named Charles Hill cut his throat on the M. C. R. express between Windsor and Essex.

PASSED AWAY AT ROCHESTER

Death of Chas Johnston, a Former Resident of This City

Mr. James Johnston, Bonacord St., received a telegram to-day notifying him of the death of his brother, Chas. Johnson, which occured at Rochester yesterday. The late Mr. Johnston had been a sufferer from inflamatory rheumatism. He was well known in this city being a resident here the early part of his life.

Besides his parents, a wife and two children, three brothers and two sisters survive.

REV. J. G. POTTER SAID FAREWELL

One could not help but observe the air of profound solemnity and intense feeling which marked the proceedings at St. Andrew's church last evening, when the pastor, Rev. J. G. Potter, delivered his farewell sermon to the congregation to which he has devoted the past fourteen years of his life in faithful, zealous service. Beloved by his parishoners and by the different church organizations, Mr. Potter is leaving behind the memory of his many kindly deeds and of his help to the religious and temperance work of the city.

Long before the beginning of the service last evening the church was filled. Chairs were necessary to accommodate late comers.

Taking for his text Ephesians 4;11, "And He gave some apostles, and some prophets, and some evangelists, and some pastors and teachers."

"Fourteen years ago," said Mr. Potter, "I came to St. Andrew's church, and my first duty and obligation was to put myself in touch with the history of the church and with the people of my parish."

The results had been most encouraging and gratifying. The elders had showed their appreciation of the work which began among the young people of the church. The Young People's Society, the Young People's Guild, the Ladies' Aid, the Mission Band, all had contributed to make the heart of a minister overflow with joy and appreciation.

He appreciated the respect and attention given him by those who were his seniors in experience and wisdom.

"Though my messages may often have seemed rough and unsympathetic, they were spoken with a prayer to God for help and inspiration that would reach the heart of some needy one. No work of art or sculpture can reflect the work of the Master in a greater degree than has your conduct to your minister.

"Minister and people working together help each other to knock off the rough edges of our character. May God continue His great work upon you.

"In the hour of trials, misery, disasters and business ruin, in perplexities, the opportunity comes to the minister to help the bearer with his burden. Though by doing so it consumes both night and day, still it cannot be thrown aside, as Christ set the example. No Christian minister can thrust aside the work God has set his way."

There was a joy unspeakable that came to a minister when he was able to lead the young life, the boys and girls to Christ.

"No man could have been treated with more respect, sincerity and love than the elders and managers had manifested. A change might be the means of the still further uplift of the church."

In conclusion Mr. Potter urged his people to go on in the good work, and urged them to choose a good successor.

"I hope this may not be the last time I will be privileged to speak here, but it is the last time as your pastor."

During the evening Mr. Asa Huycke sang a solo entitled "Beyond the Gates of Paradise."

A reception will be held in the church to-night, and on Tuesday a lecture will be given in Charlotte St. Methodist church by Mr. Potter on "Temperance."

MANY WERE TURNED AWAY UNABLE TO HEAR PREACHER

Rev. Dr. Langfeldt preached in the Bethany parish of Manvers yesterday at three services. At St. Mary's, St. Alban's and at St. Pauls. In the evening, service in the Methodist church Bethany, was not held, and 100 chairs were placed in the Anglican church, St. Paul's. But even these were insufficient to accommodate the audience that sought admission and many were turned away. This is a glowing tribute to Rev. Dr. Langfeldt.

FROM FAR-OFF VANCOUVER WAS PREACHER YESTERDAY IN PARK STREET BAPTIST CHURCH

The Rev. W. H. Redman, pastor of South Hill Baptist Church, Vancouver, preached a most acceptable and instructive sermon at the evening service of the Park street Baptist church yesterday. Mr. Redman took his text from Rev. 21, 10, his subject being, "The Great City." He spoke of the greatness of Vancouver, but its present, or future greatness, could not compare with the greatness of the City of God.

Mr. Redman's many friends were glad to hear this Peterborough boy who is making good in the west, at his chosen profession.

BE SURE YOUR SINS WILL FIND YOU OUT

The Text for a Closing Exhortation by Brigadier Bond at the Salvation Army Temple—The Last of a Series of Special Services.

The special services at the Salvation Army Temple were brought to a close last evening with an effective exhoration by Brigadier Bond, editor of the War Cry.

The services have been intersting and helpful. Assisting Brigadier Bond have been Brigadier Taylor, Captain Dodds and Artist Grey, all of whom are interested in Army work at Toronto.

The opening exercises at last night's service, which included a song from the Songsters' Brigade, "Prepare for Eternity," were bright and inspiring. It was also the occasion of a farewell testimony by Miss Grace Whiffin, who leaves this week to enter the training school at Toronto.

Brigadier Bond took for his text "Be sure your sins will find you out," and in his opening remarks touched on two characters in the Bible, with whom this had come true.

The story of Achan's sin, which brought the anger of the Lord down upon the children of Israel, with the result that they were defeated by the men of Ai, and that of the offence committed by Gehazi, in connection with the cleansing of Naaman, was put before the large gathering in a graphic manner.

Both Achan and Gehazi were found out in their sin and terribly punished. Annanias and his wife, too, found this to be true.

Be sure your sins will find you out. Would to God it was written in the heavens in letters of fire, so that all might find it, fervently exclaimed the speaker.

We might say those were different days from the present, but God still works with the consciences of men with such an effect that their sins are brought home to them. By way of illustration, Brigadier Bond told of a case which recently came to his notice. A man in Hungary, 120 years of age, had, when only twenty years old, killed a man in a fit of jealousy. He conveyed the body to a lime pit, and eventually all traces of it disappeared. Years passed, fifth, one hundred, and the crime was not discovered. But during all this time his guilty conscience harbored the terrible offence. Finally, on his deathbed, he called for the authorities, and in his terror confessed the murder. His sin had found him out.

Those deeds done by us in secret no one knows just now, but they will find us out some day. We may not break the laws of the land, but we are breaking the laws of God. His Book says a day will come when all our deeds will stand revealed.

The speaker referred to the arrest of Crippen of recent date. In the clouds above the wireless telegraphy flashed the news to his avengers. Below in the mighty waters of the deep was conveyed the news. His sin, if he is guilty, had found him out in a way he had not suspected. Every word we speak vibrates on and on. Those idle words, that profanity, is recorded as the sounds into a phonograph, and the judgment day will reveal all.

Another striking illustration was given to bear out the truth of the text. At the "Old Bailey" a woman was charged with an awful crime. An instrument was found, on which were crimson stains. These, it was alleged by the prosecution, were those of blood. The defence claimed they were stains of crimson fabric. The expert was called. In his examination of the instrument he had found, by the use of the microscope, two tiny specks of human body. Her guilt was brought home to the woman. She had been found out, and was sent to prison for ten years.

Many of us are guilty of the sin of neglecting God. Speaking direct to his hearers the Brigadier said; "You come here week after week and you are still unsaved. This is a sin that will find you out, and will be punished by eternal death. But there is forgiveness and pardon for all. Seek God and decide to sin no more against Him. Your sins will be all blotted out. Now is the time; call upon Him while He is near."

GREAT TENNIS PLAYED IN GAMES WITH VISITING CLUBS

Forty Four Games Played Before Winner of Mixed Doubles Was Returned—Local Players Won 7 of the Events —The List of Scores.

The tennis matches on Saturday between the Millbrook Tennis Club and the Peterborough Lawn Tennis Association proved to be the most interesting events of the season. The visitors were all skilful and experienced players, in good form, and they gave an account of themselves such as they might well be proud of. The net result of the day's matches was seven wins to five in favor of Peterborough, and it was an open question until the last match was over which side would capture the most events.

A good deal of credit is due to the home players for the splendid exhibition of tennis which they displayed, and this development is largely due to a season's consistent practice and the competitive matches carried on by the Lawn Tennis Association.

One could not, in justice, to the participants on either side, make any special mention of the individual players, yet there was one event which caused much excitement for the many spectators. It was a long-drawn mixed double contest between Miss A. Hall and Sandford Hall, for Peterborough, and Miss Wood and Mr. Needler, of Millbrook. It took 44 games to settle the dispute, and the spectators enthusiastically applauded the good strokes on both sides.

The scores were as follows—

Mr. T. Allen (Millbrook) beat Dr. McPherson (Peterborough) 6—1, 3—6, 6—4.

Mr. W. Richardson (P) beat Mr. H Wood (M) 8—6, 6—3.

Miss Wood (M) beat Miss A. Hall (P) 6—3, 6—4.

Miss M. Burnett (P) beat Miss Kells (M) 1—6, 6—3, 6—2.

Miss Wood and Miss Kells (M) beat Miss Burnett and Miss Dean (P) 6—0, 6—2.

Mr. W. Landry (P) beat Mr. Charles Needler (M) 6—2, 3—6, 6—2.

Mr. T. Allen (M) beat Mr. Burnett (P) 6—2, 4—6, 6—4.

Mr. F. D. Kerr (P) beat Mr. A. Smith (M) 4—6, 6—1, 6—3.

Messrs. Landry and S. Hall (P) beat Messrs. Needler and Allen (M) 3—6, 6—0, 6—2.

Mr. Wood and Miss Kells (M) beat Mr. Richardson and Miss Burnett (P) 8—6, 6—3.

Messrs. F. D. Kerr and H. D. Burnett (P) beat Messrs. H. Wood and A. Smith (M) 6—4, 6—2.

Miss A. Hall and Sandy Hall (P) beat Mr. Needler and Miss Wood (M) 10—8, 7—9, 6—4.

The next tennis event of interest will be the match between Mr. W. Landry and Sandy Hall for the championship of "A" tournament in the city contest. The winner of this match will play Mr. H. Myers, winner of "B" tournament in the finals. The match between Messrs. Hall and Landry will be played on Wednesday at 4 p.m. on the Y.M.C.A. courts.

JEFFRIES FOUGHT GAME FIGHT SAYS JOHNSON

Jack Johnson's voice is not one of those raised to swell the cry that Jeffries was yellow in the memorable affair at Reno.

At the Star Theatre on Saturday night, Johnson made a short speech in response to insistant recalls. He had just finished sparring three rounds with Walter Monahan, the heavyweight champion of the Pacific Coast and the crowd woudn't let him leave Toronto without declaring himself.

The champion wanted to know if the crowd wanted a speech or a song and said the popular verdict would rule. This resulted in the cries of "speech" and "song" till the confusion resulted in a roaring comedy, and then Johnson settled down to talk. He corrected the impression that Jeffries quit when he saw things going against him.

In the second round of the fight, Jeffries received a left uppercut on the jaw, which paralysed the whole side of his face, and from that time on it was an uphill battle for him all the way. He took all kinds of punishment and no man could have fought a gamer fight.

RACE TRACK FOR THIS CITY SERIOUSLY CONSIDERED

Mr. Frank Elmore, sporting editor of the Mail and Empire, stated to a member of the Review staff in Toronto last night that the talk of a big circuit race track being established in Peterborough, was no idle rumor.

"There is every probability of the track being built there," said Mr. Elmore, "although it would be premature to announce positively that Peterborough will be incorporated in the circuit."

Mr. Elmore is one of the best known sporting men in the province, and with his assurance that the promoters of the scheme are seriously considering the proposal to establish a track in Peterborough the prospects are encouraging.

GOULDING WINS BOTH AND IS NOW WALKING CHAMPION

George Goulding, the Canadian walker, is now a world's champion, having beaten E. J. Webb of the Herne Hill Harriers, London, England, in both the one mile and three mile walks at the Exhibition track meet Saturday afternoon. Fifteen thousand people saw a performance of unusual merit. There were no field events, but the variety and keen competition of the track performances made the afternoon especially enjoyable. The sole responsibility of the credit of the first athletic day at the Canadian National Exhibition goes to Director of Athletics Elwood Hughes. The unqualified success of the day has prompted the directors of the big Fair to make "Athletic Day" an annual fixture.

GEORGE GOULDING
Who Won Both Walking Events From Webb

Of course the chief interest of the afternoon centred in the invitation walking races between Goulding and Webb. Both walkers are eminently fair, and the judges were not called upon at any stage to correct the respective gaits of the contestants. Goulding is perhaps the smoother of the pair. In the mile Webb jumped to the front at the start, but Goulding took up the pacemaking after one hundred yards had been covered and was never afterwards headed. The first half was stepped in 3.04, but Goulding slowed down in the second half. Webb showed no inclination to take up the pace, and the mile was completed in 6.32 4-5. The local man sprinted away from the Englishman two hundred yards out and won by about thirty feet. Webb gave the impression that he was not trying particularly hard to cut down the lead which Goulding had earned, preferring rather to save himself for the three mile event.

As in the mile event, Goulding did most of the pacing in the three-mile race, although the men alternated in the lead. Webb glued to the Torontonian, and, although the latter tried a number of short sprints to shake him off, he was always in close attendance. Not more than three or four feet separated the men at any stage of the three mile journey until the bell lap, when Goulding opened up a slight gap and increased it to ten yards at the top turn. After turning into the straight the Canadian sprinted and, although Webb responded gamely, he could not hold the pace, and Goulding drew away to win by about twenty yards. The time was 23.15.

Webbb took his beating manfully. He offered no excuses and said that he had done his best. The Englishman has made an army of friends by his modesty and the plucky races which he walked on Saturday. "He's a jolly well good walker. He beat me fairly both times," said Webb of Goulding after the double defeat. The scene on the track after the second race was one to be remembered. The crowd broke away from the police and surged over to the scratch, where both Goulding and Webb were congratulated on their fine races.

The mile was walked in 6.32. Goulding has done 6.25 4-5, and Webb's best time is also much faster than that on Saturday. In the three miles Goulding's best mark is 21.55 and Webb's 21.21.

OPEN SEASON FOR PARTRIDGE.

There seems to be some doubt in certain quarters as to the open season for partridge owing to a belief that a change has been recommended. In reply to a question, Superintendent Tinsley writes;—"The season, for partridge, will open this year on October 15th, and close on the 15th day of November, no change having been recommended." The superintendent adds;—"It is not within the province of the department to recommend an open season, but if it is thought that a certain species of game need further protection than is afforded by the act, the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may proclaim a closed season."

After putting in half the baseball season, and heading the batting list, in the Senior City Baseball League at Toronto, he hiked to Pittsburg, and has since been playing the game in the Smoky City.

He has accepted a situation at the Oriental.

There wasn't any brass band at the C. P. R. Station yesterday when the express went through, but Jack Johnson was in the train, en route for Montreal, where he will fill an engagement this week.

A large and enthusiastic attendance marked the meeting of the Guelph Cross Country Run and Road Race Association held Friday night in that place. The annual events will be put on Thanksgiving Day. George Savage is the secretary.

The five mile open and five mile factory race will be run on a course marked out on the paved streets.

Riverside Park presented a busy scene, Saturday afternoon. The rugbyists were out in full strength and the pigskin was attacked, just as though the players meant something. About twenty, mostly juniors, were out on the green, and with the material available, a strong Junior O. R. F. U. team should represent Peterborough this season. Practices will be continued at Riverside, and all players are requested to be out in uniform.

Calgary and Hamilton battled to a 1—1 score in the finals for the People's Shield at Toronto Saturday. The two teams play again to-day.

Bessemer, Ala., Sept. 10.—Striking out more than a score of batters and keeping his opponents helpless for two games last Saturday, Pitcher Lucker, of the local League team, is believed to have established a precedent in baseball by winning both ends of the double-header without a hit or run. Lucker gave several bases on balls, but nothing resembling a hit was secured off his delivery.

Yes; the Merchant Who Advertises Can Afford to Sell for Less

No matter what the article is, unless it should be something whose selling price is as fixed as that of a postage stamp, the merchant who is an advertiser is sure to sell it for less than the merchant who does not advertise.

For he is enabled to count his profits on a large aggregate of sales—not compelled to secure them from a FEW SALES, for he would then be taxing a small number of customers with the entire support of his business.

A store that makes a net profit of $100 in a day from sales to three hundred customers, is sure to sell to each of those customers on a closer margin of profit than is the non-advertising store that is COMPELLED to make enough to cover a daily expense of $50 out of sales made to fifty customers.

If you are one of the 300 daily customers of the merchant who advertises, you are paying but one three hundredth part of his store-profits on the days you buy. If you are one of the fifty daily customers of the non-advertising merchant, you are aying one fiftieth of his profits.

EARL GREY'S GREAT HOPES FOR CANADA'S FUTURE

The Standard of Empire Supplement of The London Standard prints an interesting statement of Earl Grey's views on the future of Canada.

"Working strongly in the minds of the Canadian people," says the popular governor-general, growing steadily from Atlantic to Pacific, with the material growth, and development which indicate its utimate justification, is the profound and inspiring conviction that the greatest America of the future lies to the northward of the line between Canada and the United States. To the northward of that line, the gravest of the problems of the great republic to the southward have no existence, and probably never will have any existence. From the character and nation-building standpoint, nature favors Canada. No climate in the world is better calculated to produce and maintain a great nation of strenuous workers, of strong brave men, good mothers, healthy children, sane social life, and far-reaching industrial and agricultural prosperity.

"Canada's land, apart from cities and industrial centres could support twice the population of the British Isles with ease. Her natural resources in minerals, timber, water and electrical power, raw material of every kind, and, above all, her agricultural resources are simply boundless, and unlike the Southern lands, Canada is a white man's country, a country for British men, women and children, in every acre of its vast territory. The people of Canada are a sane, sober, stresuous, earnest people, a patriotic and invincibly industrious people, worshipping no false gods, following no will-o'-the-wisps, but steadily, surely and with their eyes wide open, alike to opportunity and dangers, building up, there between the Atlantic and the Pacific, the greatest nation that has ever been within the greatest empire that has ever been. Canada is a wonderful inspiration to any right-thinking man, and no better fate that I can see can befall any British boy or girl man or woman, than to become a good Canadian, and play his part in the Dominion's great forward march. the most wonderful process in all this wonderful age of ours."

Lord Grey strongly favors the emigration of young children to Canada. Looking around upon the working of the poor laws in Britain, he is struck by the sad fact that pauperdom makes for the perpetuation of pauperdom; that the system makes for perambulation in a vicious circle; that the child who is reared under the poor laws is inevitably handicapped by conditions and a hall mark which lead that child again into pauperdom as an adult This is one of the great tragedies of our social system in crowded England. But if the poor law children could but be set led singly in rural Canadian homes long before they have learned to be conscious of the existence of poor laws; if they could grow up (not in poor law groups, but singly) in the free and bracing atmosphere of Canadian farm homesteads, then one could say of them, practically with certainty, that not a single one among them all would ever in his or her after life come into contact with any form of pauperdom. The girls would almost certainly become happy, useful wives and mothers; the boys—with free homesteads available to them before they reached manhood—would become independent, self-respecting farmers. They would grow up good country Canadians, than which no better, healthier, or more useful destiny could be conceived and when that prospect is compared with the prospect before the average poor law child in Great Britain the contrast is one to fill the heart and inspire the mind of the social reformers to any effort, to any sacrifice, if only so splendid a result can be achieved.

And it can quite easily be achieved, if set about in the right way. Volunteer committees in Canada—Daughters of the Empire and others—would visit the selected homes at regular intervals to make sure that the children were wisely and properly cared for. Determination and careful organization is all that is required in this matter to relieve Great Britain of a huge and growing burden; to confer an inestimable boon, in the shape of a sporting chance of independence and a cleanly, self-respecting life, upon thousands of little Britons, and to contribute a useful quota towards the upbuilding of that great nation over whose affairs Lord Grey has presided with such conspicuous distinction and success during the past six years. Instead of cruelly wasting our man power here and feeding the stream of unemployment and human suffering, let us rescue these innocents at the outset and conserve the stock in the world's finest growing ground, in the land which we trust may be always British, in Canada, the great empire centre of the future.

This is a project which Canada's Governor-General has very much at heart.

THE PASSING OF THE MAN OF LETTERS

From the New York Evening Post.

It will soon be time to write the formal epitaph of the "man of letters," just as it has already been done for the "gentle reader." The little is wellnigh outgrown. It is used but seldom now, and then ordinarily by one who refuses to place himself among the herd of mere "writers." In consequence, it has become offensive, particularly to an age like ours when nearly everybody can write. The incongruity of the title is felt everywhere. At a public dinner recently a prominent author, upon being referred to as "a distinguished man of letters," blushed for shame, while the audience tittered; and in one large university in the east the man who wears his letters the least bit consciously is termed the "belletristic trifler," or even the "literary feller."

In days gone by, and not so far in the past, either, there was a certain divinity of aspiration, as well as of inspiration, in him who ventured to cast his lot with literature. It was inherited, perhaps, from the office of the poet, who originally was the recognized seer and priest and ruler of the tribe, all in one. The poet spoke "winged words" which could fly down the years and convey their message to all believers. He told of not what was, but of what ought to be, and builded a world which was truer, it was thought than the actual world before him. Now, something of this same quality used always to be expected of the man of letters—the power of idealistic creation, whether as poet or writer of fiction, or as imaginative interpreter.

Think of our own New England coterie;—Hawthorne, Emerson, Holmes, Lowell, Thoreau, Longfellow. Each in greater or less degree had the power of bigger than verbal utterance, and left, in his reactions upon the past and the present, a creation decidedly his own. The same requisite was at the bottom of such world-famous literary societies as the Pleiade and its successor the French Academy. Not to be sentimental, it was a priceless gift, this power of imagination, of actually creating, which more than compensated, even to the popular mind, for the material poverty that traditionally went with it. But times have changed.

In this country, at least, the profession of letters can hardly be said to exist in any previously accepted sense. If pressed for a definition, one would have to say that it meant anything from teaching students how to read Anglo-Saxon to Mr. Rockefeller's writing a pedestrian account of how he got rich. The reasons for such a change of front are not far to seek. In college, where the man of letters, it should seem, might still live on in a humble way, the scientific method, now so much the fashion, often turns the study of great writers into purely literary history, or at worst into virtually an investigation of their vocabulary. And though those who are committed to such methods wisely forego for themselves any frills on their titles, they take care to let it be known that a "professor of English" is a nobler one of God's creatures than the former "man of letters."

In the outside world, the confusion is greater still. The tremendous output of so-called literature by our countless magazines has removed the distinction which used to be felt by one who had something accepted. Further, the willingness of the better magazines to publish words from the pen of a man prominent in any way whatsoever adds to the levelling process. There is "pure literature" on the Trusts, on sheep raising, on the various processes of smelting. Let one ask the question, who is our foremost man of letters to-day? and the answer, by every reasonable modern test, is—a certain African hunter. Such a surprising discovery contains, it is true, a certain element of excitement which belongs with what we like to think is American versatility.

Let France and England, if they will, have their societies intended to foster literary achievement. We do not take the thing so seriously. It is a part of the American's independence that when he really has anything to say he can say it without making such a fuss about it. Anybody with the help of an exploiting editor can learn the "labor of composition" for all practicable purposes. Is it any wonder that your real "man of letters" will take to the woods before he will answer to his name?

Yet the case is not quite hopeless The law of the ages affirms that our attitude towards literature, having descended to the deadly level of commonplaceness, at least can go no lower, and is likely before long to range higher. No period in the sweep of civilization ever offered a better chance to the man of true literary imagination than this twentieth century in the United States. The transitional stage in which we now are is as full of possibilities as those potential times when Sir Francis Drake circled the globe and Sir Walter Raleigh discovered his El Dorado. The "man of letters" so-called, we have succeeded in shelving, no doubt, but his place will sooner or later be filled, and, we dare prophesy, by the very same sort of person, only with a different name For if history shows anything, it shows the kinship of genius; that great men of letters have all looked at life in much the same way, and always with a transforming imagination.

IDEA FOR WOMEN

Tells How Radiant Hair Can Easily Adorn any Head

It's a mighty good thing for the women of Canada that Parisian Sage can now be obtained in every town of consequence.

No preparation for the hair has done so much to stop falling hair and eradicate dandruff and make women's hair beautiful as Parisian Sage.

Parisian Sage is the only certain destroyer of the dandruff microbe which is the cause of 90 per cent. of hair trouble.

These pernicious, persistent and destructive little devils thrive on the ordinary hair tonics.

Parisian Sage is such an extraordinary and quick acting rejuvenator that Wm. Madill, druggist, who is the agent in Peterborough, guarantees it to cure dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back Parisian Sage is most daintily perfumed, it is an ideal preparation, not sticky or greasy.

It is a magnificent dressing for women who desire luxuriant, lustrous hair that compels admiration.

And a large bottle of Parisian Sage costs only 50 cents at Wm. Madill's and at leading druggists all over Canada. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every package. Made in Canada by Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont., who fill mail orders, all charges prepaid.

AMERICAN PUBLIC HAS RESPECT FOR RELIGION

What Forbes Robertson thinks of the future of the drama in the Dominion of Canada may be gathered from the following interview in the London Chronicle;

"The country is, of course, in an undeveloped state, but the population and the size of the towns is rapidly increasing. Not only the principal cities, but many of the smaller towns possesses some plendid theatres, though Canada has no dramatic companies entirely her own to play in them.

"From year in to year out the performances are practically entirely confined to American or English touring companies—principally the former, for not many English touring companies go there. Here, perhaps, lies a way to relieve the present overcrowded condition of the dramatic profession at home.

RESPECT FOR RELIGION.

"It would perhaps be excusable to think that the American temperament could scarcely rise to a full appreciation of such a play as "The Third Floor Back," he said, "but, events proved otherwise. During the run of the play I had it borne in upon me more and more that beneath the hurry and bustle of American life there lies a strong vein of sentiment, of which respect for religion is no small a part."

Mr. Robertson will be nine months in America, beginning with September and will not produce any new play for two years. He states that he is not contemplating retirement. —Toronto News.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK IS BRIGHT

(HENRY CLEWS & CO., BANKERS, NEW YORK.)

Uncertainty regarding the money situation has practically disappeared. Last week's bank statement was unexpectedly poor, but this was largely due to September disbursements. The interior is, as usual, withdrawing its balances for crop moving purposes and we are entering a period of firmer rates. It is not beyond the range of possibilities that some stringency may occur, and it remains to be seen how some of the country banks will extricate themselves from the difficulties into which they fell through aiding imprudent speculative operations. No serious disturbance, however, is anticipated in the money market this fall, especially in view of the reaction in business which necessarily diminishes the demand for accommodation.

Now that vacations are over the stock market should resume more normal activity. In the absence of fresh, unfavorable developments the market would probably respond more readily to an upward movement than a downward. Good investments are selling at very low prices, having discounted unfavorable factors, and there is no doubt an abundance of capital held awaiting investment when confidence begins to revive. There has been a marked falling off in the supply of new securities, and this also must have a favorable effect. Although the outlook is not by any means entirely clear, still there is a tendency to turn away from pessimistic leaders and follow those of a more hopeful temper.

To the Editor of the Review.

"To be deprived of reason, God's richest endowment, is worse than death itself."—Curtis.

The cry is still heard occasionally that the granting of Home Rule would be the first step towards separation, and that the ultimate aim of the leaders of the movement is an Irish Republic. The Ireland of to-day is a very different country from the Ireland of 1798. The open sore of those days, the Globe says, was a vicious landholding system that gave free rein to rack-renting absentee landlords. To-day there is the asylum business, far more important than even the land question, and as the late Justice Walton, a Roman Catholic, pointed out, a grave danger, sane persons being put away without publicity.

It Saves You Waiting

On Saturdays we have so many persons who drive long distances or come by train, that we are unable to promise appointments for that day, but we wait upon persons in turn. Many persons call write or phone for appointment, we then reserve time for such and it saves them much waiting, as the time so given is kept open for them. We make such appointments for any day or evening other than Saturday. Evening is quite as good as day time for the eye examination, but it is necessary to arrange for this a day or two in advance.

REBUKES FATHER VAUGHAN

Register-Extension, the leading organ of the English-speaking Catholics of Canada, will say editorially next week;—

"We feel somehow that Father Vaughan's denunciation of Protestantism as 'a soulless religion,' was a serious mistake. It is an offensive phrase, and we have been objecting to offensive phrases. The expression means nothing, and has merely served to stir up bad feeling and to create sentiments of resentment in the breasts of kindly and well-intentioned Protestants. Abuse never made a convert, and we feel that Catholic truth can be unfolded without inflaming the prejudices of those who hold opposite views.

"The kindly, tactful words of his Grace Archbishop Bruchesi and the equally kindly urbane and diplomatic message of his Eminence Cardinal Vannutelli were more in keeping with the true spirit of the great Eucharistic celebration. The Holy Father himself has been touched by the sympathetic attitude of Canada and the Empire towards this splendid religious demonstration, and has given public expression of his satisfaction and gratitude.

"This week there are thousands of Catholics praying for their Protestant friends, and we can well believe that there are many thousands of earnest Protestants looking wistfully to Montreal and wondering if their forefathers made a mistake. They are the heirs of that sad sixteenth century tragedy which divided the Christian world into two hostile camps; but to-day they are looking for proofs, not abuse. The case for the real presence in the sacrament of the Holy Eucharist is very strong. Luther believed it down to his dying hour, as did Henry VIII., Queen Elizabeth, and a host of the early reformers. More than three-fourths of the Christian world believe in the real presence to-day, and, as Mr. Birrel put it a few days ago, it is impossible to believe that a mystery so tremendous, so profoundly attractive, and so intimately connected with the keystone of Christian faith, so vouched for by the testimony of the saints, can be allowed to remain an open question.

"We believe we are right, and we think we can prove it, and, as we have already said, our Protestant friends are looking for proofs—not abuse"

LABOR CONGRESS ATTACKS CANADA'S NAVAL POLICY

President Glockling's Address to Delegates at Fort William Contains Strong References to "Vast Expenditure For War Purposes."

Fort William, Sept. 13.—William Glockling of Toronto, president of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, presented his address to the delegates in the form of an executive report. In this communication both political parties were assailed for the position they assumed in regard to the formation of the Canadian navy. It attacked the new immigration policy of the Government, and described suggested compulsory arbitration legislation.

Attached to the executive report for the Dominion were reports for individual provinces. All these went to show that labor interests in Canada had been fairly well conserved during the year, and that some progress had been made towards the ends the congress ultimately hoped to attain.

The executive report was in part as follows: "The past year has been one of great activity in industrial circles. The country's prosperity continues, and workers are in a position to be sharers in the material advancement to which their labors so extensively contribute. On every hand industry is expanding, and the danger is not of retrogression, but an oversight of those precautions that will make for permanent, rather than speedy betterment."

Passing on, the report expressed regret that the efforts of the congress and of those similarly inclined to preserve the peace of nations and conserve the autonomy of the country had been of little avail. The old parties were denounced for voting away the moneys of the people in the creation of a navy, and thereby making a useless effort to demonstrate loyalty that was not in question.

"Whether it is a tin-pot navy or a tin-can opposition proposal, the result is the same. We are committed to a vast expenditure for war purposes. And the same jingo element that foisted the new policy upon the Canadian people will, no doubt, in the same way rush into the wars of the Mother Country. Your executive recommends that continued efforts be made to promote the efforts of those who believe in international peace."

The report of the campaign at Ottawa last session of Parliament is mentioned, and special reference is made to the Belcourt bill in the Senate to have labor unions declared illegal, and to the agitation in favor of a general eight-hour day. The appointment of a commission of enquiry on the subject of technical education is commended. Delegates are urged not to be misled by declarations that further importations of cheap labor are necessary to insure proper development of the country, and the lowering of restrictions on immigration is viewed with misgiving.

The executive protests against the custom of the American Federation of Labor in classing the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress as a state federation. It also issues a warning against haste in enacting legislation to secure compulsory arbitration.

"Your executive believes that the almost unanimous position of the organized workers of Canada at the present juncture is emphatically opposed to compulsory arbitration. Canada has taken a long step forward in the adoption of the principle of compulsory investigation, as worked out under the Lemieux Act. Although the principle is working out fairly satisfactory, it is yet too early to pass finally upon it, and it would be madness to make the final jump to compulsory arbitration before compulsory investigation has been thoroughly tested.

"Nor do we believe that compulsory arbitration would for years and years to come be acceptable, either to workers or employers in this country. It is a right that belongs to every man to cease work, or to refuse to work for any employer when he sees fit to do so, subject to any contract made in that regard. So, too, it must be the right and privilege of any employer to refuse to continue in his service any workman he does not desire to employ or to whom he does not need, subject again to contractual rights."

INQUEST IS RESUMED; CRIPPEN'S LAWYER WILL ATTACK POISONING THEORY

He Wants to Show That Testimony of Chemists Could Never Have Been Reached by Analysis—The Opinion of an Expert.

London, Sept. 13.—The inquest over the remains taken from the cellar of Dr. Crippen's residence was resumed yesterday. Arthur Newton, attorney for Crippen, went after the undertaker and his assistant, in an attempt to show that they shoveled the remains into a box, taking little care to keep dirt and stones separate. Both men denied this, saying there was neither stones nor dirt in the coffin when it was taken to the morgue. They admitted, however, that there was a great deal of carbolic acid used, and said they had to use it in order to approach where the body was buried.

It was plain from the questions that Newton put to these two witnesses that he hopes to demonstrate that the testimony of the chemists that hyoscin poisoning caused the death of the person whose body was taken from the Crippen cellar was a conclusion that could not have been reached by an analysis.

Miss May, secretary of the Music Hall Guild, swore that Mrs. Crippen had told her early in January of a dream she had at Christmas time. In it, Mrs. Crippen said, she imagined she was being strangled by the doctor.

Mrs. Paul Martinetto, an intimate friend of Mrs. Crippen, had seen her Jan. 31, when she seemed in excellent spirits, and had said nothing about going away.

Says Crippen Will Escape.

New York, Sept. 13.—John F. McIntyre, who has participated as counsel in 700 murder trials, acting in 614 as prosecutor; who in his service of 14 years in the district attorney's office here, secured 580 convictions for various degrees of homicides, including 44 at one assize sittings, believes Crippen will escape British law. McIntyre has himself appeared as counsel before a British court, being the first American lawyer so permitted. He was engaged by the New York Irish societies to go to England and defend Edward Ivory, charged with plotting to dynamite the House of Parliament and assassinate Queen Victoria. In this case McIntyre employed the tactics of the expert. Instead of attempting to make a case for Ivory, he admitted that the dynamite plot existed, but contended before Lord Justice Sir Henry Hawkins that the plot was completed in Rotterdam and hence not in the jurisdiction of English courts. It was purely a point of law, but it won the case.

"In my opinion Dr. Crippen will be acquitted of the murder of his wife, Belle Elmore," he said yesterday. "The principle of law known as Lord Hale's rule will save him. The crown attorneys will fail to establish by direct proof the basic part of the corpus delicti, the body of the crime—the fact that Belle Elmore is actually dead or that Dr. Crippen used violence upon her sufficient to cause death.

"Crippen's case will never go to the jury. It will be argued on bloodless legal principles before the icy reason of a judge. No sentiment will have part in that argument. It will be a marshalling of legal precepts, impersonal as rock, rigid from their crust of centuries of custom."

THOUSANDS WALKED STREETS UNABLE TO FIND BEDS OR FOOD

Wind-up of Eucharistic Congress Finds Montreal in a State of Unparalleled Congestion—English as All-Canadian Language.

Montreal, Sept. 13.—Ten thousand people walked the streets of Montreal Sunday night, unable to find lodgings. The food ran short in the restaurants, and crowds flocked to the fruit stores, and made meals from bananas and candy.

All night long the Grand Trunk station was packed to suffocation, policemen refusing to let any more in, and this caused scores to lose their trains. The Canadian Pacific ran seven trains to Quebec Sunday evening, and other lines were, likewise, choked with specials.

The wind-up of the eucharistic congress left about 200,000 strangers in Montreal, all of whom had wanted to get away home as soon as possible. The result is said to be a tie-up at the stations that is practically complete.

The only fatality in connection with the eucharistic demonstration so far reported is the death of Abbe Verrett, cure of St. Sylvestre, Que., who was crushed by a team while getting off a car on St. Lawrence street, Saturday, and died Sunday morning at the Hotel Dieu.

Some of the French-Canadian aldermen are after Mayor Guerin for having the Irish flag in a superior place to the Union Jack on the City Hall, and his worship declared that he had told them if they could not agree on the flag question, that he would have them all hauled down except the Union Jack which he had taken care to place always in the centre.

Ald. Larrivire, who has not evidently heard of this, stated that the French race had been insulted by the mayor, and that the tri-color had the right to fly in Canada, because it was the first flag in this country.

The city is talking to-day of the reception given some time since to a delegation from the French-Canadian artisans, which asked the Archbishop of Kingston to permit the establishment of a branch in his diocese. His grace replied that he did not want any French organization in his diocese. Also, he said that everybody would soon have to speak English in Canada, and the sooner they realized the fact the better.

The greatest possible interest is felt here over the rumored appointment of Archbishop Gauthier of Kingston to the vacant episcopal seat at Ottawa, as successor to the late Mgr. Duhamel. It has been known for months past that while the French bishops have been united on Canon Gauthier of the archbishop's palace here, the papal delegate has championed the appointment of an English-speaking prelate to the Ottawa vacancy. If the report be true, and that is not quite sure, that the Kingston prelate goes to Ottawa, there will be no end to the comment in this province, as such a nomination would be a very signal victory for the Irish over the French-Canadian contention.

BOLD BANDITES ROB AN AUTO

Poughkeepsie, Sept. 13.—Just outside this city an automobile was held up Sunday night by two masked men.

"Get out here while we search you," said one of the men, as he swung open the door of the car.

"Up with your hands—and no fooling," was the next command. Then, while one of the highwaymen stood on the seat of the car, the other went through a score or so of pockets, missing nothing in his search. He took out a bandana handkerchief and carefully tied up in it his booty—$175 in cash, three watches worth $400 and some negotiable papers, the value of which is not stated.

As the highwayman stepped back to allow his victims to return to the car, one of the trio, J. W. Towsley of New York, stooped quickly, picked up a huge rock and sprang upon one of the masked men. The second highwayman was afraid to fire, but seized Towsley and hurled him against the car. Then he and his confederate bolted. Deputy sheriffs are in pursuit.

It is further stated that the man's mind had become so unbalanced that he had to be taken to Beauport Asylum, where he is now a patient.

IS NOT A SOULLESS RELIGION

Kingston, Sept. 13.—Mayor Couper laid the corner-stone of the addition to the Protestant Orphans' Home yesterday afternoon.

In his address Rev. Dr. Mackie of St. Andrew's Church said: "This ceremony ought to be a sign that the religion we profess is not a soulless religion. The religion we profess is a religion that has a soul; anyone with eyes and wants to see can see what is being done by sweet charity. In Kingstone alone it can be seen what the churches have done for the city, for the education of the young, providing protection for the orphan, relieving the suffering, caring for the strangers within our gates. The religion with all this at its back could not be denounced as dead."

DR. FAILED 605 TIMES

New York, Sept. 13.—The first authentic information given to an American newspaper by those associated with Dr. Paul Ehrlich, director of the Royal Institute for Experimental Therapeutics, at Frankfort-on-the-Main, concerning Prof. Ehrlich's remarkable discovery of a specific for a widespread blood disease of great antiquity, deemed for centuries well-nigh unconquerable, has been furnished to The Times by Dr. Lewis Hart Marks. Dr. Marks, who is an American, is first assistant to Prof. Ehrlich.

The chemical name of this curative agent is dioxydiamidoarsenobenzol. It is popularly called "606" by Prof. Ehrlich, for the reason that it was the 606th preparation compounded by him in an effort to find a cure. The first 605 preparations proved to be failures.

A small supply of the drug has been placed in the hands of Dr. Simon Flexner, director of the Rockefeller Institute for Research, in this city, and in the hands of Prof. L. P. Barker of John Hopkins University, Baltimore. Within a few days, however, limited supplies of the curative agent, which is not a serum but a definite chemical compound, will be furnished to Prof. Anders of the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia; Prof. Simon, Baltimore, and Dr. William Kohlmann, New Orleans.

DINES WITH KING

His Majesty Decorates His Guests From the Q.O.R. and Addressed the Detachment.

London, Sept. 13.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The King yesterday at Balmoral inspected a detachment of the Q.O.R., under command of Col. Sir Henry Pellatt. The Queen and Princess Mary were present. His Majesty was attended by Col. Hon. Sir Harry Legge and Major Clive Wigram, equerries-in-waiting. Lady Katherine Coke was in attendance upon her Majesty. Gen. Sir Hanbury-Williams was also present.

After the inspection the King addressed the detachment in the following terms: "Sir Henry Pellatt, it gives me great pleasure to receive you and this deputation from your regiment at my Highland home here today. As I was unable to see the whole regiment on parade, I deputed H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught to inspect you. He has told me how pleased he was with your smart appearance. I am very glad that the Q.O.R. should have been the first regiment to cross the seas to take part in the home manoeuvres of the Mother Country. I trust your good example will be followed by many regiments from other dominions in future. I hope you will spend a very pleasant time in England and enjoy your visit to London, and that on your return to Canada you will take back with you the happiest recollections of the old country."

Sir Henry replied: "Your Majesty, on behalf of the Q.O.R., I beg to thank you, sir, for this most gracious reception of a detachment of the regiment which I have the honor to command. If any success has attended us during our visit to the Mother Country, much of it has been inspired by the kind telegram of welcome which you, as King, were good enough to send. This day will be a red letter one in the annals of the regiment. We, as Canadians, humbly hope and believe that our visit will serve to strengthen those links which bind us as an Empire. We may add, sir, the expression of our deep, abiding loyalty to your Majesty and to your gracious Queen."

After the parade the King conferred upon Sir Henry Pellatt and Lt.-Col. Mason the Royal Victorian Order of the third class; on Major Rennie and Capt. Higginbotham, the fourth class of the same order, and the silver medal of the order on Col.-Sergt Macdonald, the senior non-commissioned officer.

The officers of the Queen's Own subsequently dined with the King. During their stay they met Field Marshal Lord Kitchener and Right Hon. David Lloyd-George, who was the Minister in attendance.

UNION LABEL

ARIZ

By George, they have ariz! Who has ariz? The Board of Health has ariz. Having ariz, what did they do at their meeting this morning called for 9.30 o'clock? Dr. Burnham opened a brief discussion about the fly question. It was finally decided that as it was cold that the flies could be easily captured, and that the medical health officer be appointed official fly catcher. After talking over a few other matters the board then adjourned.

GOOD-BYE

Rev. J. G. Potter is leaving us. He was presented with a fine fat cheque by the friends and members of his congregation last night. Why the cheque, wasn't he making a good living? Yes, he was. He made more than any other average working man. But then, don't you see, the average working man doesn't have to go down in his dip and hand out cash like the average minister does. J. G. Potter, stripped of his title, was in no small way a philanthropist. He gave away more than from the prospects of natural economy most men would. He was always helping. He was there with the prayers, but prayers never filled an empty stomach or bought coal and wood, so he was also on hand with the cash. All things considered, the call to Montreal is to a smaller salary but a wider field of usefulness. He had enemies. Mr. Potter's zeal was unquestioned and sometimes cool logic failed him. But you are a man, Potter, and we are sorry that you are determined to leave us.

TO THE UNWED, UNKISSED MAIDEN

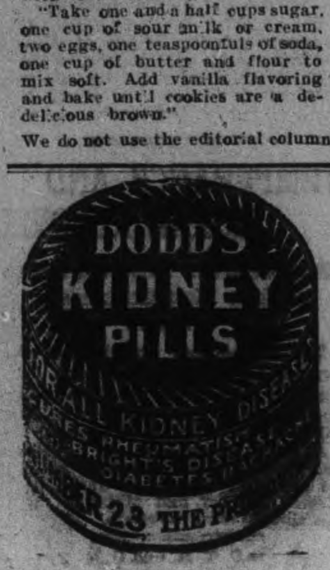
Fifty years ago London 'Punch', that great laugh-maker for the isle over the sea, once said "Feed the Brute." This, 'Punch' declared, was the secret of a happy marriage. An Illinois widow, whose heart burned once more for connubial bliss, says that she has solved the problem. This is how she won her second husband;

"Add four eggs to a quart of milk, a half cup of sugar, and a little vanilla. Bake half an hour until it sets. Serve custard with cream and sugar.

"Take one and a half cups sugar, one cup of sour milk or cream, two eggs, one teaspoonfuls of soda, one cup of butter and flour to mix soft. Add vanilla flavoring and bake until cookies are a delicious brown."

We do not use the editorial columns of the Review for the purpose of making merry, but for the uplift of the race. Now, what happier uplift could be had than this—a recepie on "How to trap a husband." It is commended to all yearning spinsters, to those who feel the fire burn within, and who as yet have no success with the first great requisite to married life—the kitchen fire. Girls, get busy. Old maids, get wise. There is yet hope in custard, cream and sugar, and cookies a delicious brown.

And, ladies, when you catch him feed him well; let him dress as he pleases, purple socks, blue shirt, green tie, if he will, and your matrimonial life will be one sweet song till death do part.



JOHN D. PLANS WORK AND PLAY

John D. Rockefeller, the richest man in the world, adopted a daily schedule for the summer days of 1910 at Forest Hill. Here it is;

4.30 a.m.—Rose, bathed and dressed.

5 a.m.—Took a stroll about the grounds, if the weather was fine.

5.30 a.m.—Drank a cup of clear coffee.

6 to 8 a.m.—Conducted whatever business required his attention.

8 to 9 a.m.—Breakfast.

11 a.m. to 12 m.—Luncheon.

12 m. to 2 p.m.—A nap and complete relaxation from all pleasures, worries and cares.

2 to 6 p.m.—Auto tour, generally with some friend, neighbor or member of his church.

6.30 p.m.—Dinner.

8 p.m. to 4.30 a.m.—Bed,

That is the principal difference between Rockefeller and the rest of us. He thinks. He plans.

"How few are those who think,
And of all the thinking few,
How few are those who think at all,
But only think they do."

We have one idea to-day and another to-morrow. One plan to-night and another on the going down of the next sun. We have no directness of aim, we scatter our purposes. We are not buckshot, we are birdshot. We wonder why it is we do not make a killing worth while, but only disarrange a few feathers on some little sparrow. It's only natural, you cant shoot big game unless you'er loaded for it, and are insistent in methods. J. D. Rockefeller was once unknown. He seldom deviated. We are nearly all a bunch of deviators and have each scored the deviator's reward.

LAURIER AND FREE TRADE

The Economist of London, England, is a financial weekly journal of high repute. It 's a journal of strong free-trade views. In its issue of August 27th ,it publishes a letter from Edmonton, Alberta, in which it discusses Sir Wilfrid Laurier's troubles in his western tour. In the course of this letter the correspondent of the Economist says:

"Sir Wilfrid's position is uncomfortably vulnerable. When the Liberal party was in opposition, it promised to eliminate every particle of protection from the Canadian Tariff and introduce free trade "as they have it in England." Sir Wilfrid toured the west on the subject, and gave his personal assurance that this should be done. The farmer delegates now dig up those old speeches of his, and bluntly ask him to live up to them, or they disentomb the Liberal platform of 1893, and warn him that he and his Liberal friends have broken faith with the people. The Liberals, to be sure, have put a number of farmers' articles on the free list and reduced the duties on others,, but the reduction has in many instances been nullified in whole or in part by increases in the valuation of the imported article under the Dumping Act, a Liberal measure. The operation of the act renders the tariff higher than it appears to be. For example, the duty on buggies is 35 per cent., but the Customs House fixes the value of every imported American buggy at $40, though the true value may be only $30. Similarly, while the duty on the larger farm implements, such as binders or mowers, was reduced by the Protectionist Conservative Government from 35 to 17 -2 per cent., the excessive valuation now imposed upon American binders greatly diminishes the amount of the Apparent relief."

Later in his letter the correspondent of the Economist adds;—

"There is no gainsaying, of course, that the Liberals have signally failed to reform the tariff in the root and branch manner promised. Taken all around, the reductions they have made are insignificant, and delegation after delegation hammers this into Sir Wilfrid."

WOMAN, LOVELY WOMAN

The decision of Justice Brady, of New York City, is much criticized in the press of the land. Some favor it, some are against.

The decision of this learned man came in the effort to close the saloon of Norman Selby, known to pugilism as Kid McCoy, all because two sleuths of the State Excise Department saw one of the patrons slip a dollar bill into her stocking, and then jauntly light a cigarette. Neither act constituted an offence, the Justice ruled. In giving his decision Justice Brady declared: "Why, I saw a woman on the street car the other day, eminently respectable, reach into her stocking for her purse, and as for smoking cigarettes, the best hotels in the city set aside rooms for women smokers"

This, however, is no tribute to true womanhood. Any one who knows woman at all knows that the stocking is supposed to be the safest place for money and is often kept there, but as for exhibiting one's leg on the street car that if liable to give heart disease to the bald heads, and may make the motorman take his eye off the rail and collide with the ice wagon or a stray auto. But if a man has a right to smoke, so has the woman, if a man has a right to get tipsy so has his wife. Men do things that they are oftentimes after ashamed of, and there is no man who would like to catch his wife tipsy or in a back room smoking cigarettes and playing cards. Now, why in the world is it? There is no doubt but that the woman's place is primarily at home, to raise a flock and mother them, After that the hospital or the sick room. They cannot be excelled as nurses. Has she a voice? then let her sing, for there is magic in the voice of the singer. Can she teach? Again she is successful.

However in these parts we advise all ladies to keep their money in those small trunks they carry daily, and if they must smoke to use a cigar instead of a cigarette. In high society it might be a delightful thing for a lady of quality to inhale and smoke from a coffin nail. But having no such high society here, the lady who smokes cigarettes might be looked upon with a slight suspicion.

HOWEVER

However, a minister has got it on the rest of us. We have to die and then we will never know, but our relatives will, just how much they thought of us.

Ministers just move.

THAT OLD COAL OIL CAN

In the Minden Echo has appeared a letter about an oil can that was supposed to have been stolen from the Blairhampton church. The writer vexed that a thief should visit the house of God and steal. Jonathan Osborne, steward, answers the letter of which we give a part. x x x x

The can is not stolen at all as Mr. Dixon and myself undertook to paint the church floor we removed the oil can and a couple of other articles down to my father's residence, and when the congregation of Blairhampton church are prepared to hold night prayer meetings the can and coal oil will be on hand.

Its the same all over the world. The item in question was a coal oil can, probably dented and battered like most public owned oil cans are. These were men going to do a hard job free, yet they were called thieves. Does some man offer to erect a wing in a hospital?" "He stole the money." Does he hustle and offer to act as an arbitrator in some dispute? "Who asked you to interfere?" That's the thanks we get. This seems to be one of the kinks in the human heart that no one can straighten.

A man visited a widow's home in Hamilton, carried her good cheer and eatables, sent her coal and wood. They said he was an adulterer. But he wasn't; he was as pure minded as his accusers were evil. So rolls the scandal beneath the tongue of the scandal monger.

CHAPTER VI.

AFTER fording Sweetwater river several times to throw pursuit off the track Buck McKee and Bud Lane entered an arroyo to rest their mounts and hold council as to their future movements. During the flight both had been silent. McKee was busy revolving plans for escape in his mind, and Bud was brooding over the tragic ending of the lawless adventure into which he had been led by his companion.

When McKee callously informed him that the agent had been killed in the encounter Bud was too horrified to speak. A dry sob arose in his throat at the thought of his old friend lying dead all alone in the station. His first impulse was to turn back to Florence and surrender himself to the sheriff. Had this entailed the punishment of himself alone he would have done so, but he still retained a blind loyalty in his associate and principal in the crime. Murder, it seemed, was to be expected when one took the law in his own hands to right an injustice. He didn't clearly understand it. It was his first experience with a killing. The heartlessness of McKee both awed and horrified him. Evidently the half breed was accustomed to such actions. It appeared to be entirely justified in his code. So Bud followed in dull silence the masterful man who had involved him in the fearful deed.

When they dismounted, however, his pent-up emotion burst forth.

"You said there would be no killing," he gasped, passing his hand wearily across his forehead as if to wipe out the memory of the crime.

"Well, what did the old fool pull his gun fer?" grumbled McKee petulantly, as if Terrill were the aggressor in the encounter.

Bud threw himself wearily on the ground.

"I'd give the rest of my life to undo today's work," he groaned, speaking more to himself than to his companion.

McKee heard him. His anger began to rise. If Bud weakened detection was certain. Flight back to Texas must be started without delay. If he could strengthen the will of the boy either by promises of reward or fear of punishment the chances of detection would lessen as the days passed.

"Shoot if you want to!"

"And that will be about twenty-four hours if you don't keep quiet. Why didn't he put up his hands when I hollered? He starts to wrastle an' pull his gun, an' I had to nail him." McKee shuddered in spite of his bravado.

Pulling himself together with an apparent effort, he continued: "We'll hold the money fer a spell, not spend a cent uv it till this thing blows over. They'll never git us. Here; we'll divide it."

"Keep it all. I never want to touch a penny of it," said Bud earnestly, moving along the ground to place a greater distance between him and the murderer.

"Thanks. But you don't git out uv yer part in the holdup that easy. Take yer share or I'll blow it into you," said McKee, pulling his revolver.

Bud, with an effort, arose and walked over to Buck. With clinched fists, in agonized tones, he cried: "Shoot if you want to! I wish I'd never seen you! You dragged me into this! You made me your accomplice in a murder!"

McKee looked at him in amazement. This phase of human character was new to him, trained as he had been on the border, where men rarely suffered with remorse and still more rarely displayed it.

"Shucks! I killed him. You didn't have no hand in it," answered Buck. "This hain't my first killin'. I guess Buck McKee's pretty well known in some sections. I took all the chances. I did the killin'. You git half. Now, brace up an' take yer medicine straight."

"But I didn't want to take the money for myself," replied Bud as if to soothe his conscience. "Oh, Buck, why didn't you let me alone?" he continued as the thought of his position again overwhelmed him.

Buck gasped at the shifting of the full blame upon his shoulders.

"Well, I'll be darned!" he muttered. "You make me sick, kid." His voice rose in anger and disgust. "Why, to hear you talk one would think you wuz the only one had right feelin's. I'm goin' to take my share an' start a decent life. I'm goin' back to Texas an' open a saloon. You take yer half, marry yer gal an' settle down right here. 'Ole Man' Terrill's dead. Nothin' will bring him back, an' you might as well git the good uv the money. It's Slim Hoover's, anyhow. If Jack Payson can marry yer brother Dick's gal on Dick's money—fer there's no hope uv stoppin' that now—you can cut Slim out with Polly on Slim's salary. Aw, take the money!" And McKee pressed half of the bills into Bud's lax fingers.

The young man's hand closed upon them mechanically. A vague thought that he might some day make restitution conspired with McKee's insidious appeal to his hatred and jealousy to induce him to retain the blood money, and he thrust it within an inside pocket of his loose waistcoat.

"Now," said McKee, thoroughly satisfied that he had involved Bud in the crime too deeply for him to confess his share in it, "we'll shake hands an' say 'Adois.' Slim Hoover's probably on our track by this time, but I reckon he'll be some mixed in the trail around the mesa an' give the job up as a bad one when he reaches the river. I'll show up on the Lazy K, where the whole outfit will swear I've been fer two days if Hoover picks on me as one uv the men he's been follerin'. You're safe. Nobody 'd put killin' anybody on to you, let alone yer ole frien' Terrill. Why, you ain't a man yet, Bud, though I don't say it to discurrudge you. You've made a start, an' some day you won't think no more'n me uv killin' a feller what stan's in yer way. I shouldn't be so turribly su'prised if Jack Payson got what's comin' to him some day. But what have you got there, Bud?" he inquired as he saw the young man holding a letter he had withdrawn from the pocket into which he had put the bills.

"Letter I got in Florence yesterday when I was too full to read it," said Bud. He opened it. "Why, it's from Polly!" he exclaimed. "It's an invite—by God, it's an invite to Jack and Echo's wedding! It's tomorrow! The scoundrel has hurried the thing up for fear Dick will get back in time to stop it! Buck McKee, I believe you're right! I could kill Jack Payson with no more pity than I would a rattler or Gila monster!"

At this exhibition of hatred by his companion a new thought flashed suddenly through the Satanic mind of the half breed. It involved an entire change of his plans, but the devilish daring of the conception was irresistible.

"Say," he broke in, with seeming irrelevance, "don't Payson ride a pacin' mare?"

"Yes," answered Bud. "What of it?"

"Oh, nothin'," said McKee. "It jes' struck me as sorter funny—Payson an' pacin', don't you see"—

Bud was mystified. Had his companion gone daft?

McKee saw instantly that it would be very easy to fix the charge of murdering the station agent upon Payson. The ranchman had evidently left the station a short time before the murder and had gone straight south to the Sweetwater. Unless it had become confused with their own tracks the trail would be a plain one owing to the fact that it was made by a pacing horse, and the pursuit would undoubtedly follow this.

Payson rode the only pacing horse in the Sweetwater and Bar One outfits, and it was certain to come to light from Terrill's receipts that he had been with the agent about the time of the killing. The motive for the robbery would be evident. Payson was in need of $3,000 to pay off the mortgage on his ranch.

McKee said to Bud: "I've changed my mind. I think I'll see a little fun before I break fer Texas. I'll go with you to the weddin'."

"But you have had no invite," objected Bud.

"Oh, I reckon they'll take me along on yers! I know too much fer Payson to objeck to me too strenuous."

They rode up to Allen Hacienda shortly after Slim Hoover had arrived. They could hear the merriment of the wedding guests in the kitchen. Loud laughter was punctuated by the popping of corks, and McKee, who rode in advance of Bud, distinguished the voice of the sheriff in expostulation against the general raillery concentrated upon him.

The half breed grinned wolfishly. It was evident that the bloodhound of the law had tracked the supposed murderer just as the real criminal had conjectured and desired.

Polly ran out on the piazza. She saw the man whom she regarded as her lover's evil genius. As he greeted her ingratiatingly, "Howdy, Miss Polly?" she replied sharply:

"You ain't got no invite to this weddin'."

"I come with my friend Bud," he explained, with an elaborate bow.

"I didn't see you, Bud," answered Polly, slightly mollified, as she crossed the dooryard to shake hands with her sweetheart. Buck offered her his hand, but she ignored him. McKee shrugged his shoulders and started for the house.

"Bud, he's some cast down because it's not his weddin'," was McKee's parting shot at the young couple. "I 'low I'll go in an' join the boys. Excuse me."

"With pleasure," coldly replied the girl.

The half breed ignored the sarcasm, and, answering innocently, "Much obliged," he entered the house.

Polly turned on Bud, displaying her resentment. "You an' him always kick up the devil when you're together. What did you bring him along fer?" she demanded.

"It's his last chance to see any fun around here. He's leaving for Texas," explained Bud.

"Fer how long?"

"For good."

"Fer our good, you mean. There's too many of his kind comin' into this country. Did you hear about 'Ole Man' Terrill?"

Bud did not wait for her to explain, but nervously answered: "They told us about it in Florence when we were coming through. We've been at the Lazy K."

"Wasn't it dreadful?" rattled on Polly. "Slim's here. The boys are goin' to turn out with him after the weddin' to see if they can ketch the feller who did the killin'."

Bud paled as he heard the news. To conceal his distress he moved toward the door—anywhere to get away from the girl to whom he feared he would betray himself. "I'll join 'em," he huskily answered.

Polly, however, could see no reason for his evident haste to leave her.

She felt hurt, but thought his actions were due to her scolding him for being with McKee.

"You ain't ever ast me how I look?" she inquired, seeking to detain him.

"You look fine," complimented Bud perfunctorily.

"When a feller ain't seen a feller in a week, seems like a feller ought to brace up an' start somethin'," replied Polly in an injured tone.

Bud smiled in spite of his fears. Catching the girl in his arms, he kissed her and said, "I was waiting for the chance."

Polly disengaged herself from his embrace and sighed contentedly. "That's somethin' like it. What's the use of bein' engaged to a feller if you can't have all the trimmin's that goes with it. You look as if you wasn't too happy."

Bud pulled himself together with an effort. He realized that if he did not show more interest in the girl and the wedding he might be suspected of connection with the murder.

He trumped up an explanation of his moodiness.

"Well, what call have I to be happy? Haven't I lost my job?"

"Yes, but that's because you was hot headed an' give your boss too much lip. But everything will come out all right. Jack says"—

"Has that low down liar and thief been coming it over you, Polly? Did he tell you how he gave the place he promised me to Sagebrush?"

"That wasn't until you give him slack, Bud. An' I'm sure he ain't a thief. Why"—

"Thief! Of course he is, and a blacker hearted one than the man that killed Terrill. Isn't he going to steal my brother Dick's girl this very night?"

"But Dick is dead," expostulated Polly.

"Dick isn't dead. I know it—that is," he stammered, "I feel it in my bones he isn't dead. And Jack feels it too. That's why he's hurried up this wedding."

To be continued.

"Hello, Polly! Hello, Bud!"

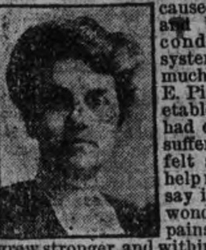
WANTS HER LETTER PUBLISHED

For Benefit of Women who Suffer from Female Ills

Minneapolis, Minn.—"I was a great sufferer from female troubles which caused a weakness and broken down condition of the system. I read so much of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other suffering women I felt sure it would help me, and I must say it did help me wonderfully. My pains all left me, I grew stronger, and within three months I was a perfectly well woman.



"I want this letter made public to show the benefit women may derive from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JOHN G. MOLDAN, 2115 Second St., North, Minneapolis, Minn.

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials like the above prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made exclusively from roots and herbs.

If you want special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. She will treat your letter as strictly confidential. For 20 years she has been helping sick women in this way, free of charge. Don't hesitate—write at once.

LADIES' DRESSING SACK.

All Seams Allowed.

The model pictured above, while simple in design, may be made quite a dressy garment. The yoke front and back may have the edges embroidered as shown, but a pretty way would be to make it of all-over embroidery, with a little ruffle of lace to finish the edges. The body is gathered to the yoke and falls straight, the fullness being held in by a belt which crosses in front. The sleeves are flowing and terminate just below the elbow. With the all-over yoke, the body may be made of dotted Swiss or of fine lawn, and with ribbon for the belt completes an attractive garment, while if a plainer one is desired lawn, challis or a soft flannel would look well. The pattern (5154) is cut in sizes 32 to 44 inches bust. To make the garment in the medium size will require 3⅝ yards of material 27 inches wide, or 2⅝ yards 36 inches wide.

The above pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

WORLD'S DEBT TO CANADA

A Wonderful Achievement

Discovery of "Fruit-a-tives" has meant health for all

Canada's fame does not rest solely on her furs and wheat fields. Her rise in the esteem of the world is not due to her Cobalt mines. It is the work of her great men that has made her great. A graduate of McGill University has won lasting renown for his original researches in the realms of Physics.

Everyone knows that fruit is wholesome, when eaten judiciously. Physicians generally recognize the fact that fruit juices have a beneficial effect on the various organs of the body.

It remained for a Canadian physician to discover a process whereby the medicinal action of fruit could be so increased as to make the intensified juices a wonderful cure.

"Fruit-a-tives" is this combination of fruit juices and tonics. Since its introduction to the public, "Fruit-a-tives" has met with a success accorded to no other medicine in the world. The reason is plain. "Fruit-a-tives" is the one remedy that is actually made of fruit, and is the only remedy that naturally cures Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, Headaches, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Backache, Kidney and Skin Troubles. At all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c., or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

To the Editor of the Review.

THE JURY'S FINDINGS.

The verdict of the jury last night read as follows:—"That Mrs. Louise Merkt came to her death as the result of gunshot injuries and that she was foully killed and murdered by her husband, Gustave Merkt, who was at the time a patient of the Toronto Hospital for the Insane.

The evidence was that the patient was allowed to go out when he desired.

"The jury finds that aforesaid Gustave Merkt, not being considered a dangerous lunatic by the asylum physicians, was allowed the privilege of parole through the asylum grounds, and while enjoying that privilege escaped and visited his friends in the city without the knowledge of the asylum physicians.

"The jury consider that sufficient care was not exercised by the asylum authorities to prevent the aforesaid Gustave Merkt from leaving the grounds, and hereby censures the management for permitting a criminal insane patient to roam at large.

"The jury strongly recommends that proper provision be made in connection with the new Central Prison at Guelph, now in course of erection, for the safe custody of the criminal insane."

There was no evidence that Merkt murdered his wife, foully or any way.

"By what right did he go out of the asylum?" asked County Crown Attorney Baird.

"He was out in the grounds on parole and went out without permission from anybody," replied the witness. Dr. Clarke said that it was difficult to guard the gates of the grounds and that the walls were easily scaled.

An old man could not have scaled the walls. "Parole through the asylum grounds" is nonsense. It was enough to make the man crazy. If he had been "a dangerous lunatic," and evidently they now think he was, would he have been allowed no exercise in the grounds? The verdict of the jury may be right physiologically, psychologically, but it is not common sense.

PRO BONO PUBLICO.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Please allow me to say how much it must hurt the good Dr Langfeldt to be so much advertised in your paper, as you did. The Dr. is a modest man, and while Bethany knows how to value him, it is not wise to make ministers the victims of headlines. It gave me an awful shudder to read what is supposed to be done for Christ, and not for glory. Oh! do not do it again. Bethany is a fine place, but it is not the whole world.

Yours,
AN ADMIRER.

Peterborough, Sept. 13, 1910.

(Note—Dr. Langfeldt appreciates a kindly reference in the press as well as any one else, and the people of Bethany, although not the whole world, are likely like most of the rest of us, and enjoy a little notice now and then.—Ed.)

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir—I have been asked by Mr. W. H. Roberts to insrt a letter in The Review to let the public know, how city is governed by its officails. They have a dumping ground at the corner of Stewart and Murray Streets where all the old wooden sidewalks are carted and piled up against the fence belonging to Mr. Roberts who owns the adjoining lot. There has has been a good deal of sickness in the family of late, and they may partly complain of the bad smell from this plague spot. This has been going on for years, and always adding, and he is tired of making complaints. The promises given to have it removed from his fence have not been carried out I beg to enclose a letter written by Mr. M. Williams, when Mayor, written on July 14, 07, which speaks for itself. I am,

Yours truly,

CAME AT NIGHTS TO SEE CONSTABLE

Samuel Oliver Finally Arrested on Charge of Incest.

Pleaded Guilty and Judgment Was Reserved Till Next Tuesday.

Charged with the awful crime of incest, Joseph Oliver was arrested Saturday night, at the home of a relative, by High County Constable Cochrane, and placed in the county jail.

He appeared before Magistrate Edmison yesterday afternoon and pleaded guilty.

Judgment was reserved by His Worship till next Tuesday at three o'clock.

The Oliver family had until recently resided in a house erected by the father about one-quarter of a mile north of the Normal School, and close by the bed of the old G.T.R. Chemong line. There are four children and the oldest girl, not yet eighteen years of age, was the victim upon which the offence was committed. A similar crime was attempted on a younger daughter, and it is understood that the disclosures made by her resulted in an investigation being made, with the result that a warrant was made out for the arrest of the man. This was several months ago, and in the meantime this inhuman monster has been roaming about this vicinity.

LOOKING FOR OFFICER.

On a number of occasions Oliver has been near the home of the High County Constable, and always at a late hour. Several times it has been near midnight. He stated to different residents that he was looking for Mr. Cochrane as the constable had the key of his house and he wished to get his clothes. While this was going on High County Constable Cochrane was up at the lakes.

On his return to the city last week he was made acquainted with the above facts regarding the actions of Oliver, and the arrest followed.

The mother, several months past, no doubt as a result of the state of affairs existing, took a dose of poison, and after receiving treatment at the Nicholls Hospital, was sent to an asylum, where she recovered and was discharged from the institution.

The prisoner is a middle aged man and worked as a laborer. His general appearance and habits are somewhat in accordance with the crime for which he has pleaded guilty.

It might be added that the facts of Oliver's case have been known by the Review since the information was sworn to, but at the request of the authorities were not published for fear the man would become frightened and leave the country.

SOME MINOR ACCIDENTS

While Mr. Bert Morrison, driver for the Canadian Express Company, was delivering a parcel at the White House this morning his horse wished to slake its thirst, and started to cross the road to the watering trough opposite. Hetherington's horse and delivery cart was standing outside, and The horse of Hetherington's, was thrown on to the pavement and the wheel of the cart was badly twisted and bent.

The horse was able to rise without assistance and was uninjured, save for a slight scraping on the knees.

WRIST FRACTURED

Mrs. Buckland, of Edinburgh street, while returning from an evening spent with a friend on Dublin street, had the misfortune to miss the door-step and fell heavily. She suffered a painful fracture of the wrist. Dr. McPherson attended to the injury.

BICYCLE MISHAP.

A young lad named Mallory, residing on Park street, and his cousin, Orland Barkwell, collided while wheeling on the Chemong road, near Bridgenorth. Six spokes of Barkwell's wheel were broken and both boys were thrown into the ditch.

A buggy with a lady occupant was approaching them. The horse shied and tried to get away from her. The boys, in trying to avoid the outfit, came into collision on the narrow road with the above result.

M.H.O. REPORTED CITY WATER ONLY SLIGHTLY INFECTED

No Typhoid Case in City, Traceable to Water — Milk Inspection and Ice Question Discussed by Board of Health—Other Business.

How about the FLIES?
Is the WATER good?
What about the ICE?
How about the MILK?

The above were the live questions which called for discussion at the meeting of the Board of Health this morning.

The first was treated pretty much the same, as the funny man of the comedy troupe, handies the material for a local joke.

This, in spite of the fact that all over America leading periodicals have declared THE FLY to be a spreader of disease.

The other three subjects received the serious consideration of the members.

There were present, the chairman, Dr. McNulty, Dr. McPherson, M.H.O., Dr. Burnham, Dr. Young, James Edgar and James McNulty.

Is the water good? asked Dr. Young, The Medical Health Officer answered that a report he received last week, showed only a slight infection. The percentage of chloride was two and the infection cannot be very serious remarked the M.H.O. So far as he knew, none of the cases of typhoid fever in the city were traceable to city water.

Asked as to whether or not the water was liable to improvement at this season of the year, Dr. McPherson answered in the affirmative. This was ,however, in the event of there being no heavy rains.

THE ICE QUESTION.

Mr. Edgar brought up this matter. He had been told, he said, by an ice dealer, that the ice in the Little Lake was not fit for use. This dealer had taken ice out of the lake and the canal for hospital use and it was not what it should be.

It was noted that a resolution passed by the Board last year provided for ice for cooling purposes be taken from the lake and that to be used in drinking water, be taken from the canal and other places. Mr. Edgar contended that the resolution had not been carried out.

The chairman was of the opinion that the matter should receive a firm hand. He would suggest that no ice be taken from Little Lake, but that the supply be brought from the waters north of here. In case a scheme, with this object in view, was brought to a head, the residents in the vicinity of Inverlea Park, and who are unable Park, who are unable to secure drainage by other means could have an outlet into the river. The added contamination would not be so great. The present idea of the Council was to build a septic tank, on the river end of Waterford street, and at different points there were sewer outlets into the river.

Dr. McPherson.—It is just a question whether the taking of ice from the lake could be prevented.

Dr. Burnham and Mr. Edgar were of the opinion that such a step could be taken, if the ice was not afright.

On motion of Drs. Burnham and Young, it was moved that the last resolution of the Board be enforced.—Carried.

MILK INSPECTION.

The chairman, Dr. McNulty, brought up the question of milk inspection. Since the last meeting he had secured the commissioner's report from Toronto and had endeavored to look up other information. The special committee appointed, he hoped, would decide on something definite to be put before the council.

The M.H.O. opined that something should be done before the cold weather sets in. The conditions, prevailing in soft weather should be ascertained, with a view of taking some steps, before the licenses are renewed. The time to do this work was now, and and not after everything freezes up.

This is unless it is decided to have the milk examined here, he added. The present system is pretty much of a farce.

The chairman held that there was every argument in favor of having the inspection made here.

No further action was taken.

Dr. McPherson was requested to make out a list of necessary articles for the new Isolation Hospital and report at the next meeting.

ACCOUNTS.

Accounts were received from The Review Ptg. Co., and R. T. Braund, grocer. These were ordered to be paid.

DEFECTIVE PLUMBING.

P. Thompson, plumbing inspector, wrote under date of September 7th, that he had notified several persons regarding the unsanitary condition of their premises re plumbing.—Received.

SEWER CONNECTION.

Mr. W. H. Thompson asked for a sewer connection on Smith street, between George and Benson avenue. The distance from the sewer connection west of the G.T.R. track would be 200 feet. He thought it would only be necessary to bring the connection to the house.

The only other residence between George street and Benson avenue had a sewer connection.

It was moved by Dr. Young, seconded by Mr. Murty, that the Board recommend the connection to be made.—Carried.

A QUADRUPLE PLAY PULLED OFF IN 1876

As far as base-ball history goes, there was but one quadruple play ever made. Triple plays happen ever and anon, and there have been unassisted triple plays, but there was jusjt one quadruple play and there may never be another. Under the rules now governing base-ball it is not likely that the opportunity for a four killing could ever happen any more. The quadruple play was made a generation ago, and few of those who saw it are in the land of the living. According to Ben Dodson, an old-time fan, who was present on the memorable occasion, says it took place in New York in 1876 and saved a game for the old Metropolitans of that ancient time.

On this occasion, away back in 1876, New York had the best of it—I believe by a tab of 9 to 3—and it seemed a sinch to put out of the game even allowing the enemy to take the eighth and ninth in a bunch. But the Chicago team rallied desperately and it began to look as if— according to the understood agreement—the Mets would have to take their unused inning after all. Bing, biff, went the hits; before the crowd could really wake up to the doings, Chicago had driven in five runs.

"Two men out, bases full and four to be put out ere the seance could legally close. The batsman drove a furious liner knee-high across the diamond. Covering short for the Mets that day was a little, stocky fellow named Gaskins—not Caskins, who afterwards became a star of the early Giants, but Gaskins a smaller player and one who never, aside from this one performance, achieved any special fame.

"The ball, raging hot, ripped at Gaskins who wore no gloves— that was long before the time of the infield mitten. It seemed to drive his hands back as though they had been struck with a mallet, but neverthelses with his wrists back between his knees, Gaskins held that ball. He whirled like a flash and sprang to second, getting a runner who had left the middle station. He fired across to first, and the man who had been on the initial bag was pinned a mile out from shore. The first baseman chucked it over to third, and a runner who had been sliding for the plate arose to learn that he was out and that the quadruple play had been completed.

"It was so long ago, and the games were so poorly recorded in those days that even the story of the four killing has passed from authentic archives. Nevertheless, it happened, and doubtless the few of the old-time players who were in that game could recollect the details. All I, myself, can clearly remember after all these years is this: That the ccircumstances were as I have said; that the quadruple was really made, and that it was an obscure fielder named Gaskins who pulled down that ball."

IS HE HOPE OF THE WHITE RACE?

In comparison with Johnson, McLeod shows more of the perfect man. He is 5 3-4 inches taller, has the advantage of 9 1-2 inches in reach, and is broader across the shoulders and deeper in chest. Johnson is bulkier than the Missourian in arms and limbs. The following figures will show where McLeod has the advantage over the negro—

McLEOD.

Age—28 years.
Height—78 inches.
Reach—81 1-2 inches.
Chest (expanded)—49 inches
Chest (normal)—44 inches
Waist—41 inches.
Biceps—16 inches.
Forearm—13 inches.
Wrist—8 inches.
Thigh—23 inches
Calf—16 inches.
Ankle—10 3-4 inches.
Neck—16 inches.
Weight—235 pounds.

JOHNSON.

Age—32 years.
Height—72 1-4 inches.
Reach—72 inches.
Chest (expanded)—39 1-4 inches
Chest (normal)—36 1-4 inches
Waist—34 3-4 inches.
Biceps—18 1-4 inches.
Forearm—14 1-4 inches.
Wrist—10 3-4 inches.
Thigh—25 3-4 inches.
Calf—15 3-4 inches.
Ankle—10 3-4 inches.
Neck—17 1-4 inches.
Weight—205 pounds.

Here's a man who can whip Jack Johnson.

At least Jim Corbett says so, and it is generally admitted that few followers of the scrap sport are in a better position to know than Corbett, who stood up as best man and chief mourner to Jim Jeffries at the Reno sluggerfest. On that blistering July day Corbett had no adequate comeback to Johnson's kidding, but it is generally supposed that right there Corbett made a deep dyed and bloodthirsty resolve to have revenge on the big chocolate drop, and that he is scouring the world for any likely looking youngster who can hand Johnson one hard enough to put him on the blink and send him to dippy land while the referee counts 10.

The "future hope of the white race," according to Jas. J. Corbett, is a farmer boy hailing from the "show me" state of Missouri, county of Gentry. His name is McLeod—just as though it were spelled "McLeed."

And the remarkable thing about this youngster of 28 years is that he has never done any fighting—that is, professional fighting. Of course he puts on the gloves once in awhile with the neighbor boys, any one of whom he can whip with one hand tied behind him, but he isn't a professional—yet. He has everything to learn, but—and it's a great big but—he has no old tricks to unlearn.

Stood up by the side of Johnson he would tower five and three-quarter inches above the black man. He is as strong as a bull, and just as wiry, agile and quick as you can get 'em.

He is not a college-bred man. He is just a farmer boy, a physical giant, but does not claim to be much of an athlete. But he is willing to train, and he is anxious to fight.

This is what he has to say about it himself—

"If Mr. Corbett says I can lick Johnson, I'll sure enough lick him. I have never seen a man I'd refuse to fight, and I am anxious to fit myself to meet the negro. I want to fight him, and will fight, providing the match can be arranged and Mr. Corbett has sufficient confidence in me."

And when he goes into training he will not have to quit smoking or drinking, because he never began to smoke or drink. He has lived a clean mental, moral and physical life, and when it comes to material fitness, well—he has pitched a whole lot of Missouri hay, and shoved a plow around miles of Missouri fields, and he has gone to bed early, and got up early, and eaten clean, wholesome food prepared by his mother.

Corbett got a good look at McLeod in Chicago, when the latter's brother, Walter, pointed him out to Corbett. Missouri lad, and it is generally believed by the initiated that he is going back to Missouri some day and take Miles in hand. And, again, it isn't improbable that McLeod will begin to train on his own initiative.

McLeod's parents are of Scotch descent. They are of the sober, industrious and law-abiding type, and they don't take very kindly to their son's pugilistic aspirations. But McLeod is firm in his purpose, and is willing to tote the "white man's burden" and wrest back the supremacy of his color whenever Corbett gives the word.

BRIEF AND BREEZY

Arrangements have been completed for a twelve mile race in the Covered Rink at Port Hope on Friday night, between the famous Indian runner, Tom Longboat, and the champion ten-miler, Percy Sellen.

Calgary won the People's Shield yesterday at Toronto, and the team now holds the soccer championship of the Dominion. The score was 3 to 2.

Smirlie Lawson will in all probability be with Varsity again this season.

A boxing Club along the lines of the National Sporting Club of London has been founded at Winnipeg.

Pitcher Lundgrei is due to join the Toronto Club to-day.

CANADIAN SWIMMERS AHEAD OF AMERICANS

New York Tribune.

Pride generally comes before a fall and the recent swimming championships of Canada served to indicate how unwarranted was our vaunted claim of aquatic superiority. With the incomparable Daniels to rely on in all cases of necessity, we allowed ourselves to be lulled into a sense of mistaken security, strong in the belief that he would never fail us, and that, even if he did, we had others good enough to take his place.

The Canadian meets were a severe jolt to the devotees of swimming. George South, of the New York Athletic club went up for the sprints confident of taking both the fifty on hundred yard titles because he had few peers in the country at the latter distance, and none save Daniels at the former. After he had met defeat at the hands of Gordon Johnstone, of the Ottawa Canoe Club, people said, "Oh, well, he was not our best, and Bud Goodwin will show them what speed means in the 440 yard and one mile events."

But Goodwin didn't. George Hodgson of the Montreal Athletic Association gave him a sound beating in the quarter-mile race, negociating the course in 5 minutes 9 2-5 seconds, and the Mercury Footer himself admitted that he had been outclassed by his 16-year-old vanquisher, freely predicting that Hodgson would soon have most of the American records unless they were bettered meanwhile. As Daniels' quarter-mile figure stands at 5 minutes 54 1-5 seconds, the prophecy seems likely to come true, for the champion has announced his intention of retiring from the competitive field.

Should Daniels persist in his avowed decision it is easy to realize how our friends across the border will threaten American titles during the indoor season.

While South is not second to Daniels as a hundred-yarder, Johnstone has proved his better, and he will make a formidable rival. And, as to Hodgson, he defeated Goodwin by forty yards in 440 yards, and he should be able at this pace to take the measure both at the furlong and quarter-mile of any American except Daniels. Goodwin, may still be best at the mile, but the longest indoor championship is now 500 yards.

Americans have sought in vain for the reason of the sudden and mystifying leap of Canadian water men into the limelight, but it is more than likely that the presence of Norman Cox, the Australian Coach, at the Montreal A. A., may be accountable for it.

NEWSY NOTES FROM NORWOOD

A Bee—New Stores—New Business—Home From England—A Great List of Personals.

Special to the Review.

Norwood, Sept. 12.—Quite a hearty response was tendered an invitation from Rev. W. B. Tucker to the members and friends of the Methodist church to attend a bee on Monday afternoon for the purpose of gravelling the approaches to the church sheds and doing other necessary repairs Since the fire last spring the one end of the north shed has stood with the shingles burnt off the roof and the sheeting badly damaged. It is intended to have these put in proper repair at the time the other work is being attended to. The church sheds here are a great convenience to the public, as they are always open for their accommodation, and it is gratifying to the officials of the church to have an appeal for help so heartily responded to.

HISTORIC WINDSOR CASTLE

Before King George and Queen Mary take up their residence at Windsor Castle certain alterations and re-arrangements of the private apartments will be necessary. These apartments, which are never open to public, are situated on the east and south sides of the grand quadrangle, and are connected by a corridor over 500 feet in length.

Many thousands of pounds were spent on the royal rooms when King Edward came to the throne, in order to bring the palace more in accord with modern requirements, and a special sum was voted by parliament for the purpose. When King George was staying recently at Frogmore House he spent several hours going over the private apartments, but His Majesty and Queen Mary are to pay another visit before any definite instructions are given.

Very few structural alterations are necessary after the work that has been carried out by the lord chamberlain's department during the past ten years, but a rearrangement of the furniture and ornaments will have to be effected. All the personal property of King Edward and Queen Alexandra will be removed to Sandringham, otherwise it would become the property of the crown. When this is done the rooms will be refurnished to suit the taste of their Majesties.

It will, of course, be necessary to provide additional accommodation for the children of the King and Queen. The suite of rooms in the Chester Tower has been set aside for the younger Princess, and here a nursery and schoolroom have been fitted up, with kitchen and every other convenience, and a special staff of servants will look after the walfare of the children. These rooms were used by Princess Henry of Battenburg's children, and adjoin the Victoria Tower, which served as a nursery for Queen Victoria's family. They command a fine view of the Long Walk and Windsor Forest. There could hardly be a more ideal spot for children. The rooms are lofty, and from every window can be seen a magnificent stretch of beautiful woodland scenery.

Just below the castle toward Frogmore is a cricket ground with a handsome pavilion, which was constructed on the instructions of the late King for the use of his grandchildren. The Prince of Wales and Prince Albert have often taken part in most interesting and exciting games on this beautiful pitch, and in the near future their younger brothers will follow suit.

For the first time the King and Queen will stay at Frogmore when the court is in residence at Windsor, but the princess wil have full access to the castle grounds, as the two residences are very near each other. Their Majesties are very fond of Frogmore, and it is here that their children in the last few years have been chiefly brought up. Both the King and Queen take a great interest in their children's games and pastimes, and Her Majesty is never so happy as when joining the younger children in their games in the Frogmore grounds. Their Majesties have always been generous supporters of the local institutions, and they have made a practice of dealing with local traders as far as possible.

As their Majesties have no country residence apart from Frogmore, it is expected that King George will make Windsor Castle more of a private residence, especially as it is in such close touch with London.

All things considered, Windsor Castle is probably one of the best royal residences in Europe. There are 17 state apartments, 48 rooms comprising the spacious kitchen, pantry, confectionery, vegetable, and other storerooms, 79 bedrooms, 65 sitting-rooms, and rooms containing 231 beds for servants. The length of passages is about 1,700 yards. The private apartments include the Queen's boudoir, the private audience chamber, the oak room, the tapestry room, the white, green, and crimson drawing rooms, the state dining room, the armory and the gold pantry, which contains a collection of gold plate valued at £1,800,000.—London Daily News.

TALKING PICTURES

The Boston Transcript says:—Thomas A. Edison gave to an audience of not more than a dozen men last night the first exhibition of his talking pictures the product of the new Edison kinetophone, which combines in one machine the wizardy of the phonograph with that of the kinetoscope. The brief glimpse offered in the laboratory in West Orange was enough to show that Mr. Edison has achieved what he and a host of other inventors have long striven for—the perfect synchronization of sound and action for the moving-picture screen.

Into the scene thrown upon the screen last night a man walked, and as his lips moved the sound of his voice issued from the concealed phonograph, effecting an illusion that was perfect. As soon as he opened his mouth, the sounds came as naturally as they would from an actor on the stage, or to be more precise perhaps it might be said that they came like the sound of a voice of a manager who comes before the curtain on the stage and makes such announcement as the stage manager may desire to put before his patrons. This picture man said in substance:

"Ladies and gentlemen (although there were no ladies present this time):—While many efforts have been made to produce an apparatus that would not only give you the picture of the person speaking, but give you at the same time the sound of the speaker's voice, this is the first time that such effort has been crowned with success."

Perhaps in all fairness it should be said here that even the movements of the muscles of the pictureman's face were in exact agreement with the sounds that purported to come from the speaker; and not only this, but while the movements of the speaker were thrown upon the screen in the ordinary way, that is to say from behind the audience, yet the sound appeared to come from the man on the scene towards the audience. The man continued:

"To illustrate to you what I have been saying I will now take from this table which you see before me—the table and its appurtenances were there—a ball and throw it to the platform, and you will hear it rebound at the same time you see it rebound."

He did take a ball from the table and the rebound exactly coincided with the enunciation of the words, not only the sight of the ball, but the sound of its impact on the platform. He next went on to say, as he suited the action to the word:

"I will now show you more distinctly by taking a plate, which you see, from the table and smashing it on the floor."

Exactly as he did so the plate went to the floor, as the audience could see, and smashed to smithereens, the sound of the smash and the rebound of the splinters coinciding exactly with the motion and the words of the pictureman. In one sense it may be unfair to call him a pictureman for he was as much the real man as all those that we see every day in the motion pictures all over the world. One only difference from the actual man is noticeable, that the speaker enunciated with great care and clarity and perhaps spoke a little more slowly than the average speaker.

All that the public's representatives were permitted to know beyond what they had seen was this: That after much labor and long experimentation Mr. Edison had at last succeeded in producing an apparatus which synchronized the action of the people in a picture or in an anecdote with their words, and with such incidental sounds as by their actions they might make. There are really two machines, but they are so interrelated through electrical connection that they act as one in producing before the spectator both the acts and the voices of the people who are depicted on the screen although as a matter of fact the picture-producing part of the machine is, as usual, behind the spectators, while the sound-producing section of the apparatus is, it was said this evening, placed behind the screen upon which the pictures are thrown. This disposition of the sound-producing apparatus made the illusion more nearly perfect this evening, for it actually seemed to Mr. Edison's small audience that the words thrown out by the ample voice of the man in the motion picture were coming from him toward the spectators. The sound seemed literally to come from the footlights. It seemed to those present as though but one thing remains for his inventive genius to accomplish in the way of perfect spectacular representation, and that was the reproduction in the picture of the natural colors of the scene presented.

FAREWELL

They Said Good-bye to Their Pastor

UNDER AUSPICES ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH

An Address and Fine Fat Cheque and Many Handshakes Make His Heart Glad--The Cheque Was for $460.00

The Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's church surpassed themselves last evening, when they held a reception and social evening in the Sunday school room in honor of their departing pastor, Rev. J. G. Potter.

The school room presented a gala appearance and was filled to its capacity many of whom were strangers to the church. Everyone present was friendly and one of the most enjoyable functions in connection with the church that has been held there for some time was brought to a close about ten-thirty.

Mr. Andrew McFarlane occupied the chair and about eight o'clock the long and interesting programme of the evening was opened with an anthem by the choir.

Mr. Asa Huycke, the talented soloist of George street church, next rendered a solo in good voice. A cornet solo by Mr. Miller also received well-merited applause.

Next came probably the most interesting and enthusiastic number on the programme. This was a presentation to Rev. Mr. Potter. Alderman Gillespie read the following address, after which Mr. Richard Lees presented Mr. Potter with a purse containing a cheque for $460.

THE ADDRESS.

Rev. J. G. Potter, B.A.:

Dear Pastor and Friend,—We, who are members of the communion and congregation of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, wish to employ the occasion of your departure from us and our city to voice our regret and to pay an inadequate, but heartfelt tribute to the unwavering fidelity to the duties of your sacred office, that has marked your labors among us.

While we regard your call to another portion of the Master's vineyard as a patriotic recognition of your worth, as a Christian man and of your value as a Christian minister, we cannot but feel a very deep sorrow at the sundering of ties, that have so completely enmeshed our own hearts, and, we trust, united the hearts of both.

"Our regret is not unmingled with a grateful selfishness. for we shall feel the loss your departure represents. We shall miss you in all the varied relations you have sustained towards us; we shall miss you in the service of worship you so effectively, and, we trust, profitably to ourselves, have led from Sunday to Sunday for the past fourteen years; we shall miss you from the pulpit where your earnest, eloquent and timely preaching of the Gospel of our Lord, has reproved and restrained the waywardness of our Christian lives; where you have blended admonition with comfort and, pointing the way to higher planes of Christian experience, have stimulated us to more hopeful endeavour and made straighter and clearer and more alluring the way of life.

You have visited our homes, have gone in and out among us, have baptized our little ones, have joined our sons and daughters to holy marriage, have brought cheer and comfort to homes darkened with affliction, and saddened by death and consigned to their kindred dust our beloved dead, and, in a thousand ways, through all the avenues of service open to the faithful pastor and the earnest Christian Minister, made yourself beloved as a friend and cherished as a spiritual leader and guide.

Not only shall we, as members of your flock, miss you and your work and influence in our lives, but you will be missed in the more general field of moral activity, where your zeal and earnestness have not only made you a power and a factor for good, but an example whose inspiration and influence will remain with us and the community.

In earnest of your affectionate regard and good will, we ask your acceptance of this purse, not as a measure, but as a recognition of your worth.

We desire to include to our regrets and good wishes Mrs. Potter and your estimable family; and we pray Almighty God that, in your new home and sphere of duty you will meet, as we are sure you will merit, favor and acceptance, and win success and happiness and speedily gain as many and as warm friends as you leave behind you in Peterborough, saddened indeed at your loss, but rejoicing in your advancement, and every praying for the Divine blessing upon you and yours and your work.

Signed on behalf of the Church.

ANDREW McFARLANE,
R. LEES,
G. A. GILLESPIE.

HIS GRATITUDE.

In a brief heart-felt reply, Mr. Potter expressed his surprise and great pleasure. He was inded greatly surprised and it would be with a heart always warm and tender and filled with pleasant memories that he would regard the people of St. Andrew's church for the kindly and appreciative spirit they had exhibited to him.

Rev. J. R. Webbb, pastor of Murray street Baptist church, made probably the most witty and humorous address of the evening. "We shall miss Mr. Potter," said Mr. Webb, "and we shall miss Mrs. Potter, but how will we ever get along without Mary," referring to Miss Mary Potter, who has always been a valued source of help in choir and in the Young People's Society.

An address from the choir to Miss Potter was then read by Mr. Petrie, and Mrs. McClellan, organist of the choir presented her with a beautiful gold signet ring. Miss Potter was completely surprised. Her father expressed the appreciation which she felt and the feeling of friendship which had always existed between the choir and herself.

Addresses by Rev. Robert Pogue, Canon Davidson and Mr. Thompson, moderator of the session, then followed. That Mr. Potter's splendid work for the betterment of the city has not been unappreciated was abundantly shown by the glowing words of eulogy which his fellow-ministers spoke, and Mr. Potter is leaving the city wherein he has labored faithfully for the past fourteen years, with the assurance that his work has not passed unnoticed and unappreciated.

After the speeches all present arranged themselves in groups to facilitate the serving of refreshments which followed. Cake, coffee and sandwiches comprised the menu.

Rev. Mr. Potter and Mrs. Potter and family had a busy time last evening before the gathering dispersed. Everyone was waiting to shake hands with them before leaving and consequently their hands were busy, for the larger part of the evening.

Mr. J. S. Potter of Toronto, father of the pastor, was present and despite his advanced age, made a splendid speech. He was proud of the honor which had been shown to his son and though they were leaving the city, they would always cherish the kindliest feelings for the congregation of St. Andrew's church.

LAST NIGHT THE TIME CRAWFORD'S GROVE THE PLACE CORN WAS WHAT THEY ATE

(No Doctor Needed Yet)

The employees of A. W. Cressman's departmental stores participated in that favorite September evening pastime last night, namely a corn roast. About forty of the staff, with a few friends journeyed to Crawford's Grove in busses and autos, leaving the store immediately after work. A joy ride of about three miles brought them to their destination and the afternoon's work and the pleasant drive proved to be splendid promoters of healthy appetites. Lunch or supper was immediately served and then as darkness dropped her mantle upon the scene, the ruddy glare of the indispensable camp-fire illuminated the grounds. Crawford's Grove is an ideal place for such an affair, the reflection of the fire casting shadows on all surrounding objects and making an admirable back-ground setting for the scene.

The corn was then brought out and the ladies in the party showed that in addition to being adepts at the art of sewing and selling, they were also capable of preparing tasty and tempting corn. Full justice was done to the juicy morsels, after which an impromptu programme of songs and solos was indulged in. Several in the party were found to be the possessors of splendid voices, which had it not been for last evening's outing, might have been dormant for years.

The time for departure came on only too rapidly and the start was made for home about nine o'clock, thus bringing to a close a highly enjoyable evening and one for which the employees desire to thank the proprietors to whose kindness and thoughtfulness they are indebted.

Peterborough was reached about ten o'clock.

GAVE LUNCHEON TO THE REVEREND J. G. POTTER

The Peterborough Ministerial Association gave a farewell luncheon to one of its most useful members, Rev. J. G. Potter, at the Y.M.C.A., this morning. Coleman Bros. were caterers for the occasion, and provided an excellent repast.

Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, vice-president of the association, occupied the chair and expressed regret at the loss of such a valuable member. He called upon Rev. Canon Davidson, the oldest member of the body, to speak on behalf of the association.

Canon Davidson became reminiscent of the work accomplished by the association in the cause of early closing of places of business, temperance, and moral reform, and of the splendid part taken in the work by Mr. Potter. He also referred to the pleasant associations of the members of the association, of the broad fraternal spirit cultivated, and the wide and and useful influence exerted.

Rev. J. R. Webb, on behalf of the Baptists of the city; Rev. H. C. Coon, on behalf of the Methodists, and Rev. H. J. Keith, on behalf of the Presbyterians, expressed the kindliest sentiments toward Mr. Potter, and thanked him for what he done in the promotion of the city's spiritual and moral welfare.

The gathering dispersed with the singing of "Blest Be the Tie that Binds."

WHAT THE TORONTO GLOBE SAYS OF PETERBOROUGH MAN WHOSE BOOKS ARE TAKING WELL

"We are too much the creatures of circumstances. There is the shovel, so we take it and dig. We are made for better things, for more glorious things than the enjoyment of a fine steak or a new suit of clothes. Most of us know but half the truth and have seen but half the picture. There are angels, but our eyes are darkened. There are the hidden wonders all about us visible alone to those who have the power of sight. There is always music for those whose ears are tuned aright."

Charles F. Raymond is making quite a name for himself by his gospel of cheerfulness of which the above is a sample from his most recent book, "The Happy Life" (New York: Dodge Publishing Company.) Those who have known Charles Raymond or "Charlie Churner," as he was known for a time to the reading public in Toronto and throughout Ontario, will be glad to hear that he is making good. He has struck along a queer trail, but he seems to be sure-footed and to be making good progress. His peculiar style of writing has an individualism about it that often goes straight home. "Keep fighting" is his text, and he is practising as well as preaching.

" 'Fight, you say'; yes, I know every day is a fight with you, a battle more real than any contest where bands play and cannons roar, for the battle is unseen and against that hellish traitor, appetite.

"Shake, old pal; I have been in that battle; rise and keep on. for you must succeed. Never mind explaining; your friends who know you best trust you most, and your enemies do not want the truth."

There is a manly strength about this sort of writing, which prevents Charles Raymond from deteriorating to the level of the space-writer. We can all turn out copy somewhat similar, on the same sort of a subject, but somehow, though we keep on fighting, there is something lacking. We have not all the genius for plain speaking, and it is lucky for us that someone else like Charles Raymond can do it for us.

One may read Raymond's sermonettes in two ways. They make diverting tit-bits for leisurely reading, but they make far better matter for careful reading with a view to a little timely self-examination.—The author is editor of The Peterborough Review.—Globe, Toronto.

It Saves You Waiting

On Saturdays we have so many persons who drive long distances or come by train, that we are unable to promise appointments for that day, but we wait upon persons in turn. Many persons call write or phone for appointment, we then reserve time for such and it saves them much waiting, as the time so given is kept open for them. We make such appointments for any day or evening other than Saturday. Evening is quite as good as day time for the eye examination, but it is necessary to arrange for this a day or two in advance.

U.S. TROOPS DEMORALIZED SAYS INSPECTOR-GENERAL

Report of Gen. Bell Declares That the Field Army of the Republic is Unfit For Service, Transportation is Same as it Was Before Civil War, and Marching Capacity is Poor.

Washington, Sept. 14.—If fearless criticism is calculated to benefit the army, then Uncle Sam's soldiers should profit much from the comment upon their condition and abilities contained in the annual report of Inspector-General Garlington, just made public. One inspector points out a whole battalion of artillery starting for the Phillippine service without a single field officer and one of the batteries commanded by a second lieutenant of less than two years' service. An inspector-general declares that this absence of captains from their commands is "the most fruitful source of professional disease in the line of the army to-day."

In one department nearly a third of the line officers were absent from duty with their commands.

The time for specialization in the army has arrived, in the opinion of another inspector-general. He says: "We try to crowd too much upon the officer and enlisted man of the line. That is, we try to teach all of them everything, instead of specializing and only teaching each as much as he can learn well with ordinary application."

Inspector-General Bell declares that the field army is wholly unprepared for field service. He says the new regulations are almost entirely theoretical or dependent upon the experience of European armies. Our transportation is the same as at the beginning of the civil war, for our army has so far failed to make use of automobiles, traction engines and other modern appliances in the field. The weakness could be quickly developed if the present annual manoeuvres could be replaced at least once by the march of a complete army corps. Very few of our officers have ever marched with more than a regiment."

Major Bell says: "While our infantry is composed of the best material in the world, and is probably as well, if not better, trained in the use of the rifle than that of any other army, its marching capacity is below mediocrity, and yet it is admitted to-day that the fate of the battles of the future depends, as it has in the past, upon the marching capacity of the infantry."

To remedy these conditions, Major-Gen. Woods, chief of staff, yesterday issued orders which will change materially the training of the army. All inspector-generals will be required to submit the troops to an annual inspection in the field, designed to show efficiency of the troops.

BRIBERY CHARGED

Special Committee in Woodstock Makes its Report —Suspicious Cases Mentioned.

Woodstock, Sept. 14.—The special committee appointed by the County Council to investigate the charges of bribery and corruption in connection with the purchase of the toll roads of the county reported to a special meeting of the council yesterday.

The report mentions specific instances that have suspicious aspects, and in one case tells of a prominent county official having approached a clergyman, and promised a large sum of money if he would induce the owner of the toll road between Woodstock and Ingersoll to sell out.

Other similar cases are cited, and with the report was submitted a letter from D. O. Cameron, solicitor, of Toronto, who stated plainly that the duty of the council was, in the face of the evidence, to demand the issuance of a royal commission and the prosecution of the alleged guilty parties. The investigating committee had a detective agency gathering the evidence, and parties were interviewed in Chicago, Denver, Toronto, Hamilton and other cities.

Magnet Steals Car This Thief Has Nerve and Also Ready Wit

Paris, Sept. 12.—A large motor car was stolen from a Paris garage the other night by means of a magnet.

When the garage of Mr. Lamberjack Brothers was closed for the night the last man to leave locked the door and dropped the key in a letter box. The letter box was opened every morning by a night watchman who slept on the premises.

During the night the thieves slipped into the letter box a magnet tied to the end of a string and drew out the key. Opening the door, they chose a beautiful new motor car belonging to the firm, supplied themselves with two or three extra tires and other necessities for a trip, including a new motor coat, and drove the motor car out of the garage without disturbing the night watchman.

DEMOCRATIC MAJORITY

Portland, Me., Sept. 14.—Complete returns of the vote for state senators and representatives in the election on Monday gave the Democrats substantial majorities in both branches of the Maine Legislature, which next year will elect a United States Senator to succeed Eugene Hale, a Secretary of State, State Treasurer, Attorney-General and Commissioner of Agriculture. The new legislative body will also probably be called upon to carry out the declarations of the Democratic party platforms of recent years, and re-submit to the people the liquor prohibitory amendment to the constitution and to repeal the Sturgis liquor law enforcement act.

According to unofficial complete returns, the Legislature will have a Democratic majority of 36 in joint ballot. The Senate will consist of twenty-one Democrats and ten Republicans, and the House will have 88 Democrats and 36 Republicans. The last Legislature consisted of 122 Republicans and 60 Democrats, the Republicans having fifteen majority in the Senate and 47 in the House.

Practically complete returns last night on the vote for governor gave Frederick W. Plaisted, Democrat, 73,644, and Governor Bert. M. Fernald, Republican, 64,912, a plurality for Plaisted of 8,732, as agaist a plurality of 8,064 for Governor W. T. Cobb, Republican, four years ago.

Another Democrat Victory.

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 14.—Returns from Monday's state elections are still incomplete. The Democrat state ticket, however, has been elected by a majority ranging from 15,000 to 20,000. Constitutional amendment No. 10, providing for the initiative and referendum has probably carried, although by a much smaller majority than estimated yesterday.

It is claimed the several counties that voted "dry" last year, will show a majority for license when the full returns are recorded.

THE FAIR

Copied from the Ottawa Journal.

Editor Journal.—Is Ottawa awake or asleep? Certainly to-day she is asleep. This is the first pay day of the Exhibition. There are scores of visitors in town. Proof—Parliament Buildings overrun all morning by sight-seers. I know because I saw them.

The Central Canada Exhibition is one of Ottawa's greatest assets. Ask the merchants, ask the newspapers they will tell you, if you don't know it already. And yet, despite the fact that this is to be Ottawa's biggest week in the year, few seem to realize it.

I was in Toronto last week, and what did I find? The entire city a blaze of color. This bunting was not put up by the Toronto Exhibition Association, but by the business men of Toronto.

Ottawa, to-day, what a contrast! No sign of Exhibition, no evidence of enthusias,; an entire absence of color. Get busy, Mr. Mayor. Sput up the merchants. They need it. To every Ottawan, "Hang out your banners on the outer walls."

CHINAMEN GET BACK AT ALDERMAN

Windsor, Sept. 14.—Incensed because Ald. Keough has suggested that a license fee of $50 be placed on their establishments, several Chinese laundry proprietors are said to have banded together for protection, and, incidentally, to rebuke Keough for such a thought.

The Chinamen have about completed negotiations for a long lease on the old Charter homestead, in the same block in which is located Ald. Keough's fine residence. It is understood they will convert the house into a big laundry establishment, in spite of any protests residents in the neighborhood may make. The home of Police Chief Wills is directly across the street from the proposed laundry.

HUMAN HOGS GREAT ON THE STEAK LINE

Hamilton Times.

At College Point, N.Y., the other day there was held a "steak-eating contest," which was won by Alderman Frank J. Dotzler. These contests are costly affairs in these times of high prices. The Alderman weighs 381 pounds and got away with 11 1-4 pounds of steak. Adam Schmidt, of 54 Tompkins street, who weighs 348 pounds, ate 9 1-2 pounds of steak, and Henry Stoudt was third with 6 1-2 pounds. This was so far behind the leaders that the offficials did not even ask Stoudt how much he weighed. Perhaps the contestants do not eat more than one meal a week, but they would hardly be catches for the boarding house keeper as steady table boarders.

VISITORS ARE GETTING AWAY

Montreal, Sept. 14.—Cardinal Gibbons, who was the guest of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy during the congress, left yesterday morning for New York, en route for Baltimore, and Cardinal Logue will follow in a few days. Archbishop Bourne will leave for Portland to-day, en route for New York, and daily both American and European prelates and priests are leaving the city.

Archbishop Bourne stated yesterday that he had never seen such an orderly crowd in his life as that of Sunday. London itself, offering few demonstrations similar in magnificence to that of the closing day of the great congress.

Yesterday morning, His Grace of Westminster had a long interview with Henri Bourassa, M.P.P., who had taken exception to the English prelate's statement that if the west is to be brought into the Catholic fold it must be done by means of the English tongue. After the interview his grace told the press that all misunderstanding had been overcome.

THE ESTATE OF GOLDWIN SMITH

Toronto, Sept. 14.—The will of the late Goldwin Smith disposes of $832,859.55, of which $592,350 is in Ontario. After bequests totalling some $50,500, and succession dues, $80,000, are paid, the balance, aggregating over $700,000 goes to Cornell University at Ithaca, New York, with which he was formerly connected, and which always held a foremost place in his affections. The gift is absolutely to be used by the board of trustees for the promotion especially of liberal studies, languages, ancient and modern, literature, philosophy, history and political science, for which provision has been made in the new hall, which bears my name, and to the building of which my wife has contributed.

The will says as to the art museum: "I bequeath to the art museum of Toronto all my pictures, portraits, or engravings, and statuary which belong to me in the Grange, and also my scrap-book and autograph book and any books on art which may be in my library and for the purpose of confirming my wife's devise of the Grange property to them I hereby devise and bequeath to them upon the same conditions as the devise to them in my wife's will, all right, title, and interest I may have or may have acquired in any manner whatsoever to the Grange property, as more particularly described in her will, and as occupied by me since the time of my marriage."

WARNING AGAINST SEPARATION

Winnipeg, Sept. 14.—Sir George Doughty roused the members of the Canadian Club in Winnipeg yesterday by a fine patriotic address, in which he sounded a warning against separation from the rest of the Empire.

"Some say that Canada might walk alone," he said. "I hope if she ever tries to do so she will walk warily, and that that time will be far distant, because, however much Canadians might think they have got on, I would suggest to you that the more important you become the more your provinces are known throughout the world for their richness, the more certain will foreign nations jealously look upon you, and the more surely will they covet what you have got."

QUITE A DANCER IS EARL GREY

Sydney, N.S., Sept. 14.—The steamer Earl Grey sailed for Pictou yesterday, where she will be joined by His Excellency and the vice-regal party, which went west on Monday's express.

During Earl Grey's visit to Sydney he and the countess visited Westmount, a suburb of the city, incognito. His Excellency called on Mrs. Crawley, a centenarian, who was totally unaware of the distinguished personage she was entertaining. Noticing a violin hanging on the wall, Earl Grey took down the instrument, and told his hostess if she would play, he would dance. The old lady struck up "The Flower of Edinburgh," and His Excellency cut the pigeon wing like a four-year-old.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

The Western Fair opened at London with every promise of success.

The village of White Rock, B.C., was almost entirely wiped out by fire.

Thomas Reilly was committed for trial at Cobalt in connection with the silver theft.

Three smugglers have been arrested near the Canadian border by U. S. Customs officers.

New York's postal revenue for the month of August was $55,699 behind that of Chicago.

The business of the German Steel Trust shows a substantial increase for the month of August.

Grahame-White, the English aviator, won over $22,000 in prize money at the Boston-Harvard aero meet.

A well-dressed man was found dead in the river at Amherstburg, with a gash in the head and bruises on the body.

W. R. Brock, director of the Geological Survey, reports that the season of navigation of Hudson Bay can be extended by the use of proper aids to navigation.

William McIntosh and John Irving had a narrow escape from death at Fonthill, when a gravel car on which they were standing broke loose and ran away down a grade.

The Canadian Manufacturers Association arrived at Winnipeg, and were driven about the city in automobiles and entertained at luncheon. Tariff matters were discussed.

J. G. Armstrong, druggist, of Lucknow, is being tried for responsibility in connection with the death of Miss Murray, to whom he sold a different medicine from the one she ordered.

F. Leland, the signalman held responsible for the wreck of a C.P.R. train, was discharged from the Winnipeg Police Court on a charge of drunkenness, as the Attorney-General wanted the coroner's jury to have an unbiased view of the case.

TWO NEGROES WERE LYNCHED

Tiptonville, Tenn., Sept. 14.—Will Sharp and Bob Bruce, negroes, who for seven or eight years have worked on various farms over the county, were lynched Monday night by a mob of about forty men for an attempted assault on two little daughters of Jack Dowing, at their home at Connersville.

Hurled Her Baby From Window.

New York, Sept. 14.—Seized with a sudden fit of insanity in her home on Broadway, Brooklyn, yesterday, Mrs. Esther Jaffe, 27 years old, hurled her three-months-old baby from the window of her apartment on the third story. The child was dashed to death on the pavement of the court below.

TO ORGANIZE PROVINCIAL FEDERATIONS OF LABOR

This is Suggestion to Come up at Labor Congress—Legislation Will be Asked For Several Things, Including Weekly Pay Day for Workers.

Fort William, Sept. 14.—Yesterday several matters at the session of the Trades and Labor Congress were deferred pending the arrival of Solicitor J. G. O'Donoghue of Toronto. Several other resolutions were considered, one to secure federal legislation for weekly pay instead of semi-monthly or monthly; another, by James Watt of the Toronto tailors' union, opposed to home work and open shop in Ontario; others to amend the compensation for workingmen's injuries act of Quebec; re-arrangement of taxation on land values and not on improvements and industry; to increase postmen's pay for Sunday labor, and an eight-hour day for postmen, and denouncing the present heavy postmen's uniforms for summer year, and one calling for suitable car sheds for railway carmen to eat and dry their clothes in when on duty.

The most important resolution yet to come up is one to organize provincial federations of labor chartered by the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada.

A resolution which will precipitate a lengthy debate is one asking that an amendment to the liquor act be sought to have saloons and bars in hotels close on Labor Day. The bartenders, brewery workers, cigar workers, as well as other trades, are opposed to this resolution when it comes up to-day.

The election of officers takes place on Friday. It is said Wm. Glockling of Toronto will be opposed as president by James Somerville of Moose Jaw. The west is depending, it is said, on the entire delegation supporting Somerville, while the east will support Glockling. Port Arthur and Fort William, with over thirty delegates, appear to be in favor of no change and will support Glockling, which means he will be elected unless Somerville withdraws before Friday and Glockling is elected by acclamation.

Immigration was the principal theme of discussion at the morning session. W. R. Trotter of Winnipeg presented a long report on the subject, in which he laid special stress upon the necessity for restriction, and for provision against exploitation.

He severely criticized some of the schemes of immigration and emigration followed in the past, and in the concluding portion of his report, said in part: "It should be understood that no scheme detrimental to the interest of the Canadian citizenship will be tolerated, and Canadian citizenship must be held to include more than manufacturing associations and their allied press.

"No scheme of imperial labor exchange can possibly be agreed to which is not preceded by a system of provincial and Dominion exchanges. Any other arrangement would be open to a repetition of the scandalous shipping by the Salvation Army to British Columbia of 11,000 persons, when there were 7,500 unemployed people in Toronto alone. It should be clear that our fight from now on is not so much against numbers of discredited societies as against many schemes of the crowd of dividend-hunting corporations which has descended upon Canada, and whose agents, titled and otherwise, are much in evidence during the summer months."

An invitation from the mayor of Vancouver to meet in that city next year will be considered with other invitations later on.

INSPECTED BY MR. HALDANE

London, Sept. 14.—Secretary of War Haldane, accompanied by General French, inspected the Q.O.R. at Basingstoke Monday, and yesterday Chaplain Lloyd placed on behalf of the regiment, a wreath on General Wolfe's tomb at Greenwich. The Duke of York's School has been completely refurnished.

During a lull in the manoeuvres the Leicesters organized an athletic meeting. Pte. Walsh beat Sergt. Crane and Pte. Gurney of the Leicesters, successively. Pte. Dent threw Pte. Grey, while Pte. Samuels, in wrestling, beat Pte. Henry.

Arrangements for the coronation include a larger representation of contingents of troops from Canada than on the last occasion, and probably also from Australia and South Africa.

It is also felt that the rapid expansion of Canada demands an impressive delegation of colonial Premiers, who, with other officials, will naturally receive invitations.

RABIES PREVALENT OVER THE BORDER

Albany, Sept. 14.—State Commissioner of Agriculture Pearson, stated that rabies had broken out in Westchester County. Heads of suspected canines sent to Cornell University for examination contained positive evidence of the disease. A quarantine is enforced at Scarsdale and Yonkers and Mount Vernon, New Rochelle and Ossinging are being closely observed for any outbreaks.

Another newly-infected district was reported in Niagara County, where the towns of Lewiston and Royalton have been put under quarantine.

MEXICAN PRISONER SWINDLE

Ottawa, Sept. 14.—The Postoffice Department issues the following statement: "Communications on the lines of the celebrated 'Spanish prisoner' fraud are being received by prominent persons in Canada from Mexico. These communications purport to come from a person who has been arrested in Mexico for bankruptcy, and whose baggage, containing a sum of 1,200,000 francs, is lying 'checked' at some railway station in the United States. The Mexican prisoner is willing to give one-third of this sum to any person who will wire him sufficient money to pay the costs of the judgment against him in the Mexican court under which he is held.

This is a very plain swindle, but in view of the fact that quite a number of persons in Canada were deceived by the Spanish prisoner fraud and inveigled out of considerable sums of money, it is thought advisable to warn the public against this Mexican variation of the same fraud."

BRYAN SEES VICTORY FOR DEMOCRATS

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 14.—Regarding the result of the Maine election, W. J. Bryan said yesterday: "I am very much pleased to learn of the Democratic victory. The fact that we elected two out of four Congressmen, as well as governor and Legislature, gives it a national significance, which it would not have if it were merely a victory for state officers.

"Taken with the returns from Vermont, it indicates that the revolt against the Republican party is as pronounced in the east as in the west, and would seem to make it certain that there will be a Democratic majority in the next Congress."

The Triangle In Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Sept. 14.—The golden triangle sent out by St. Patrick Chapter, Toronto, was received with much ceremony by Prince Rupert Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, last evening.

The reception was attended by a number of the members of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, now in this city, Messrs. Fred Jacobi and David Bruce, representing the St. Patrick Chapter of Toronto. The triangle goes to Wascana Chapter, Regina, on the 14th; Alberta Chapter, Calgary, on the 15th, and Vancouver on the 20th.

GOOD-BYE! GOOD LUCK!

D. Hughes Charles is going away. His going will leave a blank. The going of Rev. J. G. Potter left one. We all have friends. Rev. Mr. Potter's friends were religious, his flock. Mr. Hughes Charles friends were business men. They both go to Montreal. Good-bye, good luck, gentlemen, and as you listen to the clatter of the crowd going home at six o'clock look eastward to Peterborough—the same thing happens here.

HARD UP FOR CRY

The Grits are hard up for a cry when they try and make an issue of a couple of dirty shirts sent from his summer home and laundried at the asylum in Orillia. He should have sent the family washing. What is making the crazy people more crazy and the loons more lonely is the fact that they haven't got enough to do. Now, if they would only take the Liberal record at Ottawa, including the white elephant, that G.T.P., Jo Downey, ex-M.L.A., would see that his flock would make a good job of it. Two shirts, why not the family washing.

MOVING PICTURES

Last year $57,500,000 was collected in nickels and dimes at moving picture shows in America. The attendance numbered more than two million two hundred and fifty thousand souls a day, three times the audiences of all the regular theatres in America put together. That's a lot of money, isn't it? What a tremendous sum! And what an awful host to influence. What hopes these pictures have inspired, what ambitions for good deeds, what plans for revenge? How easily a robbery may be carried on with a little nerve; how a wife can deceive a husband, the husband the wife, all this is told in mute, yet striking story. Life and death, heaven and hell, as the artist knows them, these are told, and you pay your money and pay your choice. You go out and forget, you think. But you don't forget, you are intensely influenced, your sub-conscious mind is ever working. This day's thinking is limited, perhaps, just because of last year's thought. Moving pictures are a tremendous factor in our civilization. There are now for you, for yours, for us all, 20,000 feet of new films produced each week, of which eighty copies apiece each week must be made. Will the tone ascend? Will they ransack the beautiful and elevating, or will we demand the rotten, the sensational and the rank? We get what we are looking for in this life.

MACDONALD'S BULLYING

At Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Lethbridge meeting the West was given a taste of the methods of the Laurier Government. Lethbridge is greatly in need of a post office, the town having utterly outgrown the accommodation which was provided for it in bygone years. During the general election the voters were assured by Liberal canvassers that the town could not get a post office if the constituency was foolish enough to elect a Conservative. The constituency did elect a Conservative, and no post office has been erected, though such buildings have been sown thickly in the Maritime Provinces in towns less than a quarter the size of Lethbridge.

Mr. E. M. Macdonald, the celebrated leader of the blockers' brigade, was one of the first speakers to address the meeting at Lethbridge, and in the course of his speech he said:

"You want a post office here, and you certainly need one badly, but you will never get it as long as you vote Conservative."

The Westerners present showed plainly their disapproval.

AIR! AIR! AIR!

This is the heading in the Toronto Star weekly, over a special despatch from Paris, France. The article reads;

Air! Air! Air! Less study, less forcing children ahead in their classes regardless of consequence, and more air in their lungs?

Such is the cry sent up by Dr. Albert Mathieu, consulting physician at the Paris hospitals, stomach specialist, and president of the International Congress of Scholas-Hygiene.

Families, disdainful or ignorant of the first laws of hygiene, place too much stress upon the scholastic success of their offspring. They too often cram them through an advanced schooling, then shove them ahead first into a career—one of the socalled intellectual careers, usually—for which they are not fitted.

"It is study, study, study. Recreation is only an incident, to be tolerated, because one can't study all the time. It should not be so. Play should be watched over as carefully as the study.

"A return to the saner basis of educating the young must be secured. "Give us more air! Yet more air!" what we must fight for is air in the schools, air in the lungs, air in the curriculum."

In Peterborough the scholar goes to study and is in class from 9 till 12. From 1.30 till 4. From this precious time, thirty minutes in doles of two 15 minutes each, is handed out each day. Then is home work. Homework the bugbear, the Nemesis of the youth. Do we need more air and less homework or is our system a sound one. The world is the real school the real place where we are educatd and God knows that the grind is hard enough for most of us. Is this eminent physician right or is he a little too previous in his cry for air?

FOLLY IN FUNERALS

The Weekly Sun, an independent journal for farm and home, is agitating for less folly in funerals. This less folly, a less expensive casket, less flowers and a less imposing monument over the dead. The Sun is on the right track, on a track that the writer has agitated for years. Why should a family who can get along with difficulty at best, become involved with the undertaker and monument builder, to say nothing of the tailor and dressmaker, just because death has taken away a member of the house hold away. The Sun says in part:—

The evil, for it is an evil, can best be met by community of action through church boards. A discussion and resolution by such boards approving the limitation of floral offerings and disapproving of unduly expensive caskets or monuments would have a beneficial effect.

What do we want monuments for, make them now, rear them in kind words and action. Does Florence Nightingale need a monument? Does John or Charles Wesley? Put the monuments over the murderers if you will, but let the great dust be absorbed in mother earth, the place of resting simply marked. Men, women, we are making our real monuments today in living flesh and blood regardless of all the skill of the builder in granite, regardless of the length of the obituary notice or the funeral procession.

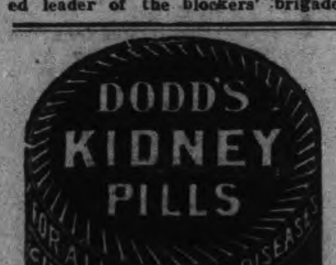
THE INSANE

In Canada the certified insane make up 31.1 in every 10,000 of our population. This table shows the proportion of insane in the several occupations named;—

Occupation.	Per 10,000
Civil and mining engineers...	52.5
Warehousemen...	47.1
Ironworkers...	46.0
General laborers...	39.1
Pensioners...	36.4
Costers and street sellers ...	28.5
Artists (painters, sculptors, etc.)...	27.3
Domestic servants (female)...	25.2
Livery stable keepers...	20.0
Architects...	19.5
Shopkeepers and dealers...	19.1
Domestic servants (male) ...	17.2
Merchant service...	16.9
Musicians...	16.5
Commercial travellers...	15.5
Lawyers...	15.2

We thank the St. Thomas Times for these figures, but we must say, Oh! Fudge.

"All the world's a bit queer except me and thee, Jean, and thou, too, art a bit strange." Will some one learned in the writers please tell us who said this? Isn't that true? A chap who has been signing himself "Pro Bono Publico" hits it off fairly well in his recent letters to the Review. We do not agree with all his sentiments; we have never seen the gentleman, but, say, people, we are nearly all off our nut on something or other. That fellow who is keen on making money, whose first waking thought is THAT OTHER DOLLAR, whose last thought is THAT OTHER DOLLAR, whose dreams are THAT OTHER DOLLAR—he's crazy, crazy as a loon. Can he take any with him? Can he buy a minute more life? Not on your henrietta. So, forgetting the love of a wife, the joy in his child, the blue dome, the sunset of the Infinite, the cloud that flecks the heaven, the field and stream, the meadow and the valley, the bird and flower, he plugs for money—that man's a fool. And how of the woman who follows fashion, and her imperious dictates, the NEWEST styles, the NEWEST, the NEWEST? Is she in a humble home, he must work the harder to please her fancy for the NEWEST. Is she rich, she must follow THE NEWEST more blindly. So she forgets the day the dresses will be laid aside, the hands folded across the heart. She forgets those who are in the here and now, suffering for sympathy; forgets it all for the flame. The moth and the flame had a game one day—of course the flame won. This woman is also insane, as insane as the poor woman who decorates herself in the asylum and declares herself a princess. She is poor and wretched—though clothed in silk, though large in manner, she is not half so much to be envied as the true woman who works at home, raising honest, earnest sons and daughters to take their place in the world long after she has left it.



LIFE

The Brantford Expositor copies editorially 14 reasons for "Mistakes In Life." They are from the pen of a learned judge in the city of London Court, England. These mistakes point to success by showing where failure is likely to be sustained. We give the last four:—

To consider anything impossible that we cannot ourselves perform.

To believe only what our finite minds can grasp.

To live as if the moment, the time, the day, were so important that it would live forever.

To estimate people by some outside quality, for it is that within which makes the man.

Now none of us are judges, but any of us can sit down and write off fifty mistakes in life and what's more, we can, and do make them. Here you perfect fellow with the swelled topnot, stand up and let's have a squint at you. Where are you, why don't you speak. Why we all err. And it's not in the avoiding mistakes that we rise but rather by getting up, and going on and falling and rising and fighting towards some goal. Never mind the opinion of the fellow next door. It's the Man above that counts. So on we go little pigmies, the biggest of us in life's universe trying to succeed winning and losing and ever aging.

"Behold the child by nature's kindly law
Pleased with a rattle, tickled with a straw,
Some livelier plaything gives his youth delight,
A little louder, but as empty quite;
Scarfs, garters, gold amuse his riper stage,
And beads and prayer-books are toys of age,
Pleased with these baubles as those be fore,
Till tired he sleeps and life's poor play is o'er."

That's life with more than 14 mistakes.

SIDE LIGHTS

POETRY THAT LIVES.

Michael Drayton, in Sunday World.

Since there's no help, come let us kiss and part,
Nay, I have done, you get no more of me,
And I am glad, yea, glad with all my heart,
That thus so clearly I myself am free.
Shake hands for ever, cancel all our vows,
And when we meet at any time again,
Be it not seen in either of our brows,
That we one jot of former love retain;
Now at the last gasp of Love's latest breath,
When, his pulse failing, Passion speechless lies,
When Faith is kneeling by his bed of death,
And Innocence is closing up his eyes,
Now if thou wouldst, when all have given him over,
From death to life thou mightst him yet recover.

MY OVERCOAT.

My brain is like a hazy sky
Where something seems to float,
I think it's something I must buy,
By Jove! an overcoat!

WOMAN'S DESTINY.

Halifax Herald.

When women get through—a few thousand years from now—with the heavy task of creating enormous families, completing the world's population, which lacks thousands of millions of inhabitants, making up for disease and war by replacing the dead—women will begin to do her own part of the intellectual work of the world.

She will take her share in thinking, in planning, in all kinds of achievements—and will no longer be a drudge, the slave of babies and the cooking stove in her youth, and a wornout, tired thing, cast aside in her old age.

In that future when woman will have a chance, her brain will count as a human brain and not at all as an interesting, amusing, "exclusively and intensely feminine" apparatus.

Of course, in that time woman will be "intensely feminine," and men also will be intensely feminine from today's viewpoint.

For, to be feminine in the usual sense of the word is to be free from brutality, roughness and the animal instinct. Woman is far ahead of man in that respect—man will catch up."

The Round-Up

A Romance of Arizona

Novelized From Edmund Day's Melodrama

By JOHN MURRAY and MILLS MILLER

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

"But your own friend, Buck McKee, saw Dick just before the 'Paches killed him."

"But not after it, and Buck now thinks the rurales may have come up in time to save him."

"Seems to me if that's so he has had time enough since then to write," objected Polly, who was nevertheless impressed by Bud's vehemence.

"How do you know that he has not written?"

Polly could only gasp. These accusations were coming too fast for her to answer.

"You can't tell what a man might do in a case like that. Perhaps Dick's away in the mountains, away from the railroad, prospecting down in the Ghost range, where he has been trying to locate the lost lode. There's lots of reasons for his not writing to Echo, but Echo doesn't seem to mind. A year and a half is enough to mend any woman's heart."

"Now, you"— began Polly, who was growing angry under the charges which were being heaped on her two best friends by the overwrought boy.

Bud would not let her finish, but cried: "Echo never loved him. If she did she would not be acting as she is doing tonight."

Rushing to Echo's defense, Polly answered, "She may or may not have loved Dick Lane, but I know that she loves Jack Payson now with all her heart, an' even if the 'Paches did not get your brother he is as dead to her as if they had."

Polly was startled and confused by Bud's accusations. Accordingly it was a relief to her when Jack Payson appeared on the scene. They had been so interested in their conversation that they did not hear him ride up to the house. "Hello, Polly! Hello, Bud!" were his cordial greetings, for he was determined to ignore his former employee's hostility. Bud did not answer, but looked moodily on the ground.

To eastern eyes Payson's wedding attire would appear most incongruous. About his waist was strapped a revolver. His riding trousers, close fitting and corded, were buttoned over the calves of his legs. Soft, highly polished leather boots reached to his knees. His shirt was of silk, deeply embroidered down the front and at the collar. His jacket gave him ample breathing room about the chest, but tapered at the waist and clung closely over the hips. He wore a sombrero and a knotted silk handkerchief. His face was deeply sunburned except a spot shaped like a crescent just below the hair line on the forehead, which was protected from the sun by the hat and the shade of the brim. A similar line of fairer skin ran around the edge of the scalp, beginning over the ears. His hair shaded the upper part of his neck from the sun's rays. When his hair was trimmed the untanned part showed as plainly as if painted. It is the mark of the plainsman in a city or on a holiday.

"Well, it's about time that you got here," said Polly, with a sigh of relief. "Where have you been?"

"I stopped over at Sam Terrill's to see about something that I ordered from Kansas City. Then I had to go back to my ranch"—

Bud started guiltily. Forgetting his determination to ignore Payson, he asked anxiously, "You didn't see Terrill, did you?"

"Oh, yes. Why do you ask?"

Polly laid her hand on Payson's arm and told him briefly of the shooting of Terrill.

"Who shot him?" he asked when she had finished.

"They don't know. He was robbed of a pile of money. Slim Hoover's just rode over to get a posse," she replied, looking toward the door. At this bit of information Payson became anxious about the plans for his wedding. The ceremony was uppermost in his mind at the time.

"Well, he can get one after the wedding." Then he asked, "Is the minister here yet?"

Polly laughingly replied: "You're feelin' pretty spry now, but you'll be as meek as a baby calf in a little while. In this section a bridegroom is treated worse than a tenderfoot."

Payson smiled. He knew he was in for a thorough hazing by the boys. "That's all right. I'll get back at you some day, when you and Bud"—

Polly interrupted him with a remark about minding his own business.

Bud avoided entering into the conversation. He had walked toward the door and was standing on the steps when he answered for Polly.

"Looks as if your chances of getting even with us is a long way off," he said. Turning, he entered the house to join the other guests, who, by the noise, were enjoying Allen's importations from Tucson to the bottom of every glass.

Polly looked after Bud, smiling quizzically. "Bud's mighty hopeful, ain't he? Ain't you happy?"

"You bet! Don't I look it?" cried Jack, rubbing his hands. "Never thought I could be so happy. A fellow doesn't get married every day in the week."

"Not unless he lives in Chicago. I hear it's the habit there," answered Polly.

"The sweetest girl in the territory"—began Jack.

"You bet she is!" Polly broke in. "If you just want to keep her lovin' an' lovin' you, all you've got to do is to treat her white an' play square with her."

"Play square with her," thought Payson. Was he playing square with her? He knew that he was not, but the chance of losing her was too great for him to risk.

"For if you ain't on the level with Echo Allen—well, you might as well crawl out of camp. That's the kind of girl she is!" Polly exclaimed loyally.

CHAPTER VII.

ENTERING the living room, Bud found Echo surrounded by several girls from Florence and the neighboring ranches, who were driving her almost distracted with their admiring attentions, for she was greatly disturbed about her lover's inexplicable absence. Had she been free from the duties of hospitality she would have leaped on her horse and gone in search of him.

Echo's wedding attire would seem as incongruous as Jack's to the eyes of an easterner, yet it was entirely suited to the circumstances, for the couple intended as soon as they were married to ride to a little hunting cabin of Jack's in the Tortilla mountains, where they would spend their honeymoon.

She was dressed in an olive green riding habit which she had brought from the east. The skirt was divided and reached just below the knees. Her blouse, of light material and brown in color, was loose, allowing free play for her arms and shoulders. High riding boots were laced to the knees. A sombrero and riding gloves lay on the table ready to complete her costume.

Bud coldly acknowledged Echo's affectionate and happy greeting and curtly informed her that Jack had arrived.

She rushed out of doors, with a cry of joy.

Running across the courtyard toward her lover, who awaited her with outstretched arms, she began:

"Well, this is a nice time, you outrageous"— Then Polly stopped her with a mock serious look. "Wait a minute—wait a minute," the girl drawled as if reining in a too eager horse. "Don't commence callin' love names before you get the hitch. Time enough after. He has been actin' up somethin' scandalous with me."

Jack threw up his hands in protest, hastily denying any probable charge that the tease might make. "Why, I haven't been saying a word!" he cried.

Polly laughed as she ran to the door. "No, you haven't," she answered mockingly, as one agrees with a child whose feelings have been hurt. "He's only been tellin' me he loved"—Pausing an instant, she pointed at Echo, ending her sentence with a shouted "you."

With her hand on Jack's shoulder Echo said: "Polly, you are a flirt. You've too many strings to your bow."

"You mean I've too mony beaus to my strings!" laughingly answered the girl.

"You'll have Slim Hoover and Bud Lane shooting each other up all on your account," chided Echo.

"Nothin' of the kind," pouted Polly. "Can't a girl have friends? But I know what you two are waitin' for."

"What?" asked Jack.

"You want me to vamose. I'm hep. I'll vam." And Polly ran into the kitchen to tell the men that the bridegroom had arrived, but couldn't be seen until the bride was through with an important interview with him. So she hustled them all into the living room, where the girls were.

This room was a long and low apartment, roughly plastered. The heavy ceiling beams, hewn with axes, were uncovered, giving an old English effect, although this was not striven for, but made under the stress of necessity. The broad windows were trellised with vines, through which filtered the sunshine. A cooling evening breeze stirred the leaves lazily. The chairs were broad and comfortable, the workmanship of the monks of the neighboring mission. In the corners stood squat earthen water jars of Mexican molding. On the adobe walls were hung trophies of the hunt, war bonnets and the crudely made adornments of the Apaches. Navajo blankets covered the window seats and were used as screens for sets of shelves built into the spaces between the windows.

Polly carried in on a tray a large bowl of punch surrounded by glasses and gourds. This was received with riotous demonstrations. She placed it in the center of a table made of planks laid on trestles and, assisted by the other girls, served the men liberally from the bowl.

The guests showed the effects of outdoor life and training. Their gestures were full and free. The tones of their voices were high pitched, but they spoke more slowly than their eastern cousins, as if feeling the necessity, even when confined, of making every word carry. No one lolled in his seat, but sat upright, as if still having the feel of the saddle under him.

Toward women in all social gatherings the cowboys act with exaggerated chivalry; but, as Sagebrush would describe it, they "herd by their lonesome." There is none of the commingling of sexes seen in the east. At a dance the girls sit at one end of the room, while the men group themselves about the doorway until the music strikes up. Then each will seize his partner after the boldest has made the first move. When the dance measure ends, the cowboy will rarely escort his partner to her seat, but will leave her to find her way to her chum, while he moves sheepishly back to the doorway, to be received by his fellows with slaps on the back and loud jests. At table cowboys carry on little conversation with the girls. They talk among themselves, but at the women. The presence of the girls leads them to play many pranks on one another. The ice is long in breaking, for their habitual reserve is not easily worn off. Later in the evening this shyness is less marked.

As Jack and Echo entered the doorway Parenthesis had arisen from his seat at the head of the table and was beginning, "Fellow citizens"—

Confused cries of "Sit down," "Let him talk," greeted him.

Sagebrush held up his hand for silence. "Go ahead, Parenthesis," he cried encouragingly.

Parenthesis climbed on a chair and put a foot on the table. This was too much for the orderly soul of Mrs. Allen. "Take your dirty feet off my tablecloth!" she commanded, making a threatening move toward the offender.

Allen restrained her, and Fresno caused Parenthesis to subside by yelling: "Get down offen that table, you idiot! There's the bride an' groom comin' in behind you. We can see 'em through your legs, but we don't like that kin' of a frame."

Jack had slipped his arm about Echo's waist. She was holding his hand, smiling at the exuberance of their guests. Buck McKee, who had been drinking freely, staggered to his feet and hiccoughed: "Here, now, this here don't go—this spoonin' business. There hain't goin' to be no mush an' milk served out before the weddin'"—

"Will you shut up?" admonished Slim Hoover.

"No, siree!" cried the belligerent McKee. "There hain't no man here can shut me up. I'm Buck McKee, I am, an' when I starts in on weddin' festivities I deal"—

"This is one game you are not in on," answered Jack quietly, feeling that he would have to take the lead in the settlement of the unfortunate interruption of the fun.

"That's all right, Jack," McKee began, holding out his hand. "Let bygones"—

Jack was in no mood to parley with the offender. McKee had not been invited to the wedding. The young bridegroom knew that if the first offense was overlooked it would only encourage him and he would make trouble all the evening. Moreover, he disliked Buck because of his evil habits and ugly record.

"You came to this wedding without an invite!" exclaimed Jack.

"I'm here," he growled.

"You're not wanted."

"What!" shouted McKee, paling with anger.

Turning to his friends, speaking calmly and paying no attention to the aroused desperado, Jack said: "Boys, you all know my objection to this man. Dick Lane caught him spring before last slitting the tongue of one of Uncle Jim's calves."

"It's a lie!" shouted McKee, pulling his revolver and attempting to level it at his accuser. Hoover was too quick for him. Catching him by the wrist, he deftly forced him to drop the muzzle toward the floor.

With frightened cries the girls huddled in a corner. The other cowboys upset chairs, springing to their feet, drawing revolvers halfway from holsters as they did so.

Hoover had pressed his thumb into the back of McKee's hand, forcing him to open his fingers and drop his gun on the table. Picking it up, Hoover snapped the weapon open and emptied the cylinders of the cartridges.

Jack made no move to defend himself. He was aware his friends could protect him.

"That'll do," he said to the raging, disarmed puncher. "You can go, Buck. When I want you in any festivities I'll send a special invite to you."

"I'm sure much obliged," sneered McKee, making his way toward the door.

"Here's your gun," cried Slim, tossing the weapon toward him.

McKee caught the weapon, muttering "Thanks."

"It needs cleanin'," sneered the sheriff.

Turning at the doorway, McKee said, "I hain't much stuck on weddin's, anyway." Looking at Jack, he continued threateningly, "Next time we meet it'll be at a little swaree uv my own."

"Get!" was Jack's laconic and ominous command.

LADIES' SKIRT.

All Seams Allowed.

The popular seven-gored skirt is here revealed to us in a new light. The gores are arranged to form box-plaits and these are sewed to a yoke which is gored in front and back and has dart-fitted side sections. The front of the yoke seems to form a panel with the front of the skirt; the back yoke is seamless in the center, while the plaits below meet at the center, thus giving the effect of an inverted box-plait at the lower part. This skirt is uncommonly stylish and will make a handsome portion of a tailor-made suit. It can be made of Panama, serge, cheviot or broadcloth. The pattern (5162) is cut in sizes 22 to 32 inches waist. To make the skirt in the medium size will require 4 yards of material 44 inches wide. The lower edge of this skirt measures 3¾ yards.

The above pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

HONORED AS A FRIEND, AS A CITIZEN AND AS A MAN

Members of Peterborough Board of Trade and Canadian Club Said Good-bye to Mr. D. Hughes Charles--Two Illuminated Addresses Read--Tributes to the Guest of the Evening.

Eight years and a half ago a stranger came to this city from Woodstock to commence his duties as manager of the local branch of the Bank of Commerce. The citizens of Woodstock, told him that they were sorry to see him depart, and they were sincere. That stranger began his work here. In his official capacity at the institution he met the citizens. He had a cheery word and a hearty hand-clasp and he won his way into the hearts of all with whom he came in contact.

Last evening at the Hotel National representative citizens of Peterborough, to the number of one hundred, gathered to say farewell to one whom they were genuinely sorry to see take his departure for Montreal. He was held by each as a true friend, a good citizen, but, above all, admired as a man.

Two addresses which contained many nice things, were read. The speakers told of their personal experience with the guest of the occasion. The orchestra played Irish airs, and the vocalist sang an Irish song, and as he came to the lines "May God speed old Ireland, that's an Irishman's toast," the guest raised a glass of water to his lips. At intervals the gathering cheered and applauded in a manner which denoted sincerity. Wishes were expressed for the health, happiness and prosperity of the man and his esteemed wife. That man was Mr. D. Hughes Charles.

During the eight years and a half, which is, after all, a short time, Mr. Hughes Charles has displayed qualities in his social and professional life which have endeared him to those who knew him as a personal friend, and in few cases as an acquaintance. The city of Peterborough has, too, been benefitted thereby. He put his whole heart into every task before him, and everything that he undertook was done well.

The scene before the eye in the attractive and commodious dining hall of the Hotel National was a pleasing one. Overhead and on the walls was a profusion of flags. Cut flowers and a tastily gotten-up menu card graced every table.

The Irish smile was conspicuous on the features of the guest as he occupied his seat at the head table. On his right were Mr. Alex. Laird, general manager of the Bank of Commerce, and His Honor Judge Huycke, and on the left were the chairman, Mr. H. R. H. Kenner, secretary of the Peterborough Canadian Club; Ald. Gillespie, president of the Peterborough Board of Trade; His Worship Mayor Morrow, Hon. J. R. Stratton, Mr. D. O'Connell, Ald. Bradburn and Mr. F. D. Kerr.

It was a choice and appetizing repast that had been prepared by Mine Host Denison, and it received full justice at the hands of the gathering.

Shortly after nine o'clock the chairman called for order. He expressed his pleasure at the large and representative attendance, and announced the first toast, that of "The King." The toast was honored with loyalty and enthusiasm.

The address from the Canadian Club was next read by the chairman.

This address was a tribute to Mr. Hughes Charles, for his energetic and whole-souled work, as a member of the Canadian Club, and also as a past secretary. In his departure the local association was losing a valued member, but best wishes for the future in his new home was expressed.

In the address from the Peterborough Board of Trade, and which was read by Ald. Gillespie, the part which Mr. Hughes Charles had always taken in the civic affairs of Peterborough was alluded to, with warm commendation. He had done his duty as a citizen, and in his daily life displayed those characteristics which go for the betterment of a community.

Both addresses, illuminated, were handsome and artistic specimens of art. That of the Canadian Club was worked at the Review Printing Co., and that of the Board of Trade at the Examiner Printing Co.

Mr. W. McIlroy followed with that old and ever-welcome "An Irishman's Toast." It was well sung, and the gathering joined in the chorus, and then they wanted some more. Mr. McIlroy responded with the chorus.

"OUR GUEST."

His Honor Judge Huycke proposed the toast to "Our Guest." In his remarks the speaker expressed his appreciation of the high honor bestowed upon him, that of proposing the toast to the guest of the evening. And it was a pleasure mixed with pain. Since coming to Peterborough, one year ago, he had learned to love and respect Mr. Hughes Charles, as had many others. "I understand H. C. is an Irishman," remarked his Honor, and then he told the story of Pat and Mike, who ran foul of a wildcat. The animal went up the tree and Pat up after him. Finally the cat fell down on Mike, and in his terror he called to the man up the tree, and in reply to Pat's consent to help him to hold the animal, Mike answered that he wanted his help to let the cat get away. "We are here to give him a hearty send-off," said the speaker, not to hold him."

His influence and character had reached out. He had drawn us closely to him with admiration and respect. There will be a blank here. Anything that was any good was not complete without H. C.

"I join with you," said his Honor, "and you with me, in best wishes for the future for H. C. and Mrs. Hughes Charles."

The applause at the conclusion of Judge Huycke's remarks was loud and prolonged.

The chairman read a telegram of regret from the Hon. Senator Cox, and which was as follows;—

To Mr. T. Q. Quartermaine, Secretary Board of Trade, Peterborough.

Kindly accept and extend to the officers and members of your Board of Trade and Canadian Club my sincere thanks for their very kind invitation to be present at the complimentary dinner to be given to our mutual friend, Mr. Hughes Charles to-morrow evening, but I regret very much that I already have an important engagement here, which will deprive me of pleasure of being with you. I am very glad to know that you are paying such a well-deserved compliment to Mr. Hughes Charles, and you have my hearty congratulations and best wishes for the success of your banquet

GEO. A. COX.

HON. J. R. STRATTON.

Hon. J. R. Stratton was the next speaker. He said that it was with mingled feelings of regret and pleasure for him to make a few observations on the departure from the city of H. C. It was with regret that he was leaving, and indeed a pleasure to see so many present to say a fond farewell. In the eight years of his residence here he had done his best for the community. As the address had truly said, he had used his influence with everything tending to advancement. In his connections with the Peterborough Board of Trade, Canadian Club and Agricultural Society, and in his social and financial life he had always put forth his best efforts. It was a pity that so good a citizen was to leave Peterborough, but he joined with all in the hope that his desire would be obtained in the city to which he was about to remove. He would join in wishing for Mrs. Charles, who had always endeavored to do her part in the social life of the community, good health and happiness, and hoped that the new manager of the Bank of Commerce would be a gentleman who could fill H. C.'s place as well as could be expected.

MAYOR MORROW.

"If he had done nothing more than his work as a banker, his removal would be a loss," said Mayor Morrow. "Our banks, as they are organized and managed now, have an important part in our country's life. It is important that we have men of such character as H. C. He, too, has given his time to assist in the building up of the commercial life of the city, and the agricultural life of the country. He hoped that Mr. Hughes Charles and his esteemed wife would have a happy and prosperous residence in Montreal.

MR. D. O'CONNELL.

Mr. D. O'Connell, in his remarks, paid a tribute to the guest of the occasion for the great good he had accomplished since coming to the city. He had grasped the situation. He had seen the opportunities for advancement and he had acted. It could be safely said that of the many gentlemen who had left Peterborough, many of whom were scattered over the North American continent, and had written their names thereon by their achievements, none of them had shown greater self-sacrifice for the welfare of the city than had H. C. If the city was awakening to its possibilities, that awakening is due to the enterprise, energy and skill which had been shown by H. C. in the past. And he had given his friends a splendid opportunity of knowing him. He has been a man of sterling character, and a man who had the strength to stand by his convictions. Mr. O'Connell clos-

ELLIOT'S

BLACKLISTER GOT HIS FROM MEDICAL BOTTLE

At the police Court this morning Lew LeBar was given ten days in which to pay ten dollars. He was charged with securing liquor while on the black-list. The offence was committed on Sunday morning, Sept. 11th. He procured liquor from his wife who kept it in the house for medicine. Accompanied by three other fellows, they went to George Elliott's house and secured more bottles of the liquid. LeBar's plea this morning was that he understood he had been taken off the list.

His worship understood differently and imposed the fine.

A BICYCLE THEFT.

A HOOK-AND-EYE AFFAIR

Big Lunge That Could Only See on One Side Landed by a Southpaw Angler at Islinda—Oak Orchard Will Remain Open for Duck Hunters and Late Fishermen'

Islinda, Buckhorn Lake, Sept. 13.—There was a lunge caught here Saturday weighing about 14 lbs., that had only one eye. The place where the left eye should be was perfectly smooth and there were no indications of there ever having been an eye there. Probably he has passed all the bait on the blind side until this, and a left-handed fisherman caught him.

The "Not Too Bad Fishing Club," of Rochester, have been here the past week, and it was one of the members who made this catch.

They are leaving Wednesday with six boxes of fish. This club has fished together for the past ten years in all parts of Canada and the States and for good consistent fishing, they state, that this locality has 'em all beat to a "frazzle."

Islinda closes on the 17th, after a very successful season. Oak Orchard remains open to accommodate the duck hunters and late fishermen.

HAD RIGHT ARM BROKEN AND RECEIVED SEVERE SHOCK

Accident to James Mackie at Waterworks Pump House—Was Removing Machinery When Rigging Gave Way, the Pulley Striking Him on the Arm.

James Mackie, a member of the William Hamilton Company's gang moving machinery at the waterworks dam, had his right arm broken at the shoulder yesterday afternoon and sustained a rather severe shock as the result of an accident, while moving some gearing which was being taken from the old pump house to the new one. The men were raising up some gearing, when the rigging gave way, the pully block striking Mr. Mackie on the right arm, fracturing that member and violently knocking him down.

Dr. Morgan was called to attend to the injuries, and Mr. Mackie is now in Nicholls Hospital.

ONE MORE INDUSTRY FOR THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH A MISSIONARY INSTITUTE PROGRAMME AND DATES

Peterborough is to have another Missionary Institute. This announcement will be gladly received by all who had the privilege of attending the very successful institute held two years ago. The committee appointed by the Young People's Union of the city to arrange the programme has been most successful and a large attendance is assured. The dates are October 10, 11 and 12. Mr. J. Lovell Murray, M. A., successor to Prof. Harlem P. Beech, as Educational Secretary of the Student Volunteer movement has kindly consented to come, and will give one or two addresses. He is a man of wide experience of world-wide travel, and will be a great help to the success of the Institute. Other speakers are Rev. Dr. Rankin, of Toronto; Rev. Canon Tucker, LL.D.; Rev. Dr. J. G. Brown, Rev. A. E. Armstrong, M.A., all favorably known to Peterborough audiences. Mission study classes will be held each day, and a number of missionaries who are home on furlough, will be present, giving the Institute the inspiration of their presence and messages. The Mission Study Classes include all strangers within our gates, led by Mrs. F. C. Stephenson, of Toronto. The challenge of the city by Rev. J. A. Miller, B.A., of Toronto, South America, by Rev. Mr. Mitchell, of Bolivia. Other countries will be under consideration. A noted figure at the Institute will be Mr. G. Whitfield Ray, F.R.G.S., missionary and Government explorer, author of "Through Five Republics on Horseback." Delegates will come from the surrounding towns, and a most successful Institute is looked for. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 10, 11 and 12, should be set apart in our programme as given up to the Missionary Institute. All societies from outside points would kindly send in names of delegates at the earliest possible date.

DOUBLE THE ENTRIES OF PREVIOUS EXHIBITIONS

The entries for the fair this year are double what they were last year, and from the increased interest taken in the exhibition it is safe to predict the largest attendance in the fair's history.

The extra features this year will be much more attractive than at any previous exhibition, and there will be something to take up one's interest every minute.

The 57th regimental band has been engaged, and will, as seen by the programmes published, give splendid selections of music, which will give color to the big grandstand bill and have an enlivening effect generally.

HONORED AS A FRIEND, AS A CITIZEN

ed with the remark that he would look forward with pleasurable anticipation for his success of the future.

MR. ALEX. LAIRD.

The general manager of the Bank of Commerce, Mr. Alexander Laird, spoke of the high esteem in which H. C. was held by the bank. It was no affair of the institution that he was leaving. He had taken the step wholly on his own account. "If, by chance, you are not treated well at Montreal," said Mr. Laird to H. C., "you come right back to Peterborough."

He had heard a great deal said during the evening, and he believed it to be all true. Regarding a successor, he could say nothing, but he gave his assurance that the new official would be a man worthy to fill the position at the bank, and one who would be a fitting addition to the city.

THE REPLY.

Upheavals of applause greeted Mr. Hughes Charles as he arose to respond. "I thank you heartily, indeed, for the honor you have done me tonight," he said. "After listening to the eulogies passed upon me by the eloquent speakers, and after listening to the addresses, it is evident that I have reached the years of discretion or my head would be turned. I believe all you have said is out of the goodness of the heart, but in the end your presence here leads me to believe that you feel that I have done my duty by Peterborough. The presence, too. of my general manager shows that I have also done my duty by the bank. I really cannot tell you in words what I feel, but I can say this much, that the remembrances of this night will always remain green in my memory. I have left the bank, gentlemen, and I am glad to say, on my own accord. You all think a lot of me, and I will always think the same of you. If I remained longer I might get cranky with old age, and you would then wish for me to leave. Another reason is that I would like to know how it feels to get along without the parental care of a Board of Managers, a general manager and a Board of Directors. However, my relations with the bank have been of a pleasant character. While I am leaving the bank, it will still continue to go on. (Laughter.) To my successor I extend the right hand of fellowship, and trust that the same kindly feelings that you have shown to me will be his. I have always tried to do my best by Peterborough. As it has been said, I recognized early the possibilities of the city, and it is my hope that the wishes of the citizens will be realized. If this is brought about, and I know it can be, you will have the great city of the Midlands.

"Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the King" were enthusiastically sung and the pleasant affair was brought to a close with cheers for Mr. Hughes Charles.

A select orchestra of five pieces furnished the music and many flattering comments passed around on the appropriate airs and the skilful manner in which they were played. Mr. R. J. Devey presided at the piano.

Black Handers Resort to Bombs.

New York, Sept. 14.—After writing several threatening letters and waiting in vain to a response to their demands for $5,000, Black Handers yesterday exploded a bomb in front of the wine store of Enrico Casabianca on Sixth avenue. The explosion demolished part of the front of the five-storey building and created a panic in the neighborhood. Occupants of big apartment hotels and residences of millionaires a block away were aroused by the terrific shock, but no one was injured.

Ran After the Girl.

London, Ont., Sept. 14.—Nelson H. Stebbins of Toronto, who is running some amusements at the Western Fair, was fined $10 by Mayor Beattie yesterday for chasing a young London girl through the streets Monday night.

Another girl, who was 16 last March, and whom, it is alleged, Stebbins induced to leave her widowed mother in Toronto, was sent back to Toronto yesterday.

An Unconclusive Test.

Brandon, Sept. 14.—Threshing of Marquis wheat, a new variety, at the experimental farm here, showed a yield of only fifteen bushels per acre on account of the generally unfavorable weather. This wheat matures earlier than Red Fyfe, the period of growth this season being exactly eighty days.

Gave No Warning.

Kingston, Sept. 14.—For the death of his wife at Gananoque, Robert G. Johnston has brought action against the Thousand Islands Railway Co. for $5,000 damages. While driving over the tracks Mrs. Johnston was killed, it is claimed, due to the negligence of the company in not giving warning by blowing the whistle or having a watchman. He also claims that the company had no legal right to operate a siding where the fatality occurred.

Found Famous Picture.

Montreal, Sept. 14.—Purves Carter, the English art expert, who has just returned from Ontario, states that he has found the famous Durer picture of Sir Thomas Moore, who was chancellor to Henry VIII., and who lost his head on account of a disagreement with his master on matrimonial affairs. The artist will not say where he found the picture, but says that it's discovery will create an uproar in art circles.

Wreck on Norfolk and Western.

Roanoake, Va., Sept. 14.—A special on the Norfolk and Western Railway, bearing President L. E. Johnson and General Manager N. D. Maher, was wrecked at Delorme, West Virginia, yesterday. Neither President Johnson nor Mr. Maher was hurt, but F. L. Woolwine, foreman of engineers, and Engineer E. D. Burton, were killed.

Cut a Third of the Charge.

Kingston, Sept. 14.—Word from Ottawa says that in regard to the bill sent the city by the G.T.R. for the cost of the subway at Kingston Junction, the Railway Commission has reduced the company's charges against the city and county by $2,200, making a saving of $1,100 to the city.

PRESENTATION AT THE PETERBOROUGH CLUB

There was a full turnout of the members of the Peterborough Club, after last night's banquet at the Hotel National, to do honor to the departing member, Mr. D. Hughes-Charles. After a number of songs had been indulged in, many witty and regretful speeches made, Mr. W. H. Denham, advanced with a beautiful solid silver punch bowl and ladle This was presented to Mr. Hughes-Charles, on behalf of the club, by Messrs. Denham and O'Connell, in their usual happy way, amidst tremendous cheers.

Mr. Hughes-Charles was genuinely taken by surprise. The plot had been completely concealed. He rallied, however, and in an admirable fifteen minutes speech, reviewed the history of his friendships in Peterborough and expressed his very deep regret at leaving. He expected, he said to derive, a large number of clients from this district, and the new firm of McQuaig and Hughes-Charles, brokers, of Montreal, would be pleased to welcome, in a social or business way, any or all, of their Peterborough friends.

Concealed Loans.

Washington, Sept. 14.—A system by which banks in small cities in the west have been fooling national bank examiners and concealing loans in their reserve bank in a large city, has been discovered, and is under investigation. A keen examiner had found an instance where as many as a dozen banks in small cities had been concealing loans in one reserve bank in Chicago.

There is authority for the statement that the whole system of national bank examination and regulation is to receive great attention during the next few months.

A PURSE OF GOLD WAS GIVEN AT CHARLOTTE STREET SUNDAY SCHOOL

Several Addresses by Ministers—A Presentation Was Made—Temperance Situation Reviewed—Rev. Mr. Potter Has Gone.

The meeting in Charlotte street Sunday school last evening will long be remembered by Rev. J. G. Potter, as it brought to a conclusion the remarkable series of tributes of appreciation and esteem which have been showered upon him during the last couple of days, previous to his departure for Montreal. The genuine regret which the congregation of his church and the Temperance and Moral Reform League of this city feel by his removal to a new field of work was brought to a climax last evening by the presentation to him of an address and a substantial purse of gold from the above mentioned society.

Mr. Richard Lees presided at last night's gathering, and before proceeding with the program of the evening, introduced a matter of business which was necessitated by the removal of Mr. Potter. Mr. Potter has filled the position of president of the Temperance and Moral Reform League of Peterborough with his characteristic energy and faithfulness and his departure leaves the position vacant. Rev. H. J. Keith nominated F. J. Hassard as a suitable and capable successor. The motion was carried and Mr. Hassard will occupy the position for the next year.

A solo by Mr. R. F. Downey, entitled "British to the Core," a patriotic selection, was well rendered and received hearty applause.

Mr. Lees in a brief chairman's address, explained the nature and object of the evening's gathering. It was to review the local option and temperance situation in the city and find out their bearings and in exactly what position the movement stands. He had known Mr. Potter for years, since a boy in college, and since coming to Peterborough the reverend gentleman had devoted himself with his yothful characteristic energy in lending his aid to any cause that needed his assistance. He had done splendid work in the Temperance cause and had exercised ability and tact in that branch of the work.

An eloquent address from the Temperance and Moral Reform Society was then read by Mr. A. B. Cunningham, and Mr. Andrew Brown presented him with a purse of gold amounting to about $120.

To Rev. J. G. Potter, Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Friend,—We gather to-night as citizens of Peterborough to say farewell and express to you our heartfelt gratitude for the great services you have rendered our community.

We realize that our city stands on a higher moral plane as a result of your untiring energy and inspiring leadership.

The greatest foes of earth and home, the greatest enemies of civic righteousness and civic government have been dethroned from a place of control and though still enjoying a legal existence, are awaiting their final defeat. For this great measure of success, we as citizens, are profoundly thankful.

We feel your departure will be a great loss to us, but we also realize that the good seed of inspiration and ultimate victory you have so faithfully sown will bring forth its hundredfold harvest. To the various speakers of the evening we have delegated the expressions of regard felt by every Christian church and Society in our city.

As a slight token of our regard we ask you to accept this purse and trust that its golden coins may symbolize in some measure the worth, esteem and love we desire to express.

You carry with you our earnest prayers and good wishes for success and happiness in your new field of labor.

Presented by the City Temperance League on behalf of the citizens of Peterborough.

R. LEES, Vice-President.
A. BROWN, Treasurer.
A. B. CUNNINGHAM, Secretary.

MR. POTTER'S ADDRESS.

Mr. Potter, in a concise and pointed reply, expressed his sincere appreciation of the kindness of the donors of the generous gift. "I am going to a city where there is a large population of both denominations, Catholic and Protestant, where the field of labor is wide, and opportunities for doing useful work numerous. The money side of the question should not be too seriously considered; money is necessary, but it should not be allowed to lesson the efforts of temperance workers. The initial movement of the local temperance society was inaugurated in Charlotte street church by a few brethren who asked the aid of Mr. Potter. Those who were affected by the campaign against liquor were opposed to it.

"I have seen so much destruction caused by strong drink as a boy in Halifax," said Mr. Potter, "that I determined to lend all my efforts to its abolition. It is the greatest enemy of young men, and it has its expression in the men who are engaged in it. It is degrading and sinful and blasts the homes of those who are in its power. It never brightens any home. It is not elevating and has no place of any good in the world. I owe much of my detestation and abhorrence of the degrading traffic, to the teachings and example of a godly mother, who went in and out of saloons trying to lead victims of drink to the path of sobriety and who worked with might and main for its downfall. "It is better to wear out than rust out," was her motto.

"Now that I am leaving Peterborough," he stated, "I do not want people to feel that I am cut off from the work. For one solid month prior to the next local option campaign I will be here, ready to fight the battle against drink and the devil.

"The condition of affairs in Peterborough to-day all go to prove that God is causing things to work out as He intends. Peterborough will be a much better looking city, with her hotels turned into stores, such as the buildings at the corner of Charlotte and Aylmer and Brock streets. This work is the work of God and cannot stop. It is the design of God and the devil cannot block it. Let us look forward to a better time when the homes of Peterborough will be free from the curse of strong drink. Those who last year voted against local option are determined to vote for it now, as they are certain it is for the best interests of the city."

The chairman next called on Rev. R. Webb.

MR. WEBB'S ADDRESS.

"Three times in twenty-four hours I have risen to my feet to speak about Rev. J. G. Potter," said Mr. Webb. "It would be wasteful and ridiculous excess to say any more about him, but a few words are necessary. We have a man as our guest to-night who was ready to stake body and soul in the cause that God led him into. There never was a man who was able to down Mr. Potter in his work. "The Editor of the Review," said Mr. Webb, "in an editorial comment on Mr. Potter's work, paid a splendid tribute to him, but in the last few lines of the article had stated that Mr. Potter had lacked logic. This was entirely false and the editor was mistaken. A few paltry dollars now. Twice that sum should have been given him at the time of the local option campaign. "We feel that we have a debt to pay," and Mr. Webb assured the departing minister that he carried with him the heartiest wishes of all present for a prosperous future.

REV. MR. COON.

Mr. Coon said that it was with pleasure mixed with regret that he regarded Mr. Potter's departure. He had always been pleased with the spirit that had been manifested by the departing brother in his attitude to the other churches generally. Mr. Potter had a warm place in the hearts of the Methodist people. As far as he knew no enemy of Mr. Potter existed in the Methodist church in Peterborough. He was glad that he belonged to a people who had stood by Mr. Potter in his campaign. He paid a tribute to his usefulness.

REV. MR. POGUE.

Mr. Pogue made a rather humorous address. It is a new thing to see a minister feasted and praised. Sometimes the criticism is made that ministers have no right to take any part in public affairs. He had often been told to stop moralizing, mind his own business and preach the simlpe gospel." The ministers of this city," he said, "should be preachers of civic righteousness. The people of the city will be poorer by the removal of Mr. Potter, for by his going the city loses one of its strongest advocates of civic righteousness.

REV. MR. KEITH.

Rev. Mr. Keith made a short closing address. He was of the opinion that too many ministers and too few laymen had had opportunity to speak during the evening. He could say, however, and it was his unswerving conviction that Mr. Potter had been an example and an inspiration to the whole city, and it was his hope that God would raise up a minister who would carry on the good work which Mr. Potter had started.

Rev. Dr. Langford concluded the evening's proceedings with prayer.

Mr. Potter and family left to-day on the 11.28 C.P.R. express for Montreal.

ANNUAL RALLY | Y.W.C.A. JOTTINGS | CLASS WORK

The long, bright, summer days are drawing to a close. In the midst of the out-of-doors life there has crept in upon upon us, we know not how, a rest, a renewing of energy, which fills us with fresh vigor for work.

As we look ahead to the coming months we are anticipating and planning time for study and reading time also for fun and recreation. In so planning we would call the attention of every girl in our city to the Y.W.C.A. fall program, which offers golden opportunities for both mental and physical development.

Miss Coventry, who is so well and favorably known, will resume her gymnasium classes. Classes for junior girls and one for boys, for school girls and business girls will be formed. These gymnasium classes happily combine work and play, and are most popular classes.

Rev. H. R. Trumpour will conduct the weekly Literature Class, which will be free to members.

Dr. Malcolm McCulloch will lecture to the "First Aid to the Injured" class which will be organized under the St. John's Ambulance Association, and certificates given at the close of the course.

Elementary English, Cooking and Drawing classes will also be held.

More than 200 members took advantage of the various classes at the Y.W.C.A. last season, and this season promises to see a much larger number enrolled in the Bible Study, Gymnasium and Educational classes.

Informal travel talks and many jolly social evenings will be arranged for and announced.

The annual Association rally has been arranged for Friday evening, Sept. 23rd. Miss Addison Dean, of Annesley Hall, Toronto, will be the speaker. There will be a short musical program, followed by a social half hour. A cordial invitation is extended to all to enjoy this evening with the Association members.

The Y.W.C.A. girls are making a special effort to largely increase the membership before October 1st when all class work commences.

All intending to join and those desiring definite information regarding the classes should call on or 'phone Miss McCalla, at the building. Members' ticket, $1.00; juniors, 50 cents.

WILL BISHOP O'CONNOR OF PETERBORO SUCCEED ARCHBISHOP GUNTHIER

A Kingston dispatch says:—"It is news here," was the statement made at the Bishop's palace this morning when asked to confirm the transfer of Archbishop Gauthier from Kingston to Montreal.

"The archbishop, his secretary, and the rector, are all in Montreal," continued the priest, who answered the telephone.

Archbishop Gauthier had no desire for change, but the orders from Rome will be obeyed.

The archbishop is greatly beloved here. He has been a liberal, kindly and courteous man, and all classes deplore his removal. He has been archbishop here since 1898.

It is thought the archbishopric here will be filled by either Bishop MacDonell, of Alexandra, or Bishop O'Connor, of Peterborough.

From the following editorial in the Kingston Standard it would seem that there is no doubt of Archbishop Gauthier's transfer:—

The transfer of Archbishop Gauthier of this city to the Ottawa diocese while not a promotion is in a sense an advancement inasmuch as Ottawa is the seat of Government and for that reason the Ottawa See is considered probably the most important post in Canada in the Roman Catholic Church. While Kingston will be sorry to lose the distinguished and brilliant prelate who for years has so splendidly and tactfully presided over his charge here—making firm and fast friends with Catholics and Protestants alike—they will rejoice that his ability and worth have been so signally recognized. It is beyond question that the present good feeling in the city between Protestants and Catholics is in no small measure due to his kindly and broadening influence.

To his new field he will be followed by the heartiest and best wishes of the people of Kingston.

It Saves You Waiting

On Saturdays we have so many persons who drive long distances or come by train, that we are unable to promise appointments for that day, but we wait upon persons in turn. Many persons call write or phone for appointment, we then reserve time for such and it saves them much waiting, as the time so given is kept open for them. We make such appointments for any day or evening other than Saturday. Evening is quite as good as day time for the eye examination, but it is necessary to arrange for this a day or two in advance.

TRADES AND LABOR CONGRESS FAVOR TAKING OVER UTILITIES

Warm Discussion Occurs Regarding the Breaking of Franchises---Enactment of a Law to Guard Against Petty Theft of Tools is Desired.

Fort William, Sept. 15.—After a strenuous session yesterday morning the Trades and Labor Congress adjourned for the day to take a trip on the harbor and to visit the Canadian Northern grain elevators. The congress' solicitor, J. G. O'Donoghue, Toronto, read his report yesterday morning, which was referred to a special committee. The following resolutions were dealt with yesterday morning:

An amendment to the Lemieux Act to make it illegal to approach conciliators by 'phone, letter, personally or by any other method while the investigation was going on, was voted down.

To appeal to the Minister of Militia to prohibit military exercise and drills on Labor Day. Some delegates said this was becoming prevalent and deprived labor men from participating in Labor Day demonstrations when they desired.

To seek the enactment of a law making it difficult for petty thieves to sell carpenters' and other mechanics' tools to pawnbrokers and second hand dealers. The resolution asked that the seller prove his identity as owner of the tools before he can dispose of same. Another to establish a monthly magazine under the auspices of the congress.

A perennial resolution introduced by Socialists, making it prohibitory for union men to enlist in the militia was voted down.

To enforce the Ontario Act referring to running boards on street cars.

The resolution that provoked a lengthy and heated discussion was as follows: "That provincial laws be enacted which will enable the public to take over and operate any public franchise utility if at any time the people so decide, irrespective of any existing franchise previously granted."

The two main opponents to this resolution were Alphonse Verville, M.P., and S. L. Landers, Hamilton. They argued that labor organizations believed in keeping agreements inviolate, and it would be placing the labor congress in a ridiculous light to ask for legislation to violate agreements.

At least a score of delegates spoke in favor of the resolution and denounced Messrs. Verville and Landers. They argued that a corporation should not be considered as being aggrieved when a franchise was taken from it. It squeezed the people when it had a chance, and should be given a dose of its own medicine. Some argued that the law permitted public franchise corporations to expropriate, irrespective of the choice of the owners, and the same right should revert to a municipality and political division. The resolution carried with but the two opposing votes.

RIDDLING EXPERTS

Crippen's Lawyer Weakens Evidence of Doctor—Miss Leneve Breaking Down.

London, Sept. 15.—Under shrewd and merciless cross-examination yesterday by Attorney Arthur Newton, Dr. Pepper, the Government analyst, practically repudiated much of his former testimony, and admitted that it was impossible to determine the sex of the remains supposed to have been the body of Belle Elmore Crippen from an anatomical study of them.

Pepper's admission leaves the question of the body's identity dependent upon a few strands of hair found in curlers near the body, another lock of hair found knotted in a man's handkerchief, and the remnant of a woman's undervest.

The evidence of the hair, however, was rendered practically valueless by Pepper's admission that the hair found in the curlers was dark, while that in the handkerchief was light and much shorter than that in the curlers.

Pepper testified that the person who removed the viscera of the body must have been both a student of anatomy and a clever surgical operator, as the work equalled that of a professional surgeon.

Pepper added that the scar on the body, by means of which the prosecution is also trying to prove the identity, was probably old.

"What makes you think the scar resulted from an operation?" Newton asked.

"Because from the nature of it, and its position, it could hardly have come from an accident," Pepper replied.

Dr. Pepper earlier in the day admitted that when he first saw the remains of the woman supposed to have been Belle Elmore Crippen, he thought they were animal remains. It required close inspection, he said, to determine that they were remnants of a human body.

After Pepper left the stand, the hearing was adjourned until Friday.

Miss Leneve is rapidly breaking down. Her periods of elation yesterday were always followed by moments of depression. That she is on the verge of a nervous collapse was shown by her convulsive actions, which she made every effort to hide.

CORONATION JUNE 21, 1911

London, Sept. 15.—Circumstantial evidence points to the date of King George's coronation as Wednesday, June 21, 1911. This conclusion may be adduced from the fact that when the stewards of the Jockey Club, in fixing the date of next year's meetings, decided upon June 20, and the three following days for the Ascot meeting, they were privately instructed by Lord Marcus Beresford, who is to control King George's racing stable when the cessation of court mourning will permit him to remove his horses from the care of the Earl of Derby, to choose a different date. It was suggested that a week earlier, June 13, would meet with the requirements of the court.

When the arrangements for the coronation of King Edward were completed in 1902, it was decided that the ceremony should take place on the first Wednesday after Ascot.

Already the Earl of Norfolk is busily engaged in preparing a list of the "eligibles" for invitation to the ceremony in Westminster Abbey, and attending to the thousand and one other details in connection with the ceremony.

TRIED TO SMUGGLE STRIKEBREAKERS

St. Catharines, Sept. 15.—It cost Moses Levinsky, supposedly a Toronto pedlar, a pretty penny to try and get two Buffalo tailors, Max Badiner and Benjamin Doctor, across the line into Canada. They wanted to go to Hamilton to act as strikebreakers. The two men were sent back by the inspector at Bridgeburg because they could not produce $25.

Meeting Levinsky in Buffalo, he took the men across on the ferry, but inspectors all along the border had been notified, and the three were immediately arrested and Badiner and Doctor each assessed $20 and Levinsky $100.

CALLS TEDDY A "VULGAR BLUSTERER"

Geneva, Switzerland, Sept. 15.—The annual meeting of the permanent committee of the Young Egypt party, the aim of which is autonomy, opened yesterday, and afforded an opportunity of which several Egyptians availed themselves, to attack former President Roosevelt, because of his speeches at Khartoum and London. Among the epithets applied to the colonel were "Vulgar blusterer" and "self advertiser." The committee sent a telegram to London demanding the immediate evacuation of Egypt by the British Government. A message was also sent to the Khedive of Egypt asking for the re-establishment of the Egyptian Constitution.

NEW SHIPS FOR CANADIAN LINERS

London, Sept. 15.—The C.N.R. next week opens a weekly service between Bristol and Montreal. The Voltarno, with accommodation for 1,500 steerage passengers, is to be put on the St. Lawrence route.

Emigration is to be better catered for by the various lines, who are also being urged to pay attention to the question of better communication with Newfoundland.

Got the Countess' Jewels.

Winnipeg, Sept. 15.—The Countess of Antrim, who passed through here a few days ago on her way to the coast, was robbed of jewelry valued at many thousands of dollars, and priceless from the fact that some of them were family heirlooms, while at the Royal Alexandra, on Saturday night. She will visit her son, in business in British Columbia.

A WOMAN WHO WOULD NOT TALK SO SHE WENT BACK

Welland Press.

Something happened on the border on Thursday night that never happened before. It was on M.C.R. train No. 86, going from Canada to the U. S. A well dressed lady occupied one of the seats in the car, and when interrogated by the U.S. immigration official, refused to talk further than to tell the officer that it was "none of his business," where she lived. The officer finally ordered the train run back to Canada and the silent woman put off, after which the train went on its way half an hour late.

CHEERED THE QUEEN'S OWN

London, Sept. 15.—Headed by the band of the Irish Guards, the Queen's Own Rifles marched from Nine Elms station across London through throngs of applauding and admiring people to the Duke of York's School, Chelsea, where they remain during their stay. At several schools along the route of march the children were grouped. They cheered lustily and waved their flags in honor of the Canucks.

King Edward's Horse, the mounted territorial regiment, composed of colonials resident in London, entertained the Q.O.R. at a brilliant dinner in the Holborn restaurant. Col. Fortescue presided, supported by Lord Strathcona, Sir G. H. Reid, high commissioner for Australia, and the officers of the Q.O.R. The highest tributes were paid Sir Henry Pellatt for his patriotism, the chairman remarking that the visit of the Q.O.R. was unique in history, the service of which to the Empire it was hard to overestimate.

Col. Pellatt, who was enthusiastically received, spoke of the many useful military lessons the Queen's Own had already learnt, which would be useful to those they had left behind in Canada.

Lord Strathcona said that the Q.O.R. were a credit to Canada. He was proud of Sir Henry Pellatt and his regiment. The visit to England would serve more closely to unite the Empire.

COMMANDER CRITICIZED

Ottawa, Sept. 15.—The Free Press, the local Government organ, criticizes severely Commander Roper for having talked on the navy question the other day, and says: "The principle involved is so serious a one that Commander Roper should be told by his superior officers that the first duty of a sailor is to keep his mouth closed. He is entitled to his own opinions upon matters of political controversy, like every other individual, but he should understand that in Canada, as in England, the person who should express the official opinions of the Department is the Ministerial head, and not any of his advisers."

INDICTED FOR STEALING STAMPS

Wichita, Kan., Sept. 15.—W. F. Naftzger, until a week ago president of the Fourth National Bank of this city; Frank S. Burt, ex-chief of Wichita, and John Callahan, alleged leader of a gang of bank and postoffice robbers, were indicted by a federal grand jury here yesterday on charges of conspiring against the Government and receiving and disposing of stamps, which it is charged they knew were stolen from the Government. The value of the stamps mentioned in the indictments is $1,500.

SIR JAMES WANTS A PREFERENCE

Premier of Ontario Outlines His Position

Denies Charge That He Favors a Policy Which Will Increase Cost of Living in Britain.

London, Sept. 15.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—In consequence of his alleged desertion, by his views here, on Canada, Sir James Whitney, Premier of Ontario, has given an interview to The Standard, recapitulating his views on imperial questions.

Sir James Whitney urges the desirability of Canada establishing herself in the British market and strongly deprecates any reciprocity arrangement with the United States. The accusation that he favored a policy which would raise the cost of living in England, he styles scandalous misrepresentation. He would have nothing to do with any policy having that affect, but he is unable to see any possibility of any such result. Canada could supply wheat as cheaply as the United States and the Argentine, and the refusal of Britain even to discuss the proposals for imperial preferential trade are deplorable and may well prove disastrous.

Dealing with the strong desire of Canada to weld the Empire on the strongest lines, Premier Whitney said "We don't care whether you make free trade or tariff reform the basis on your part for commercial arrangements. But for goodness sake let us stop drifting and agree to sail a definite course. The only live imperial policy before us is that enunciated by Chamberlain. Let us get around the table and discuss it as business men, as loyal sons of the fathers by whom our splendid heritage was won. If free traders cannot see their way to make the Chamberlain policy a subject of discussion, let them produce an alternative policy of their own. We will examine that and anything to make a step forward, anything to prevent a backward movement which may naturally occur.

A WATERY FIND —STRANGE INCIDENT

Couple of weeks ago a young man lost a gold locket. He assumed he lost it between the G.T.R. station and his home. He advertised in the Review, but did not get his locket. It was one of the cases that even a Review ad. could not touch, though they are generally successful. He had been launching and overlooked the fact. The other day he went launching again, and coming up to his wharf, leaned over the back of the boat to pull off such weeds as might be there. While looking at the propelior his eyes caught a gleaming of something five feet below on the bottom. There was his locket, where it had dropped, while pulling off weeds two weeks before. The ticket was all right, but the portrait of his best girl was ruined.

At the Police Court yesterday Fred. McCullough, the Hamilton Asylum attendant who pleaded guilty to assisting in the escape of Moir and Taggart from the local asylum, was released on $500 bail, to appear for sentence when called on.

TRIED TO DO THE CUSTOMS

New York, Sept. 15.—Eugene Higgins, the millionaire carpet manufacturer of Yonkers, who ran foul of the customs authorities on Monday, when he returned from Europe, arrived at a settlement yesterday, by which he was allowed to pay the foreign value of the articles seized, plus the duties. In all, it cost him about $3,000 to regain possession of the goods for which he had paid originally $1,960.

Dr. Adolph Menn of Chicago, a passenger on the same liner, who failed Monday to declare jewelry appraised at $1,000, paid an additional duty of $70 yesterday on wearing apparel he declared at $300, and on which he had already paid $18 at the pier, but the jewelry is still held by the Government.

WERE HONORED IN BRUSSELS

Brussels, Sept. 15.—Armand Hubert, Minister of Industry and Labor, gave a luncheon in honor of Hon. W. L. M. King and Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux. Among the invited guests were officials of Canada's exhibit at the exhibition. After luncheon Messrs. King and Lemieux were received by the Minister of Foreign Affairs at the Foreign Office.

Mr. King was received by the King of the Belgians at the royal palace.

FOREST FIRES DO GREAT DAMAGE

Vancouver, Sept. 15.—Forest fires are doing great damage in the Delta district between here and Blaine. Great Northern trains are badly stalled because of burned-out bridges at Ferndale and other places. It is reported that three children of the family of William Morrison of Aldermore, were burned while their father was away, but there is no confirmation of this.

TWO MEN KILLED

Step Out of Way of Freight and Are Struck by Express.

St. Catharines, Sept. 15.—Stepping aside to avoid a freight train coming from the west yesterday towards this city, J. W. Morwood of Welland and James Lloyd of Stratford were struck by express train No. 5, running at a high rate of speed in the opposite direction, death being instantaneous. The men had been walking along the Grand Trunk tracks from Jordan to Vineland, and were on a very high trestle midway between the two stations when the accident occurred. Their bodies were thrown with great force against the freight train and frightfully mangled.

There was little trouble in identifying the Stratford man from the contents of his pockets, but it was some time after the accident that the other body was identied as that of Mr. Morwood. He had been in business in Welland for about a quarter of a century, and only two weeks ago retired. He was on his way to visit his sister, Mrs. Fry, at Vineland, when death overtook him. At Welland he was one of the most prominent citizens, and was highly respected. H. R. Morwood of the law firm of German & Morwood, is a son.

Dr. J. M. Jory, coroner, decided to hold no inquest, but will go to the scene of the fatality to examine for himself into the facts. The trestle is the property of the railway company, and, while quite generally used, the men had no business there.

THERE'S MONEY IN AVIATION

Boston, Mass., Sept. 15.—At the close of the official prize competition in the Harvard-Boston aero meet last night the management gave out this statement of the awards, by which it is seen that the English aviator, Claude Grahame-White, wins more than double the aggregate sum won by all the other professional aviators combined. He wins the Boston Light prize, $10,000; bomb dropping prize, $5,000; speed, first prize, $3,000; altitude, second prize, $2,000; duration, second prize, $1,000; distance, second prize, $1,000; getaway, first prize, $100; total, $22,100.

Ralph Johnstone won $5,000; Walter Brookins, $4,250; Glenn Curtiss, $2,000, and Charles Willard, $50.

HERE'S WHERE CANADA SCORES

London, Sept. 15.—A member of the special Danish commission who lately visited Canada to study the system of packing, collecting and transporting meat and dairy produce, says the methods employed in the United States cannot compare for cleanliness and despatch with those in every day practice in Canada.

REVISING GREEK CONSTITUTION

Athens, Greece, Sept. 15.—King George yesterday opened the session of the specially-elected chamber, which is charged with a revision of the constitution.

His Majesty reminded the Deputies that their mandates were limited to a revision of the non-fundamental clauses of the constitution, and urged them to devote themselves to their difficult task with patriotism, with the object of ensuring a realization of the national ideals.

There is a great popular enthusiasm over the Government's new program.

ANTI-SUICIDE MIXTURE TO FOOL SUICIDES

Pittsburg, Sept. 15.—At the twelfth annual convention of the National Retail Druggists' Association, in session here yesterday, an anti-suicide resolution recommended the restriction of the sale of carbolic acid to a mixture of one-third each, acid, glycerine and water—"a preparation that may be taken by would-be suicides in large quantities without causing death"—while another, having for its object the suppression of the "dope fiend," demanded that proprietary medicines containing cocaine, chloral, morphine, codeine and other drugs be sold only upon prescription.

SUPT. LASHED GIRL PRISONER

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 15.—Women's clubs and a number of civic organizations of Atlanta are preparing vigorously to prosecute Supt. Fanning of the Fulton County Convict Camp, for the lashing of Anne Clare, a young white prisoner.

He admits that he administered 110 lashes with a heavy strap, because, he says, that was the only way he could silence the woman.

Met Death on the Tracks.

MAY SEE THE FIGHT PICTURES

St. John, N.B., Sept. 15.—It looks now as if the Johnson-Jeffries fight pictures would be shown in St. John after all. An outside concern is seeking a license, and the mayor intimates rather plainly that he will not interfere in the matter, although some time ago he refused to grant a license to local parties to show the pictures.

Flew 68 Miles In 56 Minutes.

Paris, Sept. 15.—Covering the sixty-eight miles in fifty-six minutes, Leon Morane, in his biplane, yesterday afternoon won the Bordeaux-Arcachon prize for the first aeroplane to fly between the two towns and return. This is the fastest time ever made in sustained flight by an aeroplane.

UNION LABEL

SUICIDE IS CATCHING

Suicide is catching and so are the measles. Beatrice Stoker, of Hamilton, at the romantic age of 16, jumped into the Bay one week ago and was drowned. Miss Stoker, who was employed in a departmental store in the ambitious City, was reprimanded. She took it to heart and walking home with her boy friend, she handed him a rose, left him and jumped into the Bay. A week later, this Tuesday, her chum ended her life in exactly the same way. Both bodies have been found. Now, it was a cross word that killed these two girls. Was the man who gave it a murderer? No, he was perhaps only forgetful. But the cross word is responsible for two new made graves, two funeral services and many tears, and much crepe. As kindness and smiles are catching, so are the measles and suicide.

COMMON SENSE

The wheels of justice move quickly at times in Toronto. On Tuesday in the Division Court Judge Morson disposed of seven cases in twenty-one minutes. —Daily Ontario, Belleville.

Magistrate Denison and Judge Morson are two men who save the country thousands of dollars yearly. To them law is no mysterious assortment of recent decisions and a bundle of big books bound up in red tape. They use what is often rare in the courts of the land—COMMON SENSE. Many the criminal who rests his case with the "Colonel," many the first offender who says "I'll leave it to your Worship," and they get justice and get it without worry, trouble of mind, anguish in the cells, forbodings of the future. Twenty, thirty, fifty, sixty cases disposed of in a morning—no learned judge or befuddled jury, no costs for the county or state. And so, in his capacity as judge, in the Division Courts, bailiffs who would rob th epoor; lawyers who would enlarge at so much per enlargement, for the client to pay, in all the intricate workings of debts incurred and debts not paid, the whys and wherefores. Judge Morson, a second Solomon, is on the job. Is it a note unpaid? That's simple. Is it a lady's dress that don't fit, that's a terrible tangling, tedious, tiresome tragedy. But it's soon settled in Toronto Division Court. Who's right, the tailor or the woman who refuses to pay?

THAT TRIP OF THE Q.O.R.

The "Sun" of Toronto, a paper devoted to peaceful pursuits, does not seem particularly happy over Col. Pellatt's taking the Queen's Own Regiment over to England. Neither is the Review. The Sun points out that Sir Pellatt made his money by high finance. However, we would like to remind that excellent Toronto paper that while it was high it was not high enough to land that titled gentleman in jail. Therefore it was in the eyes of the law, honestly secured. It was the people who made him —a most admirable gentleman and a broker—the present of it. We are a nation of peace, but think of future years when these beardless youths will have married. They can tell their wondering sons and daughters how they went to England and saw the King, how the crowd cheered, and what a big time they had. The people were real good to Broker Pellatt to give him money to take the Q.O.R. to England.

WARNING

A feature of the recent meeting of the Union of Canadian Municipalities was the warning uttered by Mr. W. D. Lighthall, of Montreal. Mr. Lighthall, who is a Liberal, denounced the Morgan interests, who, he says, have mapped out in New York all the great water-powers and the great resources generally of Canada for their own exploitation, and have been pulling the wires at Ottawa and the legislatures in order to get possession of great franchises. The most notorious case was the Long Sault Power Bill, which Mr. Pardee, the Liberal whip, stood sponsor for, and tried to force through the House in all night sittings, and for which Mr. Pugsley fought so hard.

The Montreal Witness, a Liberal newspaper, refers to the danger:

"The American exploiters," it says, "have too much at stake, however, not to attempt to revive this bill, and certain railway terminal bills referred to by Mr. Lighthall, and honest men need to keep wide awake if they would save themselves from being skinned by the exploiter at large, whether "foreign" or Canadian. The rumor is again persistent that the United States Steel Corporation has its eye upon the Dominion Steel Corporation, whose prosperity is now so assured, and will spare no effort to merge it or acquire it within a comparatively short time."

In this connection the Witness specially censures the part played by a Liberal newspaper as the agent of the Morgan trust, which is seeking to steal Canadian resources.

YOUNG LADIES ATTENTION

There are the chimes, with that good-hearted soul, Canon Davidson, working night and day for money for their buying. Then, too, is the Y.M.C.A. and a whole bunch of men striving to increase the membership, and now comes the girls, God bless 'em, the girls of the Y.W.C.A. Miss McCalla is the Y.W.C.A., lock, stock and barrel, and any one having enjoyed the inspiration of five minutes in her presence will know at once that that worthy institution is a success in Peterborough. Young ladies, we cannot promise you a young man if you join the Y.W.C.A., for it is an Adamless Eden, but if you wish to learn how to become less lobsided and lose that flat-footed waddle, join the Y.W.C.A. and become a member of the Physical Culture Class. Then, with your liver, lungs and lights working in accord with the Divine harmony, life will take on new meaning, dreary days less dreary, happy days more happy, and the whole world will become as one sweet song. Girls, get wise and join the Y.W.C.A. and improve your physique, improve your mind and your chances for success in life.

Looks go for a great deal in this world, and to become an ardent physical culturist in the Y.W.C.A. in Peterborough you are less liable to lumbago in later life, to pimples and pains in the here and now. Listen, read, mark, learn and inwardly digest. This is from the Toronto Star—

Cupid has played havoc with the plans of the Toronto Board of Education.

The trustees in May last chose Miss C. W. Wreyford, of Toronto, as physical culture supervisor for the Public schools. There were some score of applicants for it. After she landed it, Miss Wreyford went on a trip to England. There she met Dr. Bernstein, of London, Eng. She charmed him, and his wooing was so ardent and effective that Miss Wreyford's resignation was soon speeding across the Atlantic. They were married a week ago. Chief Inspector Hughes is rather sorry to lose Miss Wreyford from the staff before she began her duties, but he does not blame Dr. Bernstein. "She's a witch," says the Chief Inspector. "No wonder she's married."

For the sake of happiness now and for the sake of increasing your physical and intellectual charms, girls, join the Y.W.C.A. There are to be found friends, reading rooms, music and recreation and the happy hour.

NO. 606

Six hundred and five times Dr. Paul Ehrlich tried to find a serum that would cure that awful enemy of the race, an enemy that for centuries has loosened the teeth, loosened the hair, diseased the blood and made man a polluted mass instead of a home for noble deeds, and lofty thoughts. He discovered a cure for syphilis.

For years he worked in his laboratoy at Frankfort-on-the-Main, discouraged, defeated and baffled. But one day success crowned him. HE HAD FOUND THE COMPOUND. The name is unpronouncable but the cure is sure. Men and women, young man, young woman, we are too easily discouraged. We try once. We fail. We cease trying. We try perhaps two, three or four times and fail. We sit down disconsolate. But here was a man who tried 605 times before he succeeded.

"You in your corner, I in mine," Let us keep on trying, perhaps it's failure to-day, perhaps it was failure yesterday, perhaps it was failure the day before, what odds. We must not be beaten, we must conquor. Perhaps we had unhappiness in the home. We have resolved to-day, would be pleasant as we raised the curtain. But we lower it on a doleful muddle, we lost our temper, we got drunk. We told a few business lies, we were unfaithful or untrue.

Don't think of Bruce and the spider, think of the man who tried 605 times before success came.

All the past things are past and over,
The tasks are done and the tears are shed,
Yesterday's errors let yesterday cover;
Yesterday's wounds which smarted and bled
Are healed with the healing which night was shed.

Every day is a fresh beginning;
Listen, my soul, to the glad refrain,
And spite of old sorrow and older sinning,
And puzzles forecast and possible pain,
Take heart with the day and begin again;

STOP THIEF

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 14.—The Countess of Antrim, who passed through here a few days ago on her way to the coast, was robbed of jewellry valued at many thousands of dollars, and priceless from the fact that some of them were family heirlooms, while at the Royal Alexandra on Saturday night.

We are sorry that the Countess of Antrim was robbed of many thousand of dollars' worth of jewels and heirlooms priceless in value. But we will admit that we would feel far worse if we knew that the home of any one of the honest mechanics of Peterborough was robbed and his wages stolen from his trousers pocket. Its these thousands of dollars in jewels, these tremendous tracts of land, these castles for the Lords and Ladies, Counts, and Countesses, the unemployed wealth carefully hoarded, that is one of the curses of the day. Yet having no sympathy with thieves, we hope that they will be captured, that the judge will take a fair view of the case and that the noble countess will go on her way rejoicing.

But now, what in the world did she want to travel loaded with priceless heirlooms for?

MONEY

The public executioner of Hungary has written a protest to the authorities complaining against the number of reprieves that have been granted criminals convicted of a capital offence. As he receives a per capita fee for his services he naturally favors a rigid enforcement of the law. —Vancouver Province.

So, you see, that even hangmen are like the rest of us when it comes to a personal cash basis. This official ender of man's career wants to kill men, not so much for the sake of ridding his nation of murderers, but because of the cash that it puts in his pocket. Then we have on the other hand instances of moral reformers and evangelists, who take up large collections, who have not so much an interest in the upbuilding of the race as the securing of the collection. And how of the labor leaders, are they all on the level? Cut their salaries to the same size as the men they are working for, and the same size as they had before they got the job, would they be as profoundly eloquent? We refuse to answer.

Ah, money, the beggers beg for you, the murderer murders for you, the writer writes for you, the preacher preaches for you, the teacher teaches for you, the world bows down to you, Are you God? Again we refuse to

The Round-Up

A Romance of Arizona

Novelized From Edmund Day's Melodrama

By JOHN MURRAY and MILLS MILLER

With assumed carelessness McKee answered: "I'm a-gettin'. Well, gents, I hope you all 'll enjoy this here pink tea. Say, Bud, put a piece uv weddin' cake in yer pocket fer me. I wants to dream on it."

"Who brought him here?" asked Jack, facing his guests.

"I did," answered Bud defiantly.

"You might have known better," was Jack's only comment.

"I'm not saying who's to come and go. This isn't any of my wedding."

Polly stopped further comment by laying her hand over his mouth and slipping into the seat beside him.

"Well, let it go at that," said Jack, closing the incident.

He rejoined Echo as he spoke. The guests reseated themselves. Mrs. Allen laid her hand on Jack's shoulder and said, "Just the same, it ain't right an' proper for you to be together before the ceremony without a chaperonie."

"Nothin' that's right nice is ever right proper," laughed Slim.

"Well, it ain't the way folks does back east," replied Mrs. Allen tartly, glaring at the sheriff.

"Blast the east!" growled Allen. "We does things in our own way out here."

With a mischievous smile, Slim glanced at his comrades and then solemnly observed, "Still, I hear they does make the two contractin' parties sit off alone by themselves"—

"What for?" asked Jack.

"Why, to give them the last bit of quiet enjoyment they're goin' to have for the rest of their lives," chuckled Slim.

The cowboys laughed hilariously at the sally, but Mrs. Allen, throwing her arms about Echo's neck, burst into tears, crying, "My little girl!"

"What's the use of openin' up the sluices now, Josephine?"

"Let her alone, Jim," drawled Slim. "Her feelin's is harrowed some, an' irrigation is what they needs most."

The outburst of tears was incomprehensible to the bridegroom. Already irritated by the McKee incident, he took affront at the display of sentiment. He cried, "I don't want any crying at my wedding!"

"It's half my wedding," pouted Echo tearfully.

"Ain't I losin' my daughter?" sobbed Mrs. Allen.

"Ain't you getting my mother's son?" snapped Jack.

The men howled with glee at the rude badinage, which only called forth a fresh burst of weeping on the part of Mrs. Allen, in which the girls began to show symptoms of joining.

Polly sought to soothe the trouble by pushing Jack playfully to one side and Forcing him to open his fingers and drop his gun.

saying: "Oh, stop it all! Look here, Echo Allen; you know your hair ain't fixed yet."

"An' the minister due here at any minute," added Mrs. Allen.

"Come along; we will take charge of you now," ordered Polly. The girls gathered in a group about the bride, bustling and chatting, telling her all men were brutes at times and, looking at the fat sheriff, who blushed to the roots of his hair at the charge, that Slim Hoover was the worst of the lot. Mrs. Allen pushed them away and again fell weeping on Echo's shoulder. "Hold on now. They ain't a soul goin' to no nothin' for her except her mother," she whimpered.

"There she goes again," said Jack in disgust.

"He's goin' to take my child away from me," wailed the mother.

Tears were streaming down Echo's cheek. "Don't cry, mother," she wept.

"No, no, don't cry," echoed the girls.

"It's all for the best," began Polly.

"It's all for the best; it's all for the best," chorused the group.

"Well, I'll be"— gasped Jack.

"Jack Payson, you just ought to be ashamed of yourself," said Polly, stamping her foot. "You nasty, mean old thing!" she threw in for good measure.

Mrs. Allen led Echo from the room. The girls followed, crying, "You nasty, mean old thing!" to the unfortunate bridegroom.

The cowboys enjoyed the scene immensely. It was a bit of human comedy totally unexpected. First they imitated the weeping women and then laughed uproariously at Jack.

"Did you ever see such darned carryings on?" said the bridegroom in disgust. "What have I done?"

"Shucks! All mothers is just like that," remarked Allen sympathetically. "They fuss if their girls marry, an' they fuss if they don't. Why, my ma carried on somethin' scandalous when Josephine roped me."

All of the men chuckled except Jack.

"I'm appointed a committee," continued the old rancher, "to sit up with you till the fatal moment."

"I'm game," responded Jack grimly. "I know what's coming, but I won't squeal."

"You'll git all that's a-comin' to you," grinned Allen.

Slim had maneuvered until he reached the door, blocking Jack's way. As the bridegroom started to leave the room he took his hand and with an assumption of deep dejection and sorrow bade him "Goodby."

"Oh, dry up!" laughed Jack, pushing the sheriff aside. Halting, he requested, "One thing I want to understand right now—if you're going to fling any old boots after me remove the spurs."

"This here's a sure enough event, an' I'm goin' to tap the barrel an' throw away the bung. Wow!" shouted Sagebrush.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE Rev. Samuel Price was the representative of the Christian army in Pinal county, Ariz., at the time of our story. He was long and lank, narrow in the chest, with sloping shoulders. Even life on the plains could not eradicate the scholarly droop. His trousers were black, and they bagged at the knees. When riding his trousers would work up about his calves, showing a wide expanse of white socks. For comfort he wore an alpaca coat, which hung loosely about him, and for the dignity of his profession the only boiled shirt in the county, with a frayed collar and white string tie.

The Rev. Samuel Price.

The Rev. Mr. Price was liked by the settlers. He never interfered with what they considered their relaxations, and he had the saving grace of humor.

The guests were performing a scalp dance about the table when he entered the room. For a tomtom Parenthesis was beating a bucket with a gourd and emitting strange cries with each thump. The noise and shouts confused the minister. As he was blundering among the dancers they fell upon him with warwhoops, slapping him on the back and crushing his straw hat over his ears.

Slim was the first to recognize the minister. He dashed into the group and, swinging several aside, cried to the others to desist.

"Pardon me, but do I intrude upon a scalp dance?" smilingly asked the parson.

"You sure have, Mr. Price," laughed Slim. "We hain't got to the scalpin' part yet, but we're fixin' to dance off Payson's scalp tonight."

Peering at him with nearsighted eyes, Mr. Price extended his hand, saying, "Ah, Mr. Hoover, our sheriff, is it not?"

Slim wrung the parson's hand until the preacher winced. Hiding his discomfort, he slowly straightened out his fingers with a painful grin. Slim had not noticed that he had hurt the parson by the heartiness of his greeting. With a gesture he lined up the cowboys for introduction.

"Yes, sir, the boys call me Slim because I ain't." Pointing to the first one in the group, he exclaimed, "This is Parenthesis."

Mr. Price looked at the awkwardly bowing cowboy in amazement. The name was a puzzle to him. He could not grasp the application. "The editor of the Kicker," explained Slim, "called him that because of his legs bein' built that way." Mr. Price was forced to smile in spite of his efforts to be polite. The editor had grasped the most striking feature of the puncher's physical characteristics for a label.

Parenthesis beamed on the minister. "I was born on horseback," he replied.

"That fellow there with a front tooth is Show Low," began Slim, speaking like a lecturer in a freak show. "The one without a front tooth is Fresno, a California product. This here chap with the water dob hair is Sagebrush Charley. It makes him sore when you call him plain Charles."

"Charley bein' a Chink name," supplemented its owner.

Silence fell over the group, for they did not know what was the proper thing to do next. A minister was to be respected and not to be made one of them. He must take the lead in the conversation. Mr. Price was at a loss to begin. He had not recovered fully from the roughness of his welcome, so Slim took the lead again.

"I heard you preach once up to Flow-

OWES HER LIFE TO

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Vienna, W. Va.—"I feel that I owe the last ten years of my life to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Eleven years ago I was a walking shadow. I had been under the doctor's care but got no relief. My husband persuaded me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it worked like a charm. It relieved all my pains and misery. I advise all suffering women to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MRS. EMMA WHEATON, Vienna, W. Va.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases of any similar medicine in the country, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every such suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

ence," he announced, to the profound astonishment of his hearers.

"Indeed," politely responded Mr. Price, feeling the futility of making any further observation. He feared to fall into some trap. The answers made by the boys did not seem to fit particularly well with what he expected and was accustomed to. The parson could not make out whether the boys were joking with him or whether their replies were unconscious humor on their part.

"Yep; I lost an election bet an' had to go to church," answered Slim in all seriousness.

The cowboys laughed, and Mr. Price lamely replied, "Oh, yes, I see."

"It was a good show," continued Slim, doing his best to appear at ease. The frantic corrections of his companions only made him flounder about the more. "Excuse me," he apologized. "I mean that I enjoyed it."

"Do you recall the subject of my discourse," inquired Mr. Price, coming to his assistance.

"Your what course?" asked Slim.

"My sermon?" answered the parson.

"Well, I should say yes," replied the sheriff, greatly relieved to think that he was once more out of deep water. "It was about some Shorthorn that jumped the home corral to maverick around loose in the alfalfa with a bunch of wild ones."

The explanation was too much for Mr. Price. Great student of the Bible that he had been, here was one lesson which he had not studied. As told by Slim, he could not recall any text or series of texts from which he might have drawn similes fitted for his cowboy congregation, when he had one. "Really, I"— he began.

Slim, however, was not to be interrupted. If he stopped he never could begin again, he felt. Waving to the preacher to be silent, he continued his description, "When his wad was gone the bunch threw him down, an' he had to hike for the sagebrush an' feed with the hogs on husks an' sech like winter fodder."

The minister caught the word "husks." Slim was repeating his own version of the parable of the prodigal son.

"Husks? Oh, the prodigal son!" smiled Price.

"That's him," Slim sighed, with relief. "This here feed not bein' up to grade, Prod he 'lows he'd pull his freight back home, square himself with the old man an' start a new deal"—

Sagebrush was deeply interested in the story. Its charm had attracted him, as it had scholars and outcasts alike since first told 2,000 years ago on the plains of old Judea.

"Did he stand for it?" he interrupted.

"He sure did," eloquently replied Slim, who was surprised and delighted with the great impression he was making with his experience at church. "Oh, he was a game old buck, he was. Why, the minute he sighted that there prodigious son a-limpin' across the mesa he run right out an' fell on his neck"—

"An' broke it," cried Fresno, slapping Sagebrush with his hat in his delight at getting at the climax of the story before Slim reached it.

The narrator cast a glance of supreme disgust at the laughing puncher. "No," he shouted; "he hugged him. Then he called in the neighbors, barbecued a yearlin' calf an' give a barn dance, with fireworks in the evenin'."

"That's all right in books," observed Sagebrush, "but if I'd made a break like that when I was a kid my old man would 'a' fell on my neck for fair."

"That was a good story, parson. It's straight, ain't it?" asked Slim as a wave of doubt swept over him.

"It's gospel truth," answered the minister. "Do you know the moral of the story?"

"Sure," replied Slim. With a confidence born of deep self assurance, Slim launched the answer, "Don't be a fatted calf."

At first his hearers did not grasp the full force of the misapplication of the parable. Mr. Price could not refrain from laughing. The others joined with him when the humor of the reply dawned upon them. Pointing scornfully at the fat sheriff, they shouted gleefully, while Slim blushed through his tan.

"Now, if you'll kindly show me where"— began Mr. Price.

"Sure. All the liquor's in the kitchen," said Sagebrush, expanding with hospitality.

Slim pushed Sagebrush back into his chair, and Parenthesis tapped the minister on the shoulder to distract his attention.

"Thanks. I meant to ask for a place to change my clothes."

"Sure you mustn't mind Sagebrush there," apologized Parenthesis. "He's allus makin' breaks. Let me tote your war bag. Walk this way."

"Good day, gentlemen," smiled Mr. Price. "When you are up my way I trust you will honor my church with your presence"—adding after a pause—"without waiting to lose an election bet."

To be continued.

CURTAIN RISES ON THE PETERBOROUGH FALL SHOW

EVERBODY BUSY AT THE FAIR

Opening Day of Peterborough's Fall Exhibition Sees Lots of Stir and Activity--Grounds Dotted With Exhibitors and Concession Mens' Tents -- Great Prospects for the Fair to Prove the One Biggest Success.

The curtain is up and the big show is on.

The Peterborough Fair, which has been heralded by picture posters and descriptive advance notices, is here at last—in all its glory? Well, hardly in all its glory, for the Fair proper doesn't really begin until to-morrow.

EVERYBODY BUSY.

But to-day was a hustling, bustling day on the show grounds, nevertheless. For there is a great deal of preliminary detail to look after at at even an ordinary exhibition, and when it comes to the annual fall fair in the big county seat of the expansive county of Peterborough there is naturally more movement and seeming confusion than there would be at an ordinary exhibition.

EXCELLENT ARRANGEMENTS.

But there is good order in the seeming chaos, and everything is being carried on systematically and with dispatch. The directors of the Peterborough Fair, with their well known business foresight and strict attention to detail, have all arrangements well in hand—in fact had them well in hand theoretically several weeks ago—and everything in connection with the three days' big fair promises to move along with the regularity and accuracy of a big clock—not the post-office clock.

"THE EARLY BIRD," ETC.

It was bright and early this morning that the big gates swung open and the grounds, which have for a long time been as quiet and undisturbed as a forsaken cemetery, were in a short time transformed into a place of activity and brightness.

The one hammer that never knocks—the industrial hammer—was soon working busily and the signs and banners of local and nearby merchants were conspicuously nailed in various points of vantage. An occasional early exhibitor came with the exhibit that was going to take the first prize in its class, and an occasional wide-awake grandpa who has not missed the fair for years, was on the spot early talking of former successes, and making predictions that the fair would be the biggest and best ever, although the opinion was not given as an absolute prediction, as the fair in 18— "was certainly a hard one to beat."

A PIONEER BOOSTER.

Talking about the pioneer supporters of the exhibition the Review had a conversation of an interesting character with an old resident of Otonabee, who said he had attended the fair every year since its inception. And in spite of this, he didn't lay claim to the fact that the fair "ain't what it used to be," like some old-timers are wont to do, regardless of anything, but admitted that it was coming on in splendid fashion, and said all that was needed now to make it a corncracker was new "buildins."

"Them buildin's," he remarked, "ain't fit to house a litter of young pigs."

He talked on rather freely, not being aware that he was in conversation with a reporter, and the latter was afraid to ask the interesting old gentleman his name for fear that he might smell a rat and censor the conversation.

THE MANY FEATURES.

And then there were the poultry and main buildings, the long string of special commercial exhibitors, the miniature railway, which promises, by the way, to be as heavily patronized as an airship line to the lift lock in 1999. The fascinating merry-go-round, which bears the dignified label of "steam runabout" or something to that effect, the stands of the men who sell the everlasting white taffy and quench the thirst with everything from water lemonade to "Star" beer, the fellow with the cane rack and the man with "three shots for five" at the nigger, who dodges the baseball with the same skill that his larger Johnson model in life dodges the pokes of the aspirants for the championship, and lastly, but not "leastly," the always popular midway, which looks pretty good from the outside this year, and which should be able to shovel generous quantities of fair-goers' shekels to its already generously loaded coffers.

PASSED MUSTER.

Included in the preliminary work, which has been going on at the fair grounds, workmen have been engaged in making alterations and repairs to the grandstand. The work has been carefully carried out, and this morning President Leary had City Engineer Hay make an inspection of the grandstand. His report was that the structure was safe and capable of meeting the demands of the occasion.

HOT MEALS.

The dinner table is always a well-patronized place at any function, and this year the meals should be of a high standard, as the ladies of All Saints' have charge of the dining tent. Hot meals will be served for twenty-five cents.

BOY SCOUTS.

Peterborough's Boy Scouts, thirty strong, will march to the grounds to-morrow afternoon about 1.30, headed by the 57th Regimental Band.

THAT SETTLES IT.

The track was treated this morning to one hundred gallons of odorless oil, and the dust nuisance is a thing of the past. An exceptionally large and fast field of horses, many from outside points, are entered for the various events.

Between the acts there will be a grand display of fireworks, the finest pyrotechnical display ever seen in Peterborough, under the direction of Prof. Hand, which promises an hour and a half of solid bombardment of the skies and a most brilliant effect.

The 57th Regimental Band will give one of their finest programmes during the evening performance.

Ample car service will be available both for day and evening from all parts of the grounds direct to the grounds.

HAD A COPY OF THE ORIGINAL ORDER OF M.D.

Another blacklister was assessed the usual fine of $10 at the police court this morning for a violation.

He claimed to have an order from a doctor, but it turned out to be only a copy of the original, dated in the month of July.

It was at his own request that his name was added to the prohibited list, and he asked that his name be taken off.

The court did not take any action and ordered that the fine be paid in ten days.

BOYS SECRETARY OF THE Y.M.C.A. HAS RESIGNED

At the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A. the resignation of Mr. B. W. Sharpe, Boys Secretary was received. Mr. Sharpe has been with the local Association only a few months, but in that time he has made a host of friends among the boys and young men. As Mr. Sharpe wished that his resignation should take effect on the first of October there was only one course open and his resignation was accepted.

The reports from the several departments were very encouraging and the Directors were delighted to learn that the younger men are doing their part of the Association's work with vigor. The Secretary's report gave evidence of something doing wherever the young men were given responsibility. This is very evident in connection with the preparations for the Membership Campaign which will be held during the last ten days of this month. There will be a members' banquet next Tuesday evening when an address will be delivered by Mr. George (Warturburton, the General Secretary of the Association, and at that banquet the inspiration will be given for the Campaign.

The Directors again faced the financial problem and every man promised to do his part in putting the Association on a good financial footing. There is plenty of work for the Directors along this line and they feel their responsibility very keenly.

The report of the Penman Games was handed in by the Chairman of the Physical Work Committee and was of the most encouraging nature.

The Association now faces a season of great opportunity and the Directors feel that they are in a better position this year than ever before in the history of the work to handle a big and important work.

BELMONT DANCE

That the weekly dances held under the auspices of the Belmont Club continue to be highly popular functions was again evidenced last evening by the enthusiasm and attendance at the dance that was held at the Club's commodious club house.

A feature which added much to the enjoyment of the occasion and which was greatly appreciated, was the sprightly and excellent music furnished by the clever trio of musicians who are engaged at the Crystal. This orchestra is comprised of finished players who excelled themselves last evening. They are Messrs. J. Smith, pianist; Herman Bernstein, violinist; Louis A. Grey, cornet; and Geo. Chambers, drum.

The last dance of the season will be given next week.

THE SEASON OPENS TO-DAY

The duck shooting season opened to-day. A couple of parties of local sportsmen left to-day, one party going in a northerly direction. The ducks are very plentiful along the Otonabee river, and in the vicinity of Rice Lake. Between the two first bridges on the Otonabee Mr. W. E. Talbot reports them to be very numerous.

ENGINEER KILLED AT MONTREAL

David B. Murphy Well Known in Peterboro, Killed in Auto Accident

Many friends in Petrborough will be shocked to hear of the death of Mr. David B. Murphy as the result of an accident, on Tuesday afternoon, at Montreal. He was well known in Peterborough having been in charge of the steel work in the Liftlock, and afterwards in charge of the erection of the liftlock at Kirkfield. His death is more regretted as he was acknowledged to be one of the brightest and most efficient of the engineers in Canada.

Mr. Murphy left his office at the close of work Tuesday afternoon and started for his home at 420 Prince Edward avenue, Westmount, on his motor cycle, as was his usual custom. Driving into the city in front of Mr. Murhy, was an automobile travelling at a moderate rate of speed Wishing to get ahead of the car in front of him according to the story of a witness of the accident, Mr. Murphy swerved to the left with the intention of passing it on the left side. Another automobile coming towards Lachine just reached the clear half of the road as Mr. Murphy crossed from behind the car which he had been following.

There was a crash and Mr. Murphy's machine was torn from under him and he was sent hurling into the air, falling on his head in the centre of the roadway. When picekd up he was unconscious and remained in that condition until death came this morning, ending his suffering.

At the General Hospital, from which an ambulance was summoned, a superficial examination of Mr. Murphy's injuries revealed that besides several cuts and bruises he had also sustained a broken jaw and a fracture of the skull.

The chauffeur of the car is known and will be called as a witness at the inquest, whihc is to be held to-morrow morning.

Mr. Murphy, who was a mechanical engineer of no mean ability, was thirty-nine years of age. A McGill graduate and a B.A.Sc. of the class of '93, he had gaind the greater part of his practical experience at the Dominion Bridge Works. Besides a wife and young family, the eldest of which is a son, Allen aged thirteen, and three little girls, whose ages range from twelve months to eleven years, deceased, who was universally liked and respected by a large number of friends in the city, and whose demise will be deeply mourned, leaves a widowed mother, Mrs. D. A. Murphy who lives at 6 Lincoln avenue, two brothers, Mr. A. M. Murphy, who is manager in the firm of John Gurd & Co., mineral water manufacturers; Edward, manager of the East End Abattoir; and three sisters, Mrs. W. M. Reid, Miss H. Murphy, and Miss Ethel Murphy, all of whom reside in the city.

A LECTURER FROM INDIA

Rev. Dr. Fraser Cameron, a missionary from Central India, who is the guest of Mr. D. W. Dumble for a few days, lectured last evening in Knox church on his work in that country.

Dr. Fraser is a man in the meridian of life. He said that he had the pleasure of knowing all of the ministers in the city. He had been in India for thirty-four years. At that time the population of the district in which he lived was 10,000,000. The work of evangelization of the immense territories under British rule in India had for many years been hampered by the scarcity of missionaries. For eight years only two or three missionaries were stationed there, and as the years passed there was little increase. Ultimately five stations were established in charge of missionaries. One of the men in charge died, a second broke down his health and returned home, where he died, and third went home on furlough, so that for some years, Dr. Cameron and another man carried on the whole work.

Finding they were inadequate for the work, they abandoned part of the district, leaving it for the missionaries of other denominations.

Mr. Fraser illustrated, by means of a colored may of India, the progress of the work there. He held the attention of the audience throughout the whole lecture, and is an entertaining and instructive speaker.

Rev. H. J. Keith presided.

MADE A FORTUNE IN ALBERTA LAND

An interesting story of the great increase in the price of land in Western Canada was unfolded the other day by a young man from Alberta on a short visit to Toronto. Some eight years ago this young fellow was an office hand. He was then about twenty-one years of age, and an ordinary bright up-to-date young man. Realizing the profits accruing from speculation in Western land, he left the firm with which he was connected four years ago, and put what money he had into land in an Alberta town.

With great difficulty he had carried his holdings during the panic of 1907, owing to the trouble he had in collecting from clients who were only holders of small tracts, while he was compelled to meet his payments on larger tracts of land. However, he weathered the storms of three years ago, and now considered that he had made something over $1,000,000. This can be better understood when an idea is given of the rapid increase in the price of land in the Western cities. The land on which the Bank of Montreal are erecting their building in the city of Winnipeg was turned down by them eighteen months ago as prohibitive in price. Now they have bought it, and paid an increase of $50,000 for delaying.

The I. C. R. management will spend $250,000 to replace buildings burned at Campbellton, N. B.

TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL

The Trades and Labor Council met last night and transacted considerable important business. Some of the business taken up was the prospects of putting a man in the field at the next municipal election to make a run for alderman. This Council has already had three of its members elected to the position of alderman, and their chances for another one never looked brighter than at the present. The Trades and Labor Council of Peterborough is now in a flourishing condition and its number is being rapidly added to.

Important to Ladies

It is not often an opportunity occurs at your door to see the latest Parisian and New York styles in Hair Goods, yet such is the case, as Prof. Dorenwend of Toronto is visiting this town, and invites your inspection of these goods at his private apartments reserved at the Hotel.

These Hair Goods styles, when properly adjusted protect and ornament the head, soften and beautify the expression of the face and consequently tone up an aged appearance. Be sure and see them at the Oriental Hotel on Friday, Sept. 23rd.

SPORTING NEWS

LAST AND BEST BALL GAME OF THE SEASON

The fans are assured of seeing by long odds the best game here Saturday, at Riverside Park. when the champion T. A. S. team cross bats with the fast fielding and heavy hitting Kingston Ponies. This team has won eighty per cent of its games this season and is the fastest amateur team in Eastern Ontario, only last Saturday defeating the fastest team in the Ottawa City League right on their own grounds. Their battery, Sanders and Brown have been working together now for two years and will make a grand effort to close the season of 1910 with a win over our Boys. The T. A. S. with Wylder catching and Quinlan and Rahmel—an Ohio State Leaguer doing the twirling, Connie Murphy at short, and the balance of the team the best possible, will certainly take a lot of beating before they'll be satisfied with the small end of the score. The locals have gone to considerable expense in bringing this team here, but trust to the patronage of the public, who will indeed get their money's worth on Saturday. The Kingston boys are running an excursion here for the game promising to bring at least two hundred supporters to root for their team. Dan. McCabe has consented to act as umpire, which is an assurance that the teams will have to play ball every minute. The usual admission will be charged, viz., twenty-five cents for gents, and fifteen for ladies. The full line-up of both teams will appear in to-morrow's paper.

SEMI-FINALS WON BY LANDRY

The tennis enthusiasts who gathered at the Y.M.C.A. courts to watch the semi-finals for the Singles championship of the city between Sandy Hall and Landry, witnessed one of the keenest competitions the game has seen in a long while.

The end of the contest saw Landry a winner by a slight majority, and he now plays Meyers of the Armouries Club. for the championship.

Mr. R. J. Devey, president of St. John's Tennis Club, was the referee of the contest last night. Landry won the first two sets by the score of 8—6 and 6—4, and Hall regained the lost ground by taking the next two, 6—4 and 9—7. Amidst great excitement, the final set opened with Hall taking the honors in the initial game. Landry tied up the play by annexing the second and lead 2—1 in the third. Hall equalized in the fourth. It was great tennis and the spectators were kept busy applauding the stellar plays of the two men. The score stood. two sets all, two games all, 30 all.

The final set proved to be the sticker for Hall, and the time to win for his opponent, the figures standing 6—2 in favor of Landry.

HOCKEY

A prominent Renfrew man blew in Ottawa the other day and made the interesting statement the Creamery town would be in the hockey game with a team this winter that would eclipse that of last. "In fact the best team that money can purchase," to use his own words.

There was no doubt the team that wound up the season with Renfrew last year was some aggregation. It is stated this season Renfrew will have at least five of the men who wore the colors last, but that the famous Lester Patrick will be missing. Lester, so the story goes, was the weak man during the middle stages of the season, but could not be dropped because he was both captain and drawing the biggest salary on the team. Frank Patrick, however, will be sought after as the Renfrew management look upon him as the best man they had. Fred Taylor will also be with the team again. M. J. O'Brien, who did so much for hockey in the Creamery town, is still residing there contrary to reports.

SPORT IN ENGLAND.

A Pheasant Run Is Not a Branch of the Poultry Business.

"A Plain American In England," by Charles T. Whitefield, is a highly amusing diatribe on the gentle art of British entertainment. It appears in the American Magazine, and in the course of some descriptions of English customs the author relates the following incident, which happened at a pheasant run:

"A friend for whom I have a great admiration took me to see a pheasant run. The place looked just like a big chicken yard such as we have at home. There were hundreds of the birds feeding on scraps and grain thrown to them by the keeper. I had seen strings of these birds hanging up in the markets for sale at low prices, had bought their eggs in the swell restaurants at high prices, and I naturally supposed that this trade was conducted like any other branch of the poultry business. When you have been in England a short time you realize that you must approach the subject of trade or business with some delicacy, but I longed to know the modus operandi of poultry packing among the swells. I wondered if they could teach our Chicago stockyards anything. So I asked the keeper in my broadest English:

" 'How do you collect and ship these birds?'

" 'Collect 'em, sir?'

" 'Yes,' I said, 'how do you kill them and get them to market?'

" 'We don't kill 'em. We send in beaters and shoot 'em. It's great sport, sir!'

"That seemed to me a disgusting proposition—to beat a flock of tame, harmless pets to death and shoot them besides—and I remonstrate:

" 'Why don't you simply wring their necks with a quick twist of the wrist, insuring a rapid and painless death, and then'—

"But my friend grasped me violently by the arm and drew men abruptly away. I felt badly about it, because this good and valuable host said it would be at least twenty years before he could look that gamekeeper in the face with tranquillity."

TOO GOOD A SHAVE.

It Lulled Budd to Sleep While the Price of Stocks Tumbled.

One of the anecdotes in Joseph L. King's "History of the San Francisco Stock Exchange Board" is as follows:

While stocks were quite low during a spell in 1873 a discovery of ore was made in Ophir, the stock advancing in price. It was the policy of those in control of a Comstock mine to keep secret any improvement until they could secure for themselves a good quantity of the stock.

Budd heard of this Ophir discovery and bought some stock, and as the price advanced from $16 to $85 the profits on his purchases at low figures enabled him to buy more stocks. Being quite a plunger, he purchased in all 2,500 shares. As the stock still advanced to higher figures he sold about 1,500 shares, leaving him a balance of 1,000 shares when the stock reached $82, which would have given him quite a large profit if all were sold at that figure.

During the recess that day he determined to sell the remainder, which would give him quite a profit. The afternoon session was devoted to the calling of outside stocks, occupying half an hour, after which the members would call up, through the chairman, any of the Comstock shares. Budd, thinking he had time sufficient during that first half hour to get shaved, sat down in a barber's chair and, being quite flush, gave the barber $5, directing him to give him a good shave. It turned out to be too good a shave, as Budd went to sleep, and the barber, being well paid, devoted quite a time in making his customer appear respectable. Budd woke up, looked at his watch and made a rush for the board. He ascertained that Ophir had been called and had broken so badly that when his stock was sold he only obtained $40 a share for it.

He always claimed that that shave cost him just $40,000.

Getting Into a Life Buoy.

The average person in danger of drowning usually attempts to lift a life buoy over his head, with the result that he is immediately plunged deeper into the water. A good swimmer can do this with a sudden upward jerk, but with the nonswimmer it is almost an impossible feat. What he should do when he has seized the buoy is to place both hands, palms downward, on the buoy on the part nearest the body, pressing it downward and slightly away, when the farther part of the buoy will rise out of the water and actually fall over the head. The arms can then be put through easily, "and there you are."

Just the Same.

"Try one of these light biscuits," the bride suggested. "I thought they might be a welcome change from bread."

"Fine!" exclaimed the young husband. "Just like those we got at the bakery when I was living at home."

"That's where I got them," she said.—Buffalo Express.

A Softened Expression.

"Father," said the small boy, "what is a 'euphemism?' "

"It is something, my son, that enables a man to say he is a free lance instead of admitting that he is out of a job."—Washington Star.

Dandruff Causes Falling Hair and Baldness

Baldness and Itching Scalp are Caused by Microbes.

There is no doubt about it. Doctor Sabourand proved it when he infected a guinea pig with dandruff germs and all its hair disappeared in a short time. The entire medical world has accepted Dr. Sabouard's discovery as final. Ask any worthy physician.

Paris leads the world in knowledge of diseases of the hair and remedies for the same.

And Parisian Sage which can now be obtained at leading druggists all over Canada is the one great remedy that kills the dandruff germs.

And that is why Wm. Madill says to every reader of the Review if Parisian Sage does not banish dandruff, stop falling hair or itching of the scalp in two weeks he will refund the purchaserpic e.

Dandruff is the forerunner of baldness. Take care of your hair while you have hair to take care of. Kill the dandruff germs now before the dandruff germs kill your hair.

Use Parisian Sage, the guaranteed dandruff cure and hair dressing.

It is used extensively by ladies of refinement because it keeps the scalp absolutely clean and gives a bewitching lustre to the hair. Price 50 cents at W. Madill's and leading druggists everywhere. Girl with Auburn hair on every package. Made in Canada by Giroux Mfg. Company, Fort Eric, Ont. Mail orders filled, all charges prepaid.

"I was told of your great remedy, Parisian Sage, that it would grow hair on bal heads so I got a bottle and tried it, and it is fine. I am a young man and only 25, and was completely bald on the top of my head, and now I have hair one inch long, with the use of only one bottle. I shall certainly keep on using it until I have a good head of hair, which I have no doubt it will bring."—Oscar Armstrong, engineer, Belleville Horseshoe and Rolling Mill Co., Belleville, Ont., Aug. 21, 1909.

The Real Bargains Go to Those Who Read the Ads

Ninety-nine per cent. of the real bargains in the stores go to those who read the store advertisements.

The other one per cent. go to those who casually drop on the bargains in the rush of shopping.

If you can't afford to be one of the "one-chance-in a hundred" people, read the store ads. and learn of the bargains straightway.

And as 99 per cent. of the bargain getters are ad. readers, so 99 per cent. of the real bargain givers are advertisers. When you read all the advertised bargains, you know about all the bargains in town that are really worth while.

CONTRACT WORK ON NEW LIBRARY ABOUT COMPLETED

Peterborough's new public library, opposite Central Park, is receiving the finishing touches, so far as the contrasts favorably with its neighbors, the Armouries and the Collegiate Institute. The glance of the passerby turns to a look of inspection, and he pictures to himself, just how that building will show up, when at last the mechanic and artisan will have left and the formal opening only remains.

Rutherford Bros. have one a good job, both on the exterior an interior. Their contract called for all work, with the exception of the plumbing, heating and lighting. These departments await the final touch of the plumber and electrician.

There are three entrances, the main one on George street, On McDonnel street and towards the rear, is a side entrance. Again on the south side, and near the front, is another. All three lead to the library proper, the basement or third floor. The woodwork of the interior, is in birch, with an imitation mahogany finish. The floors are of 7—8, hardwood, the stairs, of maple, and for most of the front entrance, quartered oak has been used. The finishings on the doors are of brass, the knobs being solid brass.

Besides the large space on the second floor, there are five small rooms, and two fireplaces. From the six iron pillars on the large space, will be made smaller spaces, by railings, in birch.

On the third floor, three small rooms on the north and a long room on the south, lead from a hall. On the east end, is a lecture room, with a stage and dressing room. Each floor is particularly well lighted.

It is not likely that the opening will take place before after the first of next year.

Mr. MacKay spoke on Technical Education and its objects. Hon. J. R. Stratton and Mr. D. O'Connell made good speeches on general topics and were heartily applauded. Father Fitzpatrick ably filled the position of chairman. Dancing was indulged in and proved a popular pastime. Many people from the township of Ennismore, from Hastings and from Lindsay were in attendance and the day was a success from every standpoint.

MONSTROUS PUMPKIN

Do you want to see a minature balloon that is a product of the garden. If you do hunt for it in the exhibit building at the exhibition and you will see something, the equal of which you have probably never seen before. It is a monstrous big pumpkin and was grown on the property of Curtis Bros., brick makers. The measurements and weight, for one very good reason, are not given. The figures alongside a load of bricks would appear more authentic.

They Are Now One

The only met once, and then he saw in her an excellent woman.

Who told him so?

Her eyes told him, for eyes speak with the voice of the soul.

She saw, also, that he was an honest man, and true, and such men are much to be sought after.

He said "Will you?"

She replied "Yes."

This is no fairy tale, no dream of sweet sixteen, the whispering wind, the silvery moon, the winding path.

Nay! nay! Pauline, he was well nigh on seventy winters, while nearly fifty summer sighs had kissed her.

But they loved.

They had both known the sweets of earth's choicest gift, the wedded life.

Yet, heaven had robbed them.

She was a widow.

He was a widower.

But the flame broke from a smile to a proposal, from a proposal to a wedding.

He came from Kingston last night. She came from Woodville and in a very brief time Rev. J. R. Webb had pronounced the words that gave them each other's lives complete.

They registered at the Montgomery House, and like the story books, will live happy ever after.

The Democratic nomination for Georgia, secured by Hoke Smith, cost him $17,796.10, over $10,000 of which came out of his own pocket.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

"INSANE," WHO SAID SO?

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—There is no such thing as insanity. (I'll bet you 100 dollars); but you are insane for talking such nonsense as "the poor woman who decorates herself in the asylum." You do not agree with all my sentiments, but if the drunken hooligans ever get you within those walls, you will, if you have time, and perhaps say a few words on the tariff question or the German scare, or the House of Lords, or some other tommy rot. Ha, ha, ha.

PRO BONO.

Note.—They say that those who are insane are always denying that there is such a thing as insanity. However, Pro Bono Publico shows profound wisdom in the above remarks, eh!—Editor.

To The Editor of The Review.

Sir,—Senators Cox and Joffray and Sir H. Pellatt have just discovered at a coast of a few thousand dollars, millions of dollars worth of coal. Where do the people come in? Why that's where the Senators make their money, out of the people who originally owned the coal. Oh! we are a great people or a great lot of fools, one or the other Which is it?

The Premier of Spain says to the Church:—"Hands off the people." "Let our schools alone!" What has Laurier said? He has welcomed the Church and is Premier of Canada too. We ARE a great people!

OBSERVER

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—Anent the chimes project I wonder if the giving of one bell as a memorial has occurred to any person? This is a tribute which would commemorate the dead, as well as being a pleasure to the living.

Might it also not be a good idea for those of us who wish to see the chimes established, but yet on account of the smallness of our donation, feel diffident about offering as a contribution, to take up a subscription among our friends who are similiarly situated, and hand in the total to the treasurer?

Peterborough boasts no millionaires, and a project so extensive as this of the bells can only be carried through by concerted action. Every citizen, rich and poor, is appealed to (the price is unintentional) because every one who is not deaf may participate in the enjoyment of the music, which will be, in a manner, the voice of the town, interpreting public sentiment.

In factories or business places, should an enterprising employee ask for a twenty-five cent subscription from his fellow-workmen, his plea would seldom be refused, and it is surprising how large a sum can be realized from a number of these small subscriptions without the outlay proving irksome to the individual.

I know of a fine monument which was erected entirely by the pennies of school children. What do you say, boys and girls of the town, will you take an interest in this matter? If you will do so, it would be easy for the school children of Peterborough to collect one hundred dollars. Think of the pride you would feel, you scholars, every time the bells rang, and how you could truly say, "I helped buy these."

Among the happy memories of their Ontario home, which this generation of Peterborough children may carry away (perhaps to a lonely ranch, or to a new western village) shall be that of the music of these chimes, and wistfully shall they relate to their children how their young hearts thrilled as they were awakened at midnight by "our bells" tolling for the dying year, and then joyously welcoming in its successors.

Associations are among the valuable assets of any country but how much more in a land, which of necessity possesses but few, should these be cherished and preserved.

It is the aesthetic which takes strongest hold of the mind, and remains longest in the memory of man, and the music of these chimes, ringing out from the belfry of the old grey church upon the hill, can not help but have a refining effect upon the population.

Years ago, when a journey to Manitoba was an event, the poet Whittier made the trip, and the object which most impressed him was not the acres of wheat, nor the boundless resources of that strong young province, but it was:

The bells of the Roman mission
That call from their turrets twain,
To the boatmen on the river,
And the hunters on the plain.

Surely what Sarnia, Cobourg, Oakville, and even little Campbellford have accomplished, can in this big town be made possible by enthusiasm and unanimity.

It Saves You Waiting

On Saturdays we have so many persons who drive long distances or come by train, that we are unable to promise appointments for that day, but we wait upon persons in turn. Many persons call write or phone for appointment, we then reserve time for such and it saves them much waiting, as the time so given is kept open for them. We make such appointments for any day or evening other than Saturday. Evening is quite as good as day time for the eye examination, but it is necessary to arrange for this a day or two in advance.

Mr. George Chandler, of J. J. Turner & Sons, met with what might have proved a serious accident about quarter to twelve yesterday morning. While riding his wheel home to dinner he struck an upraised plank at the G.T.R. crossing on Charlotte street, and was thrown rather heavily to the ground. He was rendered unconscious, but recovered in a few minutes and was able to proceed home. He was at work to-day and is congratulating himself on his good luck in escaping serious injury.

IT LOOKS LIKE A BIG DAY TO-DAY AT THE FAIR

(AND ALSO LIKE A BIG NIGHT TO-NIGHT)

EXHIBITION IN FULL BLAST

Something Doing Every Minute at the Peterborough Industrial -- Some of the Many Features -- A General Review.

And yesterday afternoon was the afternoon of the first day of the fair

And on that day they made everything but money at the fair grounds. There was no admission charged, because in the real meaning of the exhibition there was nothing doing. Nothing doing—that is, to warrant charging the price of admission at the big gate.

For the fair directorate is an essentially honest and upright body of men, and besides, that charging on the first day when there was nothing doing would hurt business for the second day, and such procedure is decidedly anything but long-headed.

But the preliminary proceedings were just working up to the real event, and to-day the fair blossoms forth in all its gladness.

As this is written early in the morning it is too short a time since breakfast to say anything definite about record breaking crowds or anything like that. It's safer, however, to back a spring-halt horse against Dan Patch than to make a wager that to-day won't see the biggest crowd that ever swarmed over the commodious grounds and make the directors looking on feel as happy as a hungry ant eater looking over a mammoth army of fat and appetizing ants.

Everything, from the cosy corner of the smallest piker to the elaborate canvas top of the biggest noise on the midway is in readiness to do business, and the receipts of to-day and to-morrow will be the estimate of the enterprising visitors as to whether Peterborough is a good town or a "dead one."

The noon hour saw a big change. Busy hands had transformed the scene into one of tremendous possibilities. The space reserved for swine and poultry was all occupied by a class of entries which bid fair to eclipse those of other years. "The showing in the cattle department," said one of the old guard of directors, is the best in ten years."

G. A. Brethen's entry of seventeen head of registered Holsteins, is one of the many.

At eleven o'clock the stock judging contest, under the direction of Mr. H. C. Duff, was commenced, and great interest was shown in the work.

Among the poultry exhibitors are Messrs. Geo. Paxman, Vickery Bros., McGregory & Wollard, Bobcaygeon; S. Oliver, Lindsay, and F. Dunnitt. The birds are cooped in a large tent immediately inside the grounds at the first entrance, and included in the list are a number which won firsts at the Toronto Exhibition. The judging is being conducted by Mr. D. A. Parsons.

Tents sprung up on almost every available spot on the grounds. These were occupied for display of work by representatives of the various companies advertised.

The refreshment booths are all in readiness to meet the demands of the big crowds expected. No one need go hungry or thirsty. The ladies of Knox church have a big staff on hand at their lunch and refreshment booth, and the same conditions prevail with their neighbors, the ladies of All Saints' church, who are serving hot meals in the most approved style.

Step by step the midway attractions have been put in order, and everything has the appearance of being able to deliver the goods to their patrons.

The exhibit building gives promise of being taxed to its utmost. Already the products of the farm, which include all the usual lines, are in their places.

Then, too, there are the exhibits of the merchant, the manufacturer and the artist. This department is at its best. The fancy work display on the second floor will be a winner. Conspicuous on this floor is a small model of a yacht, made by Master Harry Watson, East City.

The miniature railway and the merry-go-round are ready for business and should make a big hit with the children, and not a few of their elder brothers and sisters.

Between twelve and one o'clock the augmented street car service began its work of carrying the gathering uptown crowds to the grounds. Everywhere the "fine weather" slogan could be heard, and the big fair is on in earnest.

GLOCKLING IS ELECTED

Toronto Man Again President of Trades Congress

Port Arthur, Sept. 16.—The Congress of Labor adjourned last evening an hour late, after a strenuous session. William Glockling, Toronto, was elected president, over James Watters, Victoria, and James Somerville, Moose Jaw, Glockling having a plurality vote in the first ballot. R. P. Pettypiece of Vancouver was elected fraternal delegate over Samuel Hadden, Toronto, and E. W. A. Odell, Hamilton. Calgary beat Guelph for the next session of the congress.

The sessions will not likely finish, as in past years, on Friday evening with a night session, as the delegates have accepted an invitation to a moonlight excursion to-night, and there are still to report the most important committees.

Delegate Joseph Gibbons of the Toronto Street Railway Employes, made an appeal yesterday for an amendment to the Railway Act, to compel street railways to provide centre aisles in cars and abolish running boards entirely.

Delegate J. H. Barnett of the Toronto Iron Moulders made a strong plea on behalf of better sanitary conditions in foundries, and his resolution carried.

The principal resolution to be discussed yet is the usual "Socialist resolution," which asks that the constitution be amended by striking out clause six, which pledges the congress to public ownership of street railways, telephones, gas and electric light plants, etc., and to insert in its stead a paragraph calling for the co-operative ownership of all means of wealth production, distribution and exchange This resolution may take several hours, but will hardly pass.

WINDSOR'S APPLICATION FOR POWER

Toronto, Sept. 16.—Active steps are being taken by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission to give effect to the opplication of Windsor for 15,000 horse-power.

Hon. Adam Beck, chairman, yesterday had notices sent to the different municipalities (1) who have signed contracts for power with the commission, and (2) who have passed resolutions and bylaws but have not signed contracts, to send representatives to a meeting at London on Sept. 22, to discuss the terms and conditions under which power shall be supplied to Windsor.

This proceeding is necessary under the hydro-electric legislation, that all municipalities interested shall be consulted when an outside corporation, railway or distributing company makes application for power.

The following municipalities have passed bylaws: Windsor, Mitchell, Seaforth, Dundas, Amherstburg, Bothwell, Chatham, Comber, Dresden, Elmira, Essex, Leamington, Port Stanley, Ridgetown, Tilbury, West Lorne.

The municipalities who have entered into contracts for power are: Toronto, Brampton, Weston, Hamilton, Guelph, Berlin, Galt, Hespeler, Waterloo, New Hamburg, London, Norwich, St. Mary's, Stratford, Woodstock, Ingersoll, Tillsonburg, St. Thomas.

MAY LEAD TO CRISIS

Helsingfors, Sept. 16.—The Finnish Diet reassembled yesterday, and reelected President Svinhufvid. The latter, who is a judge, is persona non grata to the Russian Government.

When the Diet last adjourned its members were in an ugly mood. They had received and promptly returned without action thereupon, to the Emperor, the imperial measure providing for joint legislation by the Douma and Diet, but which in effect extended the authority of the former over the Finnish body and paved the way for the elimination of the grand duchy as a law-making Government. Subsequently the bill was adopted by the Douma and the Council of the Empire.

The present deliberations of the Diet ultimately may lead to a crisis resulting in its summary dissolution.

DOMINION DRYDOCK CO. ORGANIZED

Montreal, Sept. 16—The organization meeting of the Dominion Drydock Co. was held yesterday at the Windsor. Those present were Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, Sir Robert Perks, W. M. Dobell of Quebec, Mr. Davey of Quebec, Sir Montague Allan, Andrew Allan, Capt. Doc Newton of Montreal. representing Mr. Foster of St. John, N.B., and Arthur Grenfell of London, and Mr. W. M. MacPherson of Quebec, representing Harland, Wolff & Co.

The following directors were appointed: Andrew Allan, Sir Montague Allan, G. M. Bosworth, vice-president of the C.P.R., and Capt. Newton. Andrew Allan was elected president.

The Pope's Valet Has Been Selling His Holiness' Hair

Rome, Sept. 14.—It was noticed some time ago that Anthony Graziadel, one of the Pope's personal attendants, was spending far more money than his wage as a servant justified.

He was carefully watched. It was learned that whenever the Pope had his hair cut, Graziadiel gathered the shorn locks and sold them to the faithful, especially foreigners, thus making several thousand lire annually. When charged with doing this by Mgr. Miscaitelli, prefect of apostolic palaces, Graziadel confessed and was dismissed.

FATHER VAUGHAN NOT MISREPORTED

Montreal, Sept. 16.—The newspapers of this city are not very well pleased at the charge made against them by Father Vaughan to the effect that he was grossly misreported while delivering his addresses in this city against the Protestant sects.

As a matter of fact, the famous Jesuit priest appears to have softened, and for cause, as it is a well known fact that the highest episcopal authority of a certain archdiocese called the sensational preacher to time, and plainly intimated that no more attacks were to be made on the same lines as the former addresses.

As a matter of fact, the newspapers in their generosity, left out several of the most objectionable passages. The three statements which left so much soreness amongst the non-Catholics were: "Soulless religion," "galvanized corpse," and "if the Protestants do not like it, they can lump it," the latter being suppressed by The Gazette, although the statement, which was perfectly true, was sent all over the country.

PLENTY OF LABOR SAYS MACKENZIE

Winnipeg, Sept. 16.—William Mackenzie, president of the Canadian Northern Railway, in an interview here, said his company had a plentiful supply of labor for the new lines under construction in British Columbia, and had no idea of attempting to secure Oriental labor. He considered Nelson preferable to Churchill as the terminus of the Hudson Bay Railway. He hoped the Government would listen to his representations on the subject of operating that line, and give the Canadian Northern that opportunity. It would have built on from Pas Mission if the Government had not announced its intention of constructing the line.

AN ATTEMPT TO BURN DORMITORY

Andover, N.H., Sept. 16.—An attempt to burn the girls' dormitory at Proctor Academy Wednesday night, was frustratde after a blaze had been started. Mrs. Eugene Sawyer, the matron, is in danger of death to-day from a blow delivered by the incendiary in making his escape. Mrs. Sawyer on entering the basement suddenly at about 8 o'clock, discovered a strange man in the act of applying a match to a pile of wool.

FATHER VAUGHAN GAVE ADDRESS AT EMPIRE CLUB

Famous Jesuit in Toronto Says Great Danger to the Empire is the Lack of Religion—Religion in England is Falling With the Birth Rate.

Toronto, Sept. 12.—Father Bernard Vaughan, S.J., London, England, addressed an audience of about 250 at the Empire Club last night with several ladies seated in the gallery. He kept his hearers interested and elicited a generous amount of applause by his dexterous twanging of thrilling chords. He had some good stories of Yorkshire dialect, and a fine Irish bull all his own, when he alluded to the Empire's children begotten by their mother.

It had been the ambition of his life to come and see the Dominion which had so shown its patriotism and loyalty and love for the mother that bore them.

They all knew the character of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, of Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy.

"I have many more — Robert Laird Borden, and last, but not least, Sir James Whitney," he proceeded as the applause graduated itself from Laurier to Shaughnessy.

"Statesmen, men of honor, men of prudence, with nothing merely local, merely provincial in them, but with aspirations extending all around their world-wide Empire," was his characterization of these gentlemen.

FATHER BERNARD VAUGHAN.

"You know there are dangers, and unless our sympathy goes forth expressing itself in service, service will never attain its highest in sacrifice," he advised.

"Any blooming idiot can be vicious, but it takes a hero to be good," was an explosive period that brought down the house. Then he quoted Josh Billings, "I guess once you get on this inclined plane everything is greased for the ascension."

"Beware of race suicide," was the next point. "Men might say what they would, and they said things they would have been astounded to hear a generation ago. They were told there was no such thing as sin. Men were told there was no more blame attaching to them for not reaching a high moral standard than for not reaching a high physical standard."

When men and women pledged their troth at the altar they must live up to their sacred and sublime, nay—sacramental duties. They shook their fist in the face of the divine decree to multiply and replenish the earth. That was racial suicide, and that was "constructive treason against the majesty of God."

A great danger to the Empire was lack of religion. What a difference the old country presented to-day as compared with a generation ago! He would not say there was not a grand body of religious men, but the test was whether religion entered into life. If their characters were to be fair, sweet, strong and sublime, they must be policed, trained, influenced and finished by religion.

He dare not tell them how few went to church in England. When they remembered that the birthrate had fallen from 38 to 24 they could understand that religion was failing. The religion that did not regard the sacrifice of Christ on the cross was not of much use. Only through that could men learn to fight their passions. Unless they had the strong arm of the Son of God to lean upon and his sweet heart to draw from, he did not know what they were to do in a moment of trial and temptation.

"I do not want to advocate one religion more than another, but I want you to live up to what you believe to be true. Take care when men tell you to live up to the moral law without telling you about a moral Lawgiver. They are trying to do that in France to-day and the result is hell."

"Not only the oldest, but the greatest association on earth you will acknowledge, whether you like it or not, is the Catholic Church. She can't die. She won't die. She is youthful and vigorous. Let her do her work with her own. Patriotism is the finest bloom that rises from the tap root of religion," was the essence of a strong appeal.

"I think that Protestants are infinitely superior to the religion which they profess. I admire them, their zeal, their energy, enterprise, their philanthropy, their extraordinary generosity, but I can't admire their religion. Why you ask, the reason is that while I think Protestants themselves fine, I think their religion very thin. poor nourishment for the support of the soul."

No Race Suicide Here.

Ridgetown, Sept. 16.—Mrs. James White, wife of a local butcher, presented her husband with triplets Wednesday, two boys and a girl, all full sized and healthy babies.

WANT THEM REINSTATED

Windsor, Sept. 16.—Friends of Detectives Campeau and Mahoney, who have been suspended from the provincial police force for refusing to wear the uniforms adopted this year, are circulating petitions in Windsor asking Hon. J. O. Reaume, representative for the riding to busy himself in their behalf and have them reinstated. A large number of signatures have already been secured.

The Vaccination Question.

Brantford, Sept. 16.—Brantford public school trustees, who have been harassed by many ratepayers on account of the enforcement of the vaccination bylaw, have decided to submit the matter to the Department of Education. In the meantime vaccination has been discontinued.

SOUTH AFRICAN PREMIER MEETS PERSONAL REVERSE

Nationalist Party, of Which He is the Head, Scores a Good Victory, But Boer is Beaten at the Polls by Sir James P. Fitzpatrick.

Johannesburg, Sept. 16.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The first general election in the new South African Union took place yesterday. Returns are still very incomplete, only 66 seats out of 121 having reported. The indications, however, are that the Nationalists, led by Gen. Louis Botha, the Premier, have triumphed, although Botha himself is defeated. Returns up to midnight give the Nationalists 33 seats, the Unionists 26, the Independents 6 and the Laborites 1. Gen. Botha was defeated by Sir Percy Fitzpatrick. Hon. H. C. Hull, the Finance Minister, was beaten by Sir G. Farrar. Cape Town went solidly Unionist. Dr. Jameson, the Unionist leader, defeated his Nationalist opponent by 1,414 to 62.

Addressing a crowd at Pretoria after learning of his defeat, Gen. Botha said: "I shall do my utmost to stamp out racialism."

The final result will probably be as follows: Nationalists, 64; Unionists, 40; Natal Independents, 12; Labor, 4; Independent 1.

Throughout the entire campaign the Premier has set his face against all attempts to stir up race trouble. He severely condemned a reference made by the Opposition leader in a speech at Durban to the Jameson raid, and expressed the hope that neither side would attempt to make capital out of the unfortunate differences that arose before the war. The issue of the election, he said, was not between race and race, but whether the electors were prepared to hand over the management of affairs to the heads of the mining houses, who were the Unionist leaders.

Elections were also held Wednesday for the Cape and Transvaal Provincial Councils, but returns are not sufficiently complete to give any indication of the results.

The constitution of the Union of South Africa, which went into force on May 31 last, provides for a House of Assembly and a Senate. To the Assembly the Cape of Good Hope sends 51 members, the Transvaal 36 and Natal and Orange River Colony 17 each. The Senate consists of eight members elected by the Legislature of each province and eight nominated by the governor. Only persons of European descent may sit in either House.

It was intended when the act of Union was passed that the first Union Parliament should be opened by King George. The death of King Edward made the carrying out of this plan impossible and the duty has been delegated to the Duke of Connaught.

Gen. Botha, it will be remembered, became commander-in-chief of the Boer forces after the death of Gen. Joubert in the South African war, and fought valiantly against the British to the close of the war. Dr. Jameson, leader of the Unionists, is best remembered as leader of the famous "Jameson raid" which ended miserably for the raiders and almost brought Britain to war at the time with the Transvaal and with Germany, too. He fought in the South African war, with the British forces, of course.

OH YOU KID!

Man of 91 Years Gets License to Marry.

Chicago, Sept. 10.—Volney E. Ruscoe established a record yesterday in the marriage license department in the County building. Mr. Ruscoe lacks two months of being 92 years old. He applied for a license to marry Miss Helen Conger, aged 44. Clerk Salmonson immediately after the departure of the couple announced that all records had been smashed. Previously 85 years had been the age of the oldest applicant for a marriage license.

Established Penny Bank.

London, Sept. 16.—Sir George Christopher Trout Bartley, K.C.B., is dead He was born in 1842. He represented North Islington in the House of Commons from 1885 to 1906. In 1875 he established the National Penny Bank to promote thrift.

JURY CENSURE GRAND TRUNK

Toronto, Sept. 16.—Indignation that a man should be expected and required by the Grand Trunk to work twenty-one hours at a stretch was shown by the coroner's jury enquiring last night into the death of Watchman Edward Thomas Crane, killed at the Dunn avenue crossing on Sept. 12.

At the conclusion of the evidence, the foreman announced that it would not be necessary to retire to return a verdict, but he would like to know if it was a rule of the company that compelled deceased to work for nearly 24 hours straight, or was it an agreement between the two watchmen when changing shifts.

"I want to know this, because we all feel pretty strongly on that point, particularly when the Grand Trunk makes it a boast of not permitting their drivers to work more than so many hours," he said.

Coroner Lynd informed that the company fixed the schedule for watchmen, and agreed that it was a hardship to the men. A rider could be attached to the verdict censuring the company on this point.

"Well, Mr. Coroner, I would like to see the wording of that rider made pretty stiff," said the foreman.

The result of the deliberations was a finding "that deceased came to his death by being struck by an engine on the G.T.R., that it was an accident, but we consider the company censurable for requiring or allowing watchmen to be on duty for 21 hours."

PURSE FOR THE NEW PROFESSOR

London, Sept. 16.—To-day the Rev. Griffith Thomas sails for Canada to take up his work as a professor in Wycliffe College.

Mr. Thomas' many friends in England very deep regret at parting with him, and sincere appreciation of his great service rendered.

He was presented with a purse of 500 guineas, while his wife was given a gold pendant.

WILL DISCUSS REPRESENTATION

St. John, N.B., Sept. 16.—Premier Hassard, Hon. H. J. Palmer and A. W. Warburton, M.P., of P.E.I., and Acting Premier McLean of Nova Scotia are the guests of Premier Hazen, and will discuss federal representation. It is feared that as a result of the redistribution of seats following the taking of the census next year, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick may each lose two seats and P.E.I. one seat. Mr. McLean said the question of representation of the Maritime Provinces in the Federal House was getting to be a very serious one, and he felt the action now being taken was very necessary.

WALT MASON

Philadelphia, Sept. 15.—Dead, it is believed a week or more, the body of John Scanlon, better known as "Walt Mason," writer of prose poetry that has been used by newspapers from one side of the continent to the other, was found in the studio which he occupied at No. 913 Arch street.

Bottles partially filled with poison were found in the room, and it is believed that Scanlon ended his life to gain relief from a stomach trouble from which he had suffered. He was forty-three years old and an artist and illustrator in addition to being a writer.

Walt Mason, we are sorry you are gone. You were Walt Mason to the world who read you, but John Scanlon to your friends and acquaintances. We did not know that your heart was eaten by the canker of disease for you, ever had the song on the lip, the laugh on the pen. So you flitted, eh! left the realities of this world for the unrealities of the next. But you made us forget care when you were here, made us look for your daily little rhyme. The ink well is closed, the pen is still, the voice is hushed, the casket is unlocked, the soul is flown.

You reared no stately verse, nor did you thrill the world, but you made us common people just a little happier.

DO YOU CATCH THE IDEA?

that in a former existence she maintained a salon at the time of Louis XIII., and was a wicked woman, with beauty and brains. Strange, indeed, are the turns that some women's fancies take.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Yes, anything is strange when one has not studied. The man may doubt that there is such a thing as wireless, or telegraphy. But the operator receives the message and delivers it Do you catch the idea? Can you explain it?

THE REAL PROTECTIONIST

The Ridgetown Dominion, a newspaper edited by a Conservative member of the Ontario Legislature, recently dwelt trenchantly with the low tariff pretences of the Liberals. "What is the use," it asks, "for the eastern Liberal newspapers writing nice little paragraphs about lower tariff and free trade and recalling the time when nearly all Liberals were in agreement in considering a moderate tariff best for Canada. That good old time ceased to exist from the hour the party took office in 1896."

The Dominion goes on to recall how in 1896, through the late George H. Bertram, of Toronto, an assurance was quietly given to the manufacturers that no matter what the Liberal leaders and the Liberal newspapers might promise, no harm would be done them if the Liberals won. The Dominion continues:—"Sir Wilfrid surrendered to the protectionists in 1896, and the proof of it is found in many things that occurred then and since. Hon. David Mills, an honest low tariff man, was excluded from the Cabinet until after the "revision" of 1897, and the bargain made with the manufacturers carried out, and it was safe to admit him and stop the clamour of the old Liberals at his exclusion. Sir Richard Cartwright was not taken in until after he consented to be muzzled. Tariff tinkering since has been in the interest of the manufacturers and the bounties have been continued."

And it further goes on:—The manufacturers or at least the great majority of them, Grit and Tory, favor the present men in power for many reasons. They get what they want in the way of duties, drawbacks, bonuses and bounties, and of course the greater the expenditure on all kinds of public works the better for them and the better for the army of favorites and contractors and the still greater army of camp followers behind them."

THE FARMER

This morning two young fellows on George street, near the corner of Charlotte, put their heads out the door and shouted across the street, "Have you threshed your pumpkins yet?" The Havelock local was in and hundreds of farmers were coming up street for the train was crowded. But there was no reply. Almost at the same time a mongrel black dog was running up street barking at car 13 on the George street line. Of course the car couldn't answer. It might have run over the dog and killed it. Neither did the farmers stop, they might have changed the shape of the face of the smart one who called across the street had they desired. But like the car, they went on. Welcome to our city, Sir Farmer. Your clothes may not be topped by a silk hat, nor your feet encased in patent leathers, but the clothes on your back are paid for, and that is more than many a young human ass who walks as a dude, or who struts as a dudeine can say. Your hands are as hard as your friendships are true, your soul is as sound as the trees that shelter your stock in the open. You view your workshop, the acres, you sleep, God works on, for you are in league with the Infinite. The grain has ripened, the flocks have fattened as you rested in the stillness of the night. You know no whistle, your alarm is the cock calling the morn. You have no time check, your acres labor on, resting and working automatically with the seasons. We say, "Please pass the cream." What a joke. You say, "Please pass the milk." Your milk on your table is as cream. We eat an egg. Sometimes it is ripe, sometimes it is riper. It is never strictly fresh. The farmer goes to his stable and gathers a pail full. He eats AN EGG. And so from the hog who grunts in its pen to the Collie who lies well fed at the door, from the turkey, who, unaware of Thanksgiving Day is happy roosting in the trees, to the chicken in the barnyard, all are contented on the farm. Sir Farmer, we talk of Mackenzie and Mann, the C.P.R., G.T.R. and G.T.P., of waterways and canals say, old man, they are all small fry. You, sir, feed the world, yes, by George the V., by George the bye word, by you the world is fed.

NOT A CLOUD

"Not a cloud has marred the beautiful sky of their happiness, and they are now as happy as when they were married sixty-two years ago."

In this is a volume, In this is a library, in this is where language fails. Sixty-two years of happiness and trust and love. On another page of this paper are fuller details of the wedding anniversary of two former residents of this city. What a great fact it reminds us of in this time of hustle and bustle and worry and divorce—not a cloud has marred their beautiful sky.

You who fight and quarrel in your bed rooms, but smile on the street; you married ones. Cut these words out and paste them in the mirror:

"NOT A CLOUD HAS MARRED THE BEAUTIFUL SKY OF THEIR HAPPINESS IN ALL THE SIXTY TWO YEARS OF THEIR MARRIED LIFE."

GOOD PUBLICITY

You couldn't miss it if you were in the street and had your eyes half open. The "it" in this instance was a flag attached to the bow end of a big touring car, and on this flag were emblazoned the letters that spelled "Nashville." The car went through Ottawa last evening.

There was no need to ask what Nashville. One look at the coon who held the steering wheel behind the flag told that Nashville, Tennessee, was meant.—Free Press, Ottawa.

There arn't many of us who have automobiles in Peterborough. But we've all got tongues and once in a while buy a railway ticket for somewhere. What do we say when we meet the stranger in town?

"Well, how's times in Peterborough?" says the stranger.

"Oh punk," says you, or do you say times are better better and we are all happy and we've got good roads, good homes, good factories, although we must admit our Board of Health is dead. It doesn't stink, but the garbage does.

And when you go away are you there with the joy talk, or do you hand out the growl.

Say, people, you don't hear those Dutchmen in Berlin or of Seagram, junior, or senior, in Waterloo damn their town with faint praise. Peterborough is a good town, and any resident who doesn't think it isn't the most up-to-date (bar Board of Health) in Canada for the size of it, can just write his complaints to the Review. Don't you like the town, stranger, or newcomer from anywhere? Then git out.

POOR GREECE

The Burns of the modern Greek poets, Spires Matzukas, the idol of his countrymen and the greatest living Greek poet, is visiting in Montreal. This man has constantly before him the cause of his country; he dreams a newer and a better Greece. Across continents he goes singing his way into the hearts—and purses of his fellow-country.

Already he has collected over $50,000 for fortifications in Greece. But now the stupendous effort is before him, to collect the million dollars he wants for a battleship for Greece.—Montreal Herald.

And this chap is a man who gave up a lucrative practice of law in Greece to come to the new, new world. Sad indeed to think of the past of his country. As Rome, as Greece, as Spain went, so will go any country that rises from poverty and adversity, to luxury, and then to decay.

"Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey,
Where wealth accumulates and men decay."

But time plays no favorites and the nation that gets rich and lazy will decay as surely as the man. We will not live to see it, but that does not make the fact less. As with men, so with nations, our greatness sure—must not lie in the past, but in the pulsating, throbbing present.

A FLOP

Is there going to be a flop? In Maine they have just elected a Democratic Governor for the first time in many years. It looks that way. Is there going to be a flop at Ottawa? It rather looks that way, too, doesn't it?

HERE! HERE!

To every man who is battling against the wrong and for the right, no matter who he is, or where he is, or what political party he belongs to, we say more power to his arm; more brightness to his eye; more strength of strength of will; more independence of manhood. The good men who are battling for the right should all get on a higher plane and work more sincerely together.—Fort William Times-Journal.

Right you are, old man; that's about as sensible stuff as we have gathered into our dome of thought from an outside editorial ink-pot for many a day. The Saturday Night made the "High Rollers" get off where they belong. They lost money in the deal, but they saved the darling, the sheep with the long wool and short brains. And up from the land of the west it is refreshing to get a blast like that which we have just read from the Daily Times-Journal. Most newspapers imagine that they have filled the bill when they tell how crooked the other party is. That's all Tommy Rot. Politics are all right, but who in blazes wants to read politics every legal newspaper publishing day of the year. Arthur Brisbane, the highest paid newspaper man in the world, who is editor for William Randolph Hearst, can make a half column double out of a man who lives in a poor little home doing his duty, supporting his family—most of us think that is too trivial. We must have something great to write upon, something tremendous. Brisbane knows human nature and that's why he is there. But to every man who is battling for the right will come some awful difficulty. It may come as a personal temptation, some appetite, some weakness within, or some live two-legged devil in an auto, wearing diamonds and with a roll, may ask him to sidestep. But it's a fight, old man; it's a fight, old woman; it's a fight, boys, isn't it? Does some one want to do something crooked municipally, politically, socially? Everyone sits tight—so long as they do not personally suffer. What odds, it's nothing to me. This is not the spirit of that little note in the editorial column of the Daily Times-Journal of Fort William, nor is it the spirit of any journal with claims to respect.

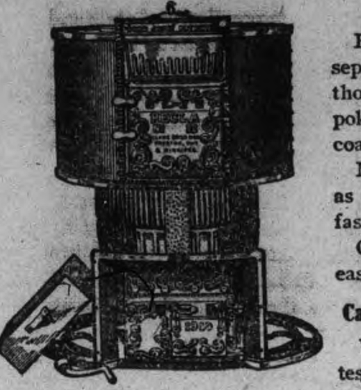
HECLA FURNACE

And Its FOUR Big Features

The "Hecla" has four exclusive features that have brought it steadily to the front as the perfect warm air furnace.

These improvements are so vital—they mean so much in comfort and health and economy—that every man who is going to put in a furnace this year, should study them in detail.



Fused Joints are the only permanent joints between castiron and steel. By means of these joints, we prevent gas and smoke from getting in the Air-chamber and from there into the house.

Fused joints are absolutely and permanently tight, and insure the warm air being fresh, pure and untainted by gas, smoke and dust.

Steel Ribbed Firepot has three times the radiating surface of any other.

It never becomes red-hot—will not burn out—and will save ⅛ of your coal bill by actual test.

Individual Grate Bars

Each bar can be shaken separately. Fire can be cleaned thoroughly without using a poker or shaking down good coal or live fire.

No clinkers to clog the grate as is the case when bars are fastened together.

Of course, one bar is much easier to shake than four.

Castiron Combustion Chamber

We found out, by careful tests, that steel would not stand the intense heat of the furnace fire. So we perfected the Castiron Combustion Chamber, which has proved its wonderful strength, service and durability.

Our little book "Hecla Heated Homes" tells you a lot of things you ought to know about a furnace, besides the exclusive features mentioned above. Let us send you a copy. It's free. Write.

Send us rough plan of your house—and we will submit estimate of the cost of installing the proper size "Hecla" in your home. 100

The Round-Up

A Romance of Arizona

Novelized From Edmund Day's Melodrama

By JOHN MURRAY and MILLS MILLER

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

The entrance of a greaser to refill glasses diverted the attention of the guests until the most important function for them was performed. With "Hows!" and "Here's to the bride!" they drank the toast. Slim, as major domo of the feast, felt it incumbent upon himself to keep the others in order. Turning angrily upon Sagebrush, he said, "Why did you tell the sky pilot where the liquor was?"

"I was just tryin' to do the right thing," answered Sagebrush defiantly.

"Embarrassin' us all like that. You ought to know that parsons don't hit up the gasoline—in public," scolded Slim.

Sagebrush muttered sulkily, "I never herded with parsons none."

Parenthesis diplomatically avoided any further controversy by calling: "They're gettin' ready. Jim's got Jack in the back room tryin' to cheer him up. Boys, is everything ready for the getaway?"

"Sagebrush, did you get that rice?" demanded Slim.

"That's so—I forgot. I couldn't get no rice, though. Dawson didn't have none."

Without telling what he did get, Sagebrush ran from the room to the corral.

"I told you not to let him have anything to do with it," said Fresno, glaring at his fellow workers. Each was silent, as the accusation was general, and none had been taken into the confidence of Sagebrush and Fresno when arrangements were being made for the feast. Fresno had to blame some one, however. By this time Sagebrush had returned, carrying a bag.

"What did you get?" asked Slim.

"Corn," replied Sagebrush laconically.

"Ain't he the darndest!" Show Low expressed the disgust which the others showed.

"Why, darn it," shouted Slim, shaking his fist at the unfortunate Sagebrush, "you can't let the bride an' groom hop the home ranch without chuckin' rice at 'em. It's bad medicine."

"Ain't he disgustin'!" interrupted Fresno.

"What does rice mean, anyhow?" asked the bewildered Sagebrush.

"It means somethin' about wishin' 'em good luck, health, wealth an' prosperity an' all that sort of thing. It's a sign an' symbol of joy," rattled off Slim.

"Well, now, ain't there more joy in corn than in rice?" triumphantly asked Sagebrush.

Slim jerked open the top of the bag while Sagebrush stood by helplessly. "Well, the darned idiot!" he muttered as he peered into it. "If he ain't gone an' got it on the ear!" he continued as he pulled a big ear out.

"All the better," chuckled Sagebrush. "We'll chuck 'em joy in bunches."

"Don't you know that if you hit the bride with a club like this you'll put her plumb out?" cried Slim.

Sagebrush was not cast down, however. Always resourceful, he suggested, "We'll shell some fer the bride, but we'll hand Jack his in bunches."

The idea appealing to the punchers, each grabbed an ear of corn. Some brandished the ears like clubs; others aimed them like revolvers.

"I'll keep this one," said Slim, picking out an unusually large ear. "It's a 44. I'll get one of the greasers to shell some fer the bride."

The bride was arrayed in her wedding gown. Mrs. Allen was ready for a fresh burst of weeping. The girls had assembled in the large room in which the ceremony was to be performed. Polly acted as herald for the cowboys. Appearing in the doorway, she commanded, "Say, you folks come on an' get seated!"

Slim stood beside Polly as the boys marched past him. His general admonition was, "The first one of you Shorthorns that makes a break I'm goin' to bend a gun over your head!"

The guests grinned cheerfully as they marched past the couple.

"There's a heap of wickedness in that bunch," remarked Slim piously

"If he ain't gone an' got it on the ear!"

to the girl. Tossing a flower to him as she darted away, she cried, "You ain't none too good yourself, Slim!"

"Ain't she a likely filly?" mused the lovesick sheriff. "If there's anybody that could make me good it's her. I'm all in. If ever I get the nerve all at once, darn me if I don't ask her right out!"

But Slim's courage oozed as quickly as it had risen, and, with a sigh, he followed his companions to the wedding.

CHAPTER IX.

DICK LANE on leaving the hospital at Chihuahua went straight to the fortified ledge where he had made his heroic defense. As he conjectured, the renegade McKee had got there first and found and made off with the buried treasure. So Dick manfully set to work to replace his lost fortune. It seemed too slow work to go to his mine and dig the gold he immediately required out of the ground, so he struck out for civilization to sell some of his smaller claims. In the course of a month, at the end of which his wanderings brought him to Tucson, he had sold enough of his holdings to give him $3,000 in ready cash. As he was near the Sweetwater, he resolved not to express the money to Payson, but to take it himself.

He entered the courtyard of Allen Hacienda while the wedding was taking place within. None of his friends would have recognized him. His frame was emaciated from sickness; his head was drawn back by the torture which he had suffered; he limped upon feet that had been distorted by the firebrands in McKee's hands, and his face was overgrown by an unkempt beard.

Sounds of laughter fell upon his ears as he mounted the steps. He heard Fresno shout to Slim to hurry up, as he was telling the story about a fellow that was so tanked up he could not say "sasaparella."

Dich halted. "There must be some sort of a party going on here," he thought to himself. "It won't do to take Echo too much by surprise. If Jack got my letter and told her, it's all right, but if it miscarried the shock might kill her. I'll see Jack first."

Dick had ridden first to Sweetwater ranch, but found the place deserted. The party, he mused, accounted for this. While he was planning a way to attract the attention of some one in the house and to get Payson to the garden without letting Echo know of his presence Sagebrush Charley, who had espied the stranger through the window, sauntered out on the porch to investigate. Every visitor to the territory needed looking over, especially after the trouble with Buck McKee.

Sagebrush was bound that there should be no hitch at the wedding of his boss.

"Howdy?" greeted Lane pleasantly. "I'm looking for Jack Payson."

"That so?" answered Sagebrush. "Who may you be?"

"I'm a friend of his."

The foreman could see no danger to come from this weak, sickly man.

"Who may you be?"

"Then walk right in," he invited. "He's inside."

Sagebrush was about to re-enter the house when Dick halted him with the request, "I want to see him out here—privately."

"What's the name?" asked Sagebrush, his suspicions returning.

"Tell him an old friend from Mexico."

Sagebrush did not like the actions of the stranger and his secrecy. He was there to fight his boss' battles, if he had any. This was not in the contract, but it was a part read into the paper by Sagebrush.

"Say, my name's Sagebrush Charley," he cried, with a show of importance. "I'm ranch boss for Payson. If you want to settle any old claim agin Jack, I'm actin' as his substitoot for him this evenin'."

"On the contrary," said Lane, with a smile at Sagebrush's outbreak, "he has a claim against me."

It was such a pleasant, kindly look he gave Sagebrush that the foreman was disarmed completely.

"I'll tell him," he said over his shoulder.

Dick mused over the changes that had occurred since he had left the region. Two years' absence from a growing country means new faces, new ranches and the wiping out of old landmarks with the advance of population and the invasion of the railroad. He wondered if Jack would know him with his beard. He knew—his mirror told him—that his appearance had changed greatly, and he looked twenty years older than on the day he left the old home ranch.

His trend of thought was interrupted by the entrance of Jack on the porch from the house.

"My name's Payson," Jack began hurriedly, casting a hasty glance backward into the hallway, for the ceremony was about to begin. "You want to see me?"

"Jack," cried Dick, holding out his hand eagerly—"Jack, old man, don't you know me?" he continued falteringly, seeing no sign of recognition in his friend's eyes.

Payson gasped, shocked and startled. The man before him was a stranger in looks, but the voice—the voice was that of Dick Lane, the last man in the world he wanted to see that moment. Frightened, almost betraying himself, he glanced at the half open door. If Dick entered he knew Echo would be lost to him. She might love him truly and her love for Dick might have passed away, but he knew that Echo would never forgive him for the deception that he had practiced upon her.

To be continued.

BABY'S TERRIRLE ECZEMA

Hands Tied to Prevent Scratching—Five Doctors Failed to Relieve, But Zam-Buk Worked a Cure.

Mrs. Chas. Levere, of Prescott, North Channel, Ont., tells how Zam-Buk cured her baby. She says:—"My baby's head and face was one complete mass of sores. The itching and irritation were fearful and the little one's plight was so serious that at onetime we feared her ears would be eaten off by the disease.

"We had to keep her hands tied for days to prevent her rubbing and scratching the sores. Doctor after doctor treated her in vain until we had five doctors. They all agreed it was a frightful case of eczema, but none of them did any permanent good.

"As a last resource we were advised to try Zam-Buk. The first box did so much good that we felt sure we were at last working in the right direction. We persevered with the treatment until we had used thrteen boxes, and at the end of that time I am glad to say Zam-Buk had effected a complete cure."

Mrs. Holmes, of 30 Guise Street, Hamilton, is quite as eloquent in her praise. She says:—"Zam-Buk cured my boy of boils and eruptions when he was so bad that he had been unable to mix with other children. Zam-Buk is a wonderful preparation, and mothers throughout the land should always keep it handy."

For eczema, eruption, rashes, tetter, itch, ringworm, and similar skin diseases, Zam-Buk is without equal. It also cures cuts, burns, scalds, piles, abscesses, chronic sores, blood poisoning, etc. All druggists and stores at 50 cents a box, or post free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Refuse imitations.

LADIES' SHIRTWAIST.

All Seams Allowed.

A smart model for wear under the early fall coats is the one we show above. Such waists must not be bulky, as they would be uncomfortable, but they must be stylish and a good cut. The waist we illustrate is certainly very attractive. The front has a group of tucks at each shoulder and the regular box plait closing down the center. In the back the tucks extend all the way to the waist-line and are stitched their entire length. The shirt sleeve is used and is finished with the shirt cuff. The waist is suitable for French flannel, taffeta silk, or any of the wash materials. The pattern (5163) is cut in sizes 32 to 44 inches bust. To make the waist in medium size will require three yards of material 27 inches wide, 2⅜ yards 36 inches wide, or 1⅞ yards 44 inches wide.

The above pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

OBITUARY

Word was received on Monday of a sad death, in the person of Charlie, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Fawcett, who left Peterborough about three years ago, which took place in Halbrite, Sask., on August 24th.

The little fellow was nine years and eleven months and five days old. His death will be a great loss to his parents. The young lad had been ailing for about sixteen months, and death was not unexpected.

PASSED AWAY AT KINGSTON

Death of Dr. McCarter a Brother of Mrs. Vincent Eastwood

The sad intelligence reached the city last evening of the death of Dr. J. Morton McCarter, a brother of Mrs. Vincent Eastwood.

He was operated on for appendicitis on Monday in the Kingston hospital, but failed to rally from the effects of the shock.

Mr. and Mrs. Eastwood left on the noon train to-day for Almonte, the old home of the deceased, where interment will take place.

THEATRICAL

A well-filled house greeted the return of Joe Marks' Stock Company last evening at the Grand. The company proved to be as great a drawing card as ever, and the presentation of the southern sketch "Down Where the Cotton Blossoms Grow" last night brought forth well-deserved applause. The plot, though not deep, was cleverly acted out, the work of each member of the cast being affective.

The specialties were as popular as ever, the work of Byron and Nelson Bruce Kent and Will H. Malone being especially well received. "Keep Your Foot on the Soft, Soft Pedal," by Bruce Kent, was a great hit.

On the whole the show is worthy of a good patronage, and the audience left the house well-pleased.

The play for to-night will be "The Prince of Patches." New specialties will be introduced.

Hugh Smith, of Amaranth, went to close the barn doors and, without any warning, dropped to the ground dead.

Is How These Men Died -- Struck by Train and Were Instantly Killed -- Two Homes Bereaved.

Special to the Review.

Lyn, Ont., Sept. 16.—George East and David Graham, employed as track men on the Lyn section of the Grand Trunk Railway, were struck by a freight train while working on the track near Lyn station, about 11 o'clock this morning and instantly killed. The men, on account of heavy fog, did not see the train until it was close to them and did not have time to get off the track. The rest of the section men had a narrow escape. East was about 50 years old and leaves a widow, while Graham was about twenty-eight years of age, and leaves a widow and one child.

A GOOD MAN COMING TO CITY OF PETERBOROUGH ON NEXT TUESDAY

(FOR BANQUET)

Great enthusiasm was caused last evening when the General Secretary announced to the campaigners the fact that Mr. George A. Warburton, of Toronto, would be present at the banquet next Tuesday evening and would deliver the address of the evening.

Mr. Warburton is the leading association man in Canada to-day. He has spent 30 years of his life in the work of the Y.M.C.A. and has been the general secretary of some of the leading associations of North America. No man is better known in Y.M.C.A. work than he. He is a man of literary talent, having been the editor of one of the Y.M.C.A. publications for some years. He is also a poet of real worth. Only recently he composed a little poem called "Pass the Ball," which has been quoted very extensively in the papers. He is a splendid speaker and a promoter of the first quality. Every man who can be present ought to hear Mr. Warburton next Tuesday evening. A fee of 25 cents has been placed on this meeting to enable all men to feel free to come.

The work of the campaign is now well in hand and the chairmen of the committees are confident of success. The Boy's Cabinet has asked to have a hand in this campaign and their representative, Mr. Wallie Armstrong, was at last evening's meeting. The boys say they can get in at least 150 new members and intend to prove this to the seniors.

He is known as the best Jubilee singer in America and is a man of high Christian principle. These colored singers are singing for the Y. M. C. A. on Sunday free of charge and will be heard with pleasure by the men of Peterborough. Mr. Riddiford, the popular pastor of the Park Street Baptist Church will deliver the address. McKEE—SAWYER.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at St. John's church Wednesday morning at nine o'clock, when Miss Ethel Mary, daughter of Mr. A. O. Sawyer, of town, was united in marriage to Mr. Ronald Armstrong McKee, of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. W. Holdsworth.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was attired in a gown of cream ninon over silk, trimmed with ivory satin and pearls, wearing the customary bridal veil caught up with lilies of the valley, and she carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums.

The bride's sister, Miss Mabel Sawyer, attended her, and the groom was supported by Mr. William Martin of Peterborough. The bridesmaid wore a gown of Tuscan silk crepe with large picture hat, and carried a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums.

While the register was being signed Miss Lillian Webb played the wedding march. The church was prettily decorated with flowers and foliage.

After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the residence of the bride's parents, where de jeuner was served. Mr. and Mrs. McKee left on the noon train for a trip east, the bride travelling in a suit of navy blue with large black hat.

Among the out of town guests were Mr. Thos. McKee, father of the groom; Misses Ethel and Amy McKee, Miss English, Mr. J. English, Messrs. Jas. and Wm. English, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Adams, Mrs. F. J. Jamieson, Mrs. J. J. Turner, Mrs. L. Turner, Miss E. Nesbitt, Mrs. J. J. Howden and Mr. and Mrs. H. Soanes, all of Peterborough; Miss Edna Steepe and Mr. William Meredith, of Toronto, and Miss Belle Montgomery, of Collingwood.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. McKee will reside at 195 Dublin street, Peterborough.—Havelock Standard.

STR. "WATER LILY" will leave Wolfe St. Wharf Monday, Sept. 19th at 7.30 a.m. for Stoney Lake points, returning same evening.

Telegraphic communication between Vancouver and Stewart is expected soon. Construction work is proceeding.

OUTSIDE TENNIS CLUBS TO PLAY HERE TO-MORROW

The Peterborough Lawn Tennis Association has arranged a series of games with two outside clubs to-morrow. Omemee and Norwood will be here. Four men players and a number of ladies will represent each of the visiting clubs. The games will be played at the Y.M.C.A. Bowling Club and Golf Club courts. At the first two mentioned courts the games will commence at 1.30 o'clock. At the Golf Club play will commence at two o'clock, and continue all afternoon and till dark, the players of the other two courts coming there at the conclusion of their games.

The local players for the three courts are Dr. McPherson and H. Meyers, Y.M.C.A.; W. Coleman and W. Richardson, Bowling Club, and Messrs. Kerr, Burnett, Landry, Hall and Henderson, Golf Club. Members of the other clubs are invited to be present and witness the competition.

BRIEF AND BREEZY

Dr. A. W. McPherson is convenor of the Peterborough-Lindsay district of the Junior O.R.F.U. series, for the purpose of drafting a schedule.

New York, Sept. 15.—There was one play at the Polo Grounds that stood out like a good deed in a naughty world. It was brand new on the local grounds, if not anywhere. Snodgrass made it, and Ty Cobb, the most daring of all men on the bases, would have to move to beat it. Snodgrass drew a base on balls at a time when the Boston team had pretty well slowed down. With the umpire's call of the fourth ball he streaked for first as if trying to beat a bunt. He turned the bag without the slightest hesitation, and set sail, full speed for second. The whole Boston team was caught nodding. Snodgrass was within ten feet of the bag before the ball was thrown. The play was of the kind you read about in "inside baseball," but seldom see upon the field.

The September number of "The Athletic World" magazine has just reached this office. In up-to-date sport affairs and illustrations it is strikingly stronger than the August issue, which created such a favorable impression as a Canadian athletic and outdoor periodical, covering all branches of sport in Canada, with a liberal number of sport happenings over the world generally. We predict a full measure of success for "The Athletic World" in its able efforts to espouse the cause of good sport in this Dominion.

Walter Johnson, of Washington, has fanned 257 batters this year in 45 games. Rube Waddell's record is 301 during 1903, so that the speed king may set up a new record.

Montreal Herald.—A sparring exhibition with Walter Monahan, a chunky amateur from the Pacific Coast, was forbidden by Chief Campeau, but Jack Johnson went through some bag punching stunts, winding up with the time honored trick of slamming the bag from the ropes.

Fred Cameron, Boston Marathon winner, and Maritime Provinces champion distance runner, is turning professional and will run Abbie Wood, of Montreal, at Amherst, September 24th.

WHAT SPINNING TOP WILL DO

A toy vender stood on the curb of the shopping district and shouted. In a moment the crowd gathered eagerly and open-eyed about him. He picked up a little cubical pasteboard box and stood it on the point of a pencil—and it stayed there. Next he caught it up by the loop of thread and it stood out horizontally without support, ostentatiously defying the law of gravitation. Then he performed his most fetching miracle. He set it on an inclined wire and down it went preserving its balance with great dignity. Then he opened the box and displayed its contents.

"Fifteen cents, ladies and gents. Step up and buy your gyroscope tops three nickels, fifteen cents." And the crowd bought. For there is something irresistibly fascinating about the gyroscope top.

So a Connecticut Yankee of ingenious mind thinks, and he is solving the problem of safe flight in the air. So a little Irishman in England and a learned practical German savant have thought too. The result of their work and the work of many others is the coming age, the age of the gyroscope, when by the aid of the marvellous little instrument we shall fly safely in the air, spin over the earth on a single rail—perhaps on single big wheel—sail the seas without rolling or pitching, dive down unafraid among the fishes, revolutionize war, annihilate space—in short do a thousand things of which we have only now just begun to dream, all by means of another little toy that has been made to do the world's work.

Stanley Y. Beach has just constructed and patented an areoplane with a gyroscopic attachment to insure perfect, automatic stability. Ten thousand whirls a minute of his gyroscope wheel, he claims, will keep his aero steady as a bird. The little gyrostat will be the brains of the big mechanical flyer. It is the first of its kind ever built and will probably revolutionize aerial navigation.

There are numerous other practical applications of the gyroscope. Thus Dr. Alexander S. Chessin of Washington University in St. Louis, perhaps the greatest American authority on the mathematics of the gyroscope, has recently applied for a patent for an automobile with two wheels. Some day we shall be whirling through the streets automatically balanced like a bicycle rider. The best part of it will be that there will be no skiding on a two-wheeled auto.—From "Gyroscope Works Wonders," by Arthur B. Reeve, in Technical World Magazine for October.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

To the Editor of the Review.

"There is no such thing as insanity." Dr. Savage, M.D., (home office, Government expert.) As regards the asylum business is it not strange that the recent scandals at Toronto and Hamilton disclosed that the authorities favored the murderers? Did you ever hear of their favoring the righteous? If you look into this subject you will find evil from its inception. Meanness on the part of the state has built up a vested interest (not only wasting) which in England has brought the state to its knees.

PRO BONO PUBLICO.

"There are none righteous, no not one."—The Good Book—Ed. Note.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Most gratifying as I appreciate the kind interest and the powerful influence of the Review and the press of Peterborough generally in reference to the chimes project, I hope, however, you will take no umbrage if I express my alarm lest the personal allusions in your breezy editorials may endanger the success of a cause which is no one man's idea or work.

On the other hand numbers of citizens are deeply interested, and several well-known men and women are actively pushing the enterprise on public grounds. As an individualistic scheme it would certainly fail, but as a movement carried forward by a number of strong men it will succeed.

While I am writing may I also acknowledge gratefully the useful suggestions made by "Citizen" in your columns yesterday which will receive thoughtful attention. Certainly the opportunity would seem to be open to commemorate generous Peterborough citizens without regard to church affiliation, and thus to emphasize, as we wish to do, the public character of the chime. A memorial tablet could be placed on the church porch. These and other suggestions will be dealt with by a general meeting of subscribers to be shortly convened.

The practical suggestion as to collecting 25 cents or other small sum from companies of employers or other associations of men is a good one and has already been carried out in one large office, whose public spirit is to be commended.

Yours, &c.,
J. C. DAVIDSON.

SIXTY SECOND ANNIVERSARY

The following is taken from a paper published in East Liverpool, Ohio. The parties mentioned formerly resided here and in Mount Pleasant, and were well and favorably known to the old residents. They spent their golden wedding amongst friends here twelve years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Hard of East Fifth street, celebrated in a quiet way the sixty-second anniversary of their wedding, at their home last evening. Only Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Hard of their immediate family was present.

The aged couple, who are greatly loved by all with whom they are acquainted, have been residents of this city for the last twenty-four years, the greater part of which time Mr. Hard was actively engaged in hardware business. He is now 86 years of age, while his wife is 80. Despite their years and the weakness that they carry in their wake, Mr and Mrs. Hard are still enjoying life in their quiet way.

Not a cloud has marred the beautiful sky of their happiness and they are now as happy in one another's company as they were on the day of their marriage, which occurred in Canada, in 1848. In their sixty-two years together, not a single quarrel or cross word has passed between them and they are now living as they express it, "With God's blessing upon them."

NEW FORM OF PUNISHMENT

Patrick Lynch, who gave Hamilton as his home address, stood up before Magistrate Dumble this morning when a drunk and disorderly charge was read.

Despite, the glorious weather, and the fact of it being Peterborough's big Fair Day, Patrick vowed he would leave the city if allowed his liberty.

He got the chance.

Legate Leaves Montreal.

Montreal, Sept. 16.—The cardinal legate said adieu to Montreal yesterday morning, when his eminence, accompanied by Mgr. Bruchesi and Mgr Tamperi, went up to Valleyfield, where four thousand people welcomed him with Mgr. Emard at their head. All the chief church institutions were visited in detail, and after dining with his lordship the cardinal left for Ottawa. At half-past six his eminence said mass at the cathedral, said adieu to all the priests at the palace and drove to the C.P.R. depot, where a great many people had gathered to wish him bon voyage.

Legate Cheered at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Sept. 16.—Cardinal Vannutelli, papal legate, who arrived in Ottawa by special train at 7 o'clock last evening, was accorded an ovation by thousands of citizens, who had gathered at the Central Station to get a glimpse of the celebrated churchman.

Secret of Good Pies

PIE CRUST, more than any other delicacy of the oven, ought to be tempting and appealing to the taste. You do not eat pie as a nerve tonic or to strengthen your appetite. You eat it for pleasure mostly.

You want it, of course, to taste good. At the same time you want the crust to be light, flaky, wholesome. Above all things you don't want it tough, indigestible and not safe to eat.

Now, pie crust properly made from OGILVIE'S ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR is always good food, the absolute uniformity of this best of all flours eliminates failure entirely. You get the same delightful results every time—more healthful, digestible and nourishing than if made from ordinary flour.

And the reason is that ROYAL HOUSEHOLD having a larger percentage of high quality gluten, assimilates more readily and is more satisfying than ordinary flour, and comes out of the oven flakier, more tender and more digestible.

Ogilvie's Royal Household Flour

Pies made from "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" taste better and are better than pies made from other flour—much more delicious, better in every way.

Be sure to try "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" when next you make pies. It is the finest flour in the world not only for pastry but for bread and all family baking.

"OGILVIES BOOK FOR A COOK" containing 125 pages of tried and tested recipes will be sent free to any user of Royal Household Flour who asks for it.

PICTONITES SWARM IN UPON PETERBORO'ITES TO NUMBER OF 600

Between six and seven hundred visitors arrived here from Picton on the C.P.R. this morning, and the weather conditions and attractions in Peterborough could hardly have been more favorable for their visit.

The excursion was under the auspices of the Catholic Order of Foresters, and the visitors embraced the opportunity of visiting the exhibition.

At noon a record business was done by the various hotels and restaurants of the city, and they were kept hustling to feed the swarm of visitors.

Large numbers also came in on the morning trains and from up the river.

Mr. George Collins, general manager of the C.O.R., and family, came here with the excursionists in his private car.

HARVEST FESTIVAL AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH WAS VERY PLEASURABLE

A most interesting service was held at St. John's Anglican church last evening, it being the annual harvest festival that has been looked forward to for some weeks. The following clergymen were present:—Rev. C. E. Seagar, of St. Cyprian's Church, Toronto; Rev. Mr. Carpenter, the assistant curate of St. John's church; Rev. Dr Langfeldt and Rev. Mr. Trumpour.

Rev. Mr Seagar gave the address, which was most appropriate for the occasion. He said:—"It was practical acknowledgement of God which was made through the harvest festival by the offering of the first fruits of His bounty and placed in His house of prayer.

Secondly, we were reminded of the love of God as seen in the harvest, and His call to us to respond to that love by grateful and joyful lives lived to His honor and glory."

The music was most inspiring, led by a choir of forty persons under the leadership of Mr. R. J. Devey. It was appropriate for the occasion.

The windows of the church, by the kindness of the Sunday school scholars and several people outside of the congregation, who made splendid donation of harvest and garden produce, were handsomely decorated. The service will be continued on Sunday night, conducted by Rev. Charles Carpenter.

Rev. J. C. Davidson drew attention to the fact that two young men of the congregation were leaving Peterborough to take University courses. He drew attention to Mr. Roland Palmer, who leaves for Toronto College and who had given splendid service to the choir and Sunday school, and Mr. Donald Denham, who has been the active and energetic secretary-treasurer of the Sunday school, who leaves for Cornell University. He expressed the appreciation of the congregation and best wishes for their success.

Mr. Palmer was presented last night with a handsome photo of St. John's church, and to-day Mr. Denham was presented with a volume of views of Canadian scenery on behalf of the Sunday school.

MURDER CLUES OFTEN TRIVIAL

Criminals are very forgetful persons. The famous series of frauds on the Bank of England by the Benson brothers a generation ago was terminated by the fact that the forgers of the drafts forgot to date the last one presented. This almost incredible blunder led to the break-up of the most dangerous band of criminals England has ever known.

An uneasy conscience gave away Dougal, the Moat Farm murderer. He had presented a forged cheque on his victim's bank account, and the clerk, not recognizing the signature, asked Dougal to wait for a few moments. Convinced that it was a trick to detain him until the police were summoned, the wretched man bolted; and that set in motion a train of suspicions that eventually resulted in the discovery of one of the most cold-blooded crimes in the history of murder.

Any detective of experience will tell you that most criminals are fools, which is a good thing in the long run for those whose business it is to detect crime.

There was a case in the Midlands nearly twenty years ago which concerned a man who spent many days planning a woman's murder and disguising his own personality so that nobody could ever suspect him of the crime. Then, when his plans were completed, he lured the unfortunate woman to a lonely place and murdered her.

He was more than astonished to find himself under arrest within an hour of the discovery of the dead body, but it was no wonderful feat of detection after all. In his haste and confusion the murderer had actually left his visiting card on the victim's body.

TOY LANTERN CLUE.

A child's penny toy lantern directly led to the hanging of Fowler and Milson for the Muswell Hill murder. It was a lucky clue, that finding of the child whose toy had been left behind in the house with the body of Mr. Smith, the murdered man. It was the property of Fowler's little brother, and the child's innocent pleasure at the recovery of his lantern was the culminating stroke in one of the greatest tragedies of the last fifty years.

Clothes played a prominent part in the Yarmouth Beach murder case of nine years ago, but it was a boot lace that finally fastened the crime on Bennett. That trivial boot lace had been used to strangle the poor woman who died where so many had found holiday happiness; and those who attended the trial will never forget the profound impression created by the production of the string.

Upon a certain occasion a prominent merchant and railway magnate was talking in the street to a friend of his, who was eminent in the service of the State. A young man passed by and, to the astonishment of the former, his companion nodded pleasantly to him. "Who was that?" asked the railway director, thinking he might have been mistaken.

"Oh, that is Mr. Blank, the well-known philanthropist."

Now, the gentleman of the railways knew Mr. Blank by another name and in a different capacity; in fact he was one of the clerks in the employ of the railway of which he was a director. Examination of the books confirmed the worst suspicions, for the pseudo philanthropist had been robbing his employers for years in order to gratify his ambition to get into society. Had it not been for that casual recognition in public the company would have lost thousands more than it did.

HIS BROTHER COULDN'T SAVE HIM

Thomas J. Blois, Switchman at Diamond, Drowned in Rice Lake--His Brother Held Him Up, But He Took in So Much Water Recusitation Couldn't be Effected--Hauling in Big Fish Caused Upset of Canoe

Mr. Thos. J. Blois, aged 53, a switchman at the railway diamond, was drowned at Rice Lake last evening as the result of a canoe upsetting when Mr. Blois was out fishing with his brother, Mr. Walter Blois, of Toronto.

FISH CAUSED UPSET.

The accident occurred about 6.30 last evening. The Messrs. Blois, who with Mr. W. Rose, 489 King street, were staying at a cottage at Hattrick's Point, were returning from Jubilee Point to Hattrick's Point and were in Rice Lake trawling, having left Jubilee about fifteen minutes, when Mr. Thomas Blois, who held the line, hooked a big fish and handed the line to his brother to haul the fish in, as he is handicapped by having one of his hands taken off.

CANOE CAPSIZED.

Mr. Walter Blois brought the fish up to the side of the boat and just as he was attempting to get it into the canoe the boat lurched and turned over in the water throwing out both occupants. They managed to hang on to the upturned canoe one on one side and one on the other and then Mr. Walter Blois, seeing that his brother was having a hard struggle of it, got astride the cenoe and clutched hold of the fast tiring man.

STRUGGLED FORTY MINUTES.

Both of them shouted for assistance but it was a long time before anybody came, when two canoes, the occupants of which could not be ascertained, came to the rescue and later a steam launch came to the aid of the men. They were in the water forty minutes, it is estimated, before their rescue was effected and as both had gone under water several times owing to the rolling of the canoe and while Mr. Walter Blois was not aware of this fact at the time the rescue was made, it was found that Mr. Thomas J. Blois had taken in so much water that he was drowned and in spite of the fact that resuscitation was attempted, all efforts were fruitless.

MR. WALTER BLOIS WAS EXHAUSTED.

As the result of keeping up his brother under such trying circumstances Mr. Walter Blois was so badly exhausted that his condition caused alarm, and when he reached shore Mr. Rose telephoned from Hiawatha, which is only a short distance from Hattrick's Point, for Comstock's ambulance and removing waggon and Mr. Walter Blois was conveyed to the late Mr. Blois' residence in the former and the body of the late Mr. Blois in the waggon.

WERE IN CHURCH.

When the news of the drowing reached the city Mrs. Blois and her daughter were at St. John's harvest festival. Rev. H. R. Trumpour, the pastor of All Saints', of which the family are members, broke the news of the drowning.

INTERVIEW WITH BROTHER.

Mr. Walter Blois, the brother of the deceased, was seen by a Review reporter shortly after one o'clock to-day at residence of his late brother.

"We had only been out from Jubilee Point about fifteen minutes when the upset took place. My brother was trawling and caught a fish. He handed the line to me and I commenced to pull in the fish. I had it nearly into boat and whether it was my efforts to land the lunge or whether it was my brother attempting to raise it into the boat with his paddle that caused the upset, I couldn't say.

CLUTCHED HIS CLOTHES.

"The canoe went over like a flash and threw both of us into the water. It rolled round and round and we grabbed hold of it whenever we got the chance and hung on it as long as we could. I said goodbye Tom, I guess it's all off with both of us. However we managed to hang on to the boat and I help on to Tom and shouted for help. The two canoes came up and when they arrived I had hold of Tom by the coat about the waist I think, and his head was lying back in the water.

WAS IT SHOCK.

"Whether he was drowned or not I cannot say. It may have been the shock and terrible struggle for his life that killed him. However, he was in the water a long while and may have taken in so much water that he was drowned. What the exact cause of is death was I really don't know.

A TERRIBLE STRUGGLE.

"I'll never forget my struggle for life as long as I live. I thought of my wife and four little children and struggled with all the strength I had in me. I tried to save Tom, poor fellow, but couldn't do it."

The late Mr. Blois is survived by his wife and one daughter, Miss Mollie, a stenographer at the Sun Life office, Hunter street, and by two brothers and two sisters. The brothers are Walter, of Toronto: John, of Detroit, and the sisters, Mrs. George Pearson, of Chicago, and Mrs. David Ellerby, of Uxbridge.

He was a member of the Woodmen of the World and carried railway insurance.

The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon at two o'clock from the late residence and proceed to the Little Lake cemetery. Rev. H. R. Trumpour and Rev. Dr. Langfeldt will officiate.

The Receipts for the Peterborough Fair Yesterday Show This Notable Record---Races Were Spirited and Grandstand Performance Was of High Merit — A Money Making Exhibition.

THERE WAS REAL CLASS TO THAT EXHIBITION YESTERDAY.

IT WAS BIG, BRIGHT AND SMART. YOU FELT YOU HAD YOUR MONEY'S WORTH AT EVERY TURN. THE RACES WERE CLEAN CUT AND EXCITING. THE VAUDEVILLE BILL BEFORE THE GRANDSTAND WAS IMMENSE. OVERSHADOWING IN MERIT AND VARIETY ANYTHING OF ITS KIND EVER SEEN AT THE FAIR BEFORE. AND THE CONCESSION MEN WITH THEIR VARIOUS DEVICES AND PERSUASIVE TALK MADE THINGS HUM IN MONEY ROWS.

IN SHORT THE SUN OF PROSPERITY SHONE ALL ROUND AND EVERYBODY MADE HAY.

AND THE MAIN HAYMAKERS FOR THE DIRECTORS WERE THE CROWDS THAT CONGESTED THE BIG GROUNDS AT ALL POINTS OF ATTRACTION AND MOVED LIKE A HUGE LANDSLIDE.

SIXTEEN HUNDRED DOLLARS FOR THE AFTERNOON. PRETTY FAIR BUSINESS. FOUR HUNDRED AND FIFTY DOLLARS MORE THAN THE MAIN DAY LAST YEAR.

BUT THE INCREASE WAS ONLY NATURAL. EVERY YEAR SINCE THE NEW BOARD HAS HAD THINGS IN HAND THE FAIR HAS STEADILY IMPROVED FROM A MEDIOCRE FALL SHOW THAT ONE MIGHT EXPECT TO SEE IN A SMALL TOWN OF 5,000 TILL IT HAS ATTAINED PROPORTIONS THAT MAKE IT A CREDITABLE EXHIBITION FOR A LIVE CITY OF 18,000.

THE DIRECTORS ARE GRATEFUL TO THE PUBLIC FOR THEIR EXTREMELY GENEROUS PATRONAGE, AND THE LATTER SHOULD BE OBLIGED TO THE DIRECTORS FOR LETTING THEM IN ON SUCH A GOOD THING.

THE RECEIPTS FOR YESTERDAY WERE $2,200. THAT MEANS A GREAT MANY ADMISSION FEES, AND SOME MORE THAT WERE EXPECTED DID NOT MATERIALIZE. FOR THE REASON THAT, MANY ONCE SAFELY INSIDE THE GROUNDS, HAD THEIR MEALS AT THE BOOTHS AND THUS SAVED ONE FEE.

The people commenced to take the uptown cars as early as twelve o'clock noon, and for the remainder of the afternoon and evening the street railway officials had to move at a smart pace. It would be ridiculous to say that the added service was able to meet the demands. But it can be said that every move of advantage was taken by them.

And it was a happy exhibition crowd inside the big grounds. Everything moved smoothly, and appeared to be in harmony with the weather. And such a glorious day, too. The summer attire was in evidence everywhere. It was a scene calculated to cheer up the crankiest pessimist. Life in all its various forms and spheres was represented there. There was the September bride and her new and attentive hubby. Then, too, old Farmer John and his near neighbor, Hank, leaned against a cattle pen and argued as to the merits of that heifer or the heavy draught team. And there was the Mrs. and Misses, the country gate-post mortgagee and the belle of that locality. Now and then could be heard parts of the day's gossip. "Well, what do you think of that?" 'Isn't that an awful hat?" "O, I think she's pretty." "I'm blessed if I can get around in this crowd." "My, those ladies must be making money to-day." "Isn't that a fine stepper?" "Doesn't she look nice in there," etc., etc.

The 20th Century Limited was a popular attraction. A nickle a run. The day wasn't complete without a ride behind that big Mogul. Youthful hearts were made glad and older ones renewed acquaintances with the days of long ago. And the proverbial merry-go-round, too, had a hand in the proceedings.

"Here you are, ice cream cones without a wait," "Take some peanuts with you," "All you have to do is place the ball in the square," "Take a try, the cane you ring the cane you carry away." "Come this was, friends; see the great Corella." Such were the shouts of the spielers on the midway. And the response was a hearty one. Here was where you stopped to take a short rest or a chance. Some one walked on your feet, if they were taking up more than their allowance. You were jostled. You got mad, but it did you no good. You took five shots—and missed—and the fever took hold of you. Another five shots, and the gold (?) headed cane was yours.

GREAT RACES.

Over what is reputed to be the finest half mile track in Canada, the horses in the 2.35, 2.22 and Colt Race stepped in lively fashion. The races afforded excellent sport for the enormous audience that filled the grandstand to overflowing and crowded the rails. The treatment of oil that was put on the track had the effect of keeping down the dust and of making fine footing for the horses.

With nearly every heat a race the enthusiasts certainly were in clover, and keen appreciation was shown of the several neck in neck drives down the stretch.

A STRANGE MURDER NEAR NORWOOD

MYSTERY AS DEEP AS THE BARTON MURDER OR THE KINRADE CASE NOW FACES US

Mrs. Hugh Deline Found Dead by Her Husband on Thursday Evening Last When He Went Home From Work.

Her Face Was Scratched, Lump Behind the Right Ear, Her Hands Were Bruised and Her Wrists Give Appearance of Having Been Bound--Inquest Opens and Adjourns Till Friday Night -- The County is Excited Over the Affair.

On Thursday night as Hugh Deline came home from work he found his wife lying dead in the woodshed, or summer kitchen.

In this affair all the elements of a mystery equalling the Barton murder case, the Bannon murder, the Kinrade case or the case of the old man found dead in his barnyard near Hamilton are not missing.

It is not who killed the woman so much at first glance as how was she killed.

Hugh Deline is 24 years of age. He is employed by Mr. Samuel Buchanan, who lives on the 12th line of Dummer, and last Thursday night left for his home about seven o'clock. He called when he entered the house, it is said, but there was no reply. He called again. Still no answer. Then he entered the woodshed. His wife, he says, was lying on the floor dead. He arried home at 8.30. Making a hasty examination Mr. Deline says that he at once went to the nearest neighbor and gave the alarm. In the language of the street his nearest neighbor, Mrs. Newell, is fifteen minutes away. But it is stated that he did not arrive there until

ABOUT TEN O'CLOCK.

To Mrs. Newell he told the story in laconic words. The neighbors were at once alarmed and then the woodshed was again visited.

THE BODY.

A hasty examination showed that the face was badly scratched. It looked like the scratch of nails. The wrists were discolored. It looked as if they had been tied. There was a bruise behind the ear. It had the appearance of responding to a blow from a club. There was a scalp wound.

WAS IT AN OUTRAGE?

Mrs. Deline had been badly maltreated. Had she been outraged? What was the motive for murder? The Deline residence is half a mile from the road. It is in a lonely spot. It is just the place where a vagrant tramp might wander. Here screams would be useless. Here the loudest outcry would die away unanswered. Was Mrs. Deline outraged by a tramp and murdered?

THE VISIT.

When Hugh Deline aroused Mrs. Newell those who went back to the woodshed were Sam Buchanan and Matthew and John Little. After the examination mentioned the body was not touched, but it was not until yesterday morning that when Deline drove to Havelock and notified Coroner Kindred.

THE ALARM WAS GIVEN

The coroner immediately acted and Constable Bennet, the Havelock constable, was placed on the case. The preliminary opening of the inquest was held last evening, when after viewing the body, an adjournment was made until Friday night next at Havelock. The foreman of the jury is Herbert Bennet, and when they meet again it is hoped that there will be some interesting information to offer.

THE FAMILY.

Hugh Deline met his wife in the northern part of Madoc. She is also a native of the section of the country, and is the daughter of Mr. George Parks, a resident of that locality. There are two children, boys, one three years, and the other five months of age.

THE HOME.

As stated, the home of the Dummer family is situated one half mile off the road half way between the twelfth concession boundary line between Dummer and Belmont.

HOME LIFE WAS HAPPY.

Their home life was uneventful and and happy, as far as the neighbors knew. They were two young people. He a farmer's help and she a farmer's helper's wife. Watson Parks, the North School House, Belmont, in conversation with a Review representative last night, said that he had lived near them for a year, and that so far as he knew, their family relations were of the happiest. Mr. Parks is a cousin of the deceased.

WAS IT A TRAMP?

It does not seem possible that suspicion should point its finger to the husband thus left with two little children. Last night when a newspaper representative called at the home, Mr. Deline was asleep, and when roused rubbed his eyes as a man who had been in sound sleep, exclaiming, Oh! Oh! Oh!

LATER.

The victim was not outraged. In correspondence with Dr. Holdcroft at one o'clock to-day at Havelock, this fact was made plain. Dr. Holdcroft and Dr. Ford made the post-mortem examination yesterday, and this was their finding.

"Were there any marks of outrage?"

"None," was the reply.

"There were scratches on the face and a mark behind the ear, doctor?"

"There were several wounds on the body," was again the answer.

A SUMMARY.

Briefly noted, the facts of the case are these, that on Thursday night Hugh Deline left the farm of Samuel Buchanan, where he was employed, and went home. He arrived, according to his statement, at 8.30. He found his wife dead. He alarmed Mrs. Russell, a neighbor, about 15 minutes' distant, at 10 o'clock. He notified the coroner the next morning. The preliminary opening of the inquest was held last night. The next sitting will be in Havelock on Friday. The woman's face was badly scratched, her right ear was discolored, her hands were lacerated as though rough fingers had held them. Her wrists looked as if they were bound. There was a scalp wound. No one had been seen enter or leave the place that day.

CONSTABLE BENNET SPEAKS

To the Review this afternoon Constable Fred Bennet said that the examination revealed additional bruises on the right shoulder and one on the left elbow.

"Have you seen any suspicious characters around lately?"

"No, not lately, although a short while ago there were a couple of tough looking fellows about. But they escaped before we could get them."

NO CAUSE FOUND.

"What is the opinion of the authorities as to the cause of death?" asked the reporter.

"I cannot say," was the reply. "It is thought that she was struggling with some assailant and died of shock"

"Was there any evidence of an attempt upon her honor?"

"None whatever," was the reply.

"Have you any one under suspicion?"

"Not now."

"It is all unexplainable?"

"It is as yet."

And thus we face one of the most mysterious murders in this part of the country.

SPECIAL.

From Our Havelock Correspondent.

HUSBAND INTERVIEWED.

Hugh Deline, the husband of the deceased, when seen by your correspondent at his home, in a lonely spot in Northern Belmont, eight miles from Havelock, said that his wife was in good health when he left home in the morning at 5 o'clock. Returning at eight o'clock at night he found his wife lying dead on the floor of the back wood-shed. He ran for neighbors who found her there and two little children, two months and five years old, alone in the bedroom, crying for their mother.

SUPPER OVER.

Death must have come late in the day, as the mother and children had completed their evening meal.

No one had seen the deceased during the day, but that was not unusual, isolated as they were, about a mile back in the woods from the main road.

The deceased was twenty-four years old, her maiden name being Telisa Parks. She was raised in Madoc township, where her parents still reside.

The body was brought to Havelock to-day, where a post mortem is being held.

"THE BOWERY" IT MUST ALWAYS BE

New York, Sept. 17.—"They will only change the name of the Bowery over my dead body," angrily shouted "Big Tim" Sullivan yesterday, to a delegation of gentlemen workers who called to enlist his aid in having the historic old thoroughfare named Third avenue.

"It would be an outrage to have the Bowery known as anything but the Bowery," he continued. "The trouble has been the Bowery people have been misunderstood. The Bowery has been pictured as a place where people have been waylaid and robbed. This is false. The Bowery, either by day or by night, is safer than Fifth avenue."

Successor to Sbaretti.

Montreal, Sept. 17.—Credence is lent in semi-official circles to the report that Mgr. Sbaretti, now absent in Rome, will not return to Canada to resume the duties of papal ablegate.

For some time past Rev. Father Lepetier, superior-general of the Sulpicians, has been in Canada making an extensive tour throughout the Dominion.

In certain quarters this prolonged stay is regarded as an indication of the possibility of his appointment to the legation at Ottawa.

Painting the Senate.

Ottawa, Sept. 17.—Workmen are busy repainting and redecorating the Senate chamber in view of the coming to Canada next year of the Duke of Connaught.

The old coat of paint was another of the links with the past that has gone. The last order for paint was given twenty-five years ago by Sir John A. Macdonald.

The new coat will be ready for the opening of Parliament, on or about Nov. 10.

THE Q.O.R. BOYS IN LONDON GIVEN SPLENDID RECEPTION

Inspected by Mr. Haldane and "Bobs."

Thousands of Londoners Watch March of Visitors Through Streets to Guild Hall.

London, Sept. 17.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Minister of War Haldane and Lord Roberts inspected the Queen's Own yesterday morning.

Lord Roberts, who arrived first, addressed the men, observing that as an honorary colonel of the regiment, he wished to bid them welcome in person. A great step was made towards the unification of the British army when the Canadian regiment and contingents from Australia, New Zealand, and Tasmania so loyally and so promptly came forward to take their part in the South African war. To-day another very important step was made in the visit of the Queen's Own, in order to take part in the manoeuvres, he said.

"I wish I could make you understand how thoroughly I appreciate the loyalty and soldierly spirit which induced you to take this long voyage and undergo the certain amount of work and discomfort for the sake of the Mother Country, and to say how thoroughly I believe that your action will do much to strengthen the bond that unites her and her children on the other side of the Atlantic," said "Bobs."

Mr. Haldane, addressing the men, said: "This is an occasion, this visit of your regiment to these shores, which has deeply stirred the imagination, not only of the people at home in these islands, but of the Empire."

The march cityward then commenced, and along the entire route of five miles, people were massed on every point of view, and the Q.O.R. met with a magnificent reception. Arriving at Guild Hall, the men stacked their arms in the hallways, and the officers were welcomed by the Lord Mayor in his library.

The Times says it is because all Englishmen regard the Q.O.R. as a component and valuable part of the "Imperial army" that they are so warmly welcomed. The zeal which they have shown during the manoeuvres, their discipline and their fine soldierly qualities have made a deep impression.

The Daily Graphic says Col. Pellatt said that the employers of all the men of the Q.O.R. are paying their wages during the trip, and that clearly there are some things they do better in colonies.

The Standard says the reception represents a very genuine feeling, wherein the whole nation unites.

The fact that Winnipeg is now the greatest wheat centre of the world is announced in triumph, and is received here with the greatest gratification.

FLAX IS SCARCE PRICE IS HIGH

Montreal, Que., Sept. 17.—"Never in the history of the trade have the wholesale paint manufacturers been called upon to face such a serious problem as now confronts them in the shortage of their principal raw stuff, turpentine," was the statement made yesterday in an interview with C. C. Ballentyne, managing director of the Canadian division of the Sherwin-Williams' Paint & Varnish Co. The chief cause of the scarcity and corresponding high prices of paint was, Mr. Ballantyne explained, not so much due to the failure of the flax seed harvest as it was to the total inadequacy of the crop to meet the enormously increased demand for the commodity under discussion.

At Fort William the price of flax yesterday was $2.53 a bushel, exactly $1 a bushel more than it was a year ago. Paints have increased in price about 25 per cent. this year.

DEFEAT WAS A SORE BLOW

Johannesburg, South Africa, Sept. 17.—The position of the parties, as a result of the first election for the Parliament of United South Africa, is now:

Nationalists, 52.
Unionists, 36.
Labor, 4.
Independents, 10.

A report that Rt. Hon. Louis Botha will resign the Premiership is unconfirmed. For several minutes after the confirmation of his defeat at the poll, Botha, who is not strong, was speechless and livid.

Minister of Commerce Moor is defeated, making three Ministers down. Nationalists are in consternation at the results of the elections.

The fear that extremists will rule is probably dealt a death blow.

The Unionist majorities are large, and 16 or 17 seats in the Orange Free State have gone solidly Unionist. The state will probably refuse to support the Government except on its own terms. Each man is pledged to extend Hertzogism.

NOT CRIPPEN BUT LUNATIC

London, Sept. 17.—Two more of the Government's witnesses in the Dr. H. H. Crippen murder hearing admitted on the stand yesterday that they were unable to determine definitely the sex of the body supposed to be that of Belle Elmore Crippen.

Dr. W. H. Wilcox, the Home Office analyst, testified that the character and position of the organs submitted to him proved that they were from a human body, and that "probably the body was that of a female."

B. H. Spilsbury, one of the leading pathologists of London, would not go even this far, frankly admitting that he was unable to determine the sex from a microscopical study of the remains.

"The person believed to have been Mrs. Belle Elmore Crippen met death through the administering of a dose of hyoscin," said Dr. Wilcox in his evidence. "This dose, while somewhat more than the amount required to produce death, was near enough to the exact amount required for fatal results to indicate expert judgment in preparing the dose. I am satisfied that death followed within an hour of the administering of the poison."

Inspector Dew, on cross-examination, admitted that up to the finding of the body, he had no suspicion that a crime had been committed.

According to one report, Crippen's defence will include a contention that before Crippen occupied the house in which the body was found, the tenant was a murderous lunatic, who is now confined in an asylum. The body, he will say, was that of a victim of this insane man, and was buried in the cellar before Crippen moved into the house.

BIG BUILDING COLLAPSES

Winnipeg, Sept. 17.—An accident, which almost resulted in the loss of many lives, occurred here yesterday morning when the building owned and occupied by the Manitoba Clothing Co. collapsed a few minutes after the alarm had been given, and everybody got out safe.

A large hotel is being built next to the building, and the Manitoba Clothing Co. blame the contractor for undermining them. There were between 40 and 50 employes of the company at work when Max Goldstein, the proprietor, noticed some plaster falling. He got everybody out just in time.

The loss may reach $75,000, including lost time, building and stock.

"I HONESTLY BELIEVE 'FRUIT-A-TIVES'

The Greatest Cure For Rheumatism In The World"

KNOWLTON, QUE., Oct. 12th. 1909.

"For many years, I suffered from severe Rheumatism, and the attacks were very distressing and prevented me from doing my ordinary work. I tried many remedies and physicians' treatments, but nothing seemed to do me much good, and I was becoming very anxious for fear I would become a permanent cripple from the disease.

I tried "Fruit-a-tives" and this medicine has entirely cured me and I honestly believe it is the greatest Rheumatism cure in the world."

E. E. MILLS.

Such a statement could not be bought from a man like Mr. Mills. He thinks too much of his good name, to sell it or sign it to an untruth. Mr. Mills tried "Fruit-a-tives" after all other treatment failed—and "Fruit-a-tives" cured him of Rheumatism. In the goodness of his heart, he wrote the above letter in order that sufferers in all parts of Canada would know that there is one remedy that actually does cure Rheumatism. This testimonial was entirely unsolicited on our part. We did not know that Mr Mills was taking "Fruit-a-tives" until we received the above letter.

It is a case like Mr. Mills' that proves the marvellous powers of "Fruit-a-tives" in arresting and curing disease. It may be stated, without fear of contradiction, that "Fruit-a-tives" will positively cure Rheumatism when properly used.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices and is the greatest Rheumatism cure known to modern science.

A TWICE BORN MAN

Sam Luttral, of Denver, will be here on the 2nd of October. Sam used to be a bum. He lost all his money; he lost his job; he lost his good clothes; he lost his wife and children, his self-respect. Then he entered the tramp class. To-day Mr. Luttral is a preacher. Just how he became a preacher is one of the miracles of the day. However, Sam is going to be here on Sunday, October 2nd, health and weather permitting, and commence a week's services in the Park Street Baptist church. When a man who was a real booze fighter commences to preach and is on the level he usually makes a success. What does an ordinary minister know about the troubles and trials of a tank, a gambler or a track shark? Nothing. He was always on the outside looking in. The other fellow has been on the inside and knows just what he is talking about. Welcome, Sam, there is lots of material here for you to work on.

NOT DEAD

Walt Mason is not dead, We apologize for all the good things we said about him yesterday and, come to think about it perhaps we were mistaken. The Calgary News in the west published a fine editorial obituary far more searching than ours. And the Kingston Standard made note of the sad fact that his editorial and rhyme slinging inkpot was closed on earth for ever. The Toronto Star yesterday published the following;

Mr. Msaon's prose poems now appear in journals representing a total circulation of 10,000,000 a day — the largest circulation addressed by any American. Mr. Mason now is getting every week over fifty good hard iron dollars for this and he gets half as much more every week from the Chicago News. He averaged $400 a month for his writings this year, and probably is the best paid poet on earth.

The next time Walt Mason dies we want an autograph letter from him certifying to the fact that he is dead.

FINE SPECIAL ISSUE

The Special Edition of the Watchman Warder is on the table. It is a clean and creditable issue of 32 pages. Lindsay is reflected throughout in the liberal advertisements and the faces of many prominent citizens adorn its pages. Not blotches, but pictures, clear cut and plain, not pimpled and warty, but human, recognizable photographs, The Watchman-Warder is now in order to congratulate itself and raise the devil's salary.

UPWARDITIS

Up has gone the price of chicken, up has gone the egg. It takes no long stretch of memory to recall the days of chickens fifty cents a pair, and eggs ten and twelve cents a dozen. Now our friend, the oyster, seized with the boost microbe, has the UPWARDITIS, and advanced in price till he becomes far more visionary to most of us than ever before. Once, when we had gathered together the necessary we marched boldly in and demanded an oyster stew. We always discovered one oyster and sometimes two, and went out satisfied, for we knew that the restaurant keeper had the rent to pay and others besides ourselves to serve. But now, alas, with UPWARDITIS in the air, we fear that we shall have to sup our oyster soup without ever capturing the oyster. However, we submit peacefully, for we always have a chance—perhaps the keeper of the eating house might let one slip in by mistake. UPWARDITIS, it's in the air. Will it stay with us? UPWARDITIS went the balloons at the fair last night. They were inflated. Up with a rush towards the stars, dimmer and dimmer, till at last they became as a star. Then darkness. Upwarditis, that's what sent up the oyster, that's what sent up the balloon. However, the balloon is down, and the oyster is still up, and so is even the price of the ancient cow with his walrus beefsteak.

HUNTERS TROUBLES VIA OTTAWA

The Ottawa authorities are going to give hunting with dogs a black eye this year if they persist in carrying out their regulation preventing the transport of dogs out of the infected area into the hunting grounds. This seems foolish. Men will hunt, dogs or no dogs. Dogs are prohibited in Wisconsin. Here are the figures. In Wisconsin in 1907 51 were killed and 66 injured, total, 117. In 1908, 23 were killed and 36 injured, total 59. That's quite a slaughter. If all the bodies were laid in a row it would be a ghastly sight, these 74 dead. Yes, men will hunt, dogs or no dogs, and if the Government persists it may be the means of having created a few more widows and orphans. The chances for rabies spreading are slim. If they do, if bitten, go to Pasteur Institute. However, when a man is shot and killed no serum is yet found to make him sit up and take notice.

SCANDALOUS

We do not want to be guilty of giving away state secrets, but we must say, and we say it sorrowfully that many of the editors of the papers that come to our office are guilty of a great offence. They send to us their issues wrapped up in sheets of blue books. Now isn't that scandalous. The Blue books, those precious books that tell us everything, those books that keep hundreds of men feeding at the treasury crib, that keep printers and presses, wise men, statisticians and politicians busy year in and year out, these, no less, used as wrappers for newspapers. This is terrible. How can they expect to get FACTS AND FIGURES for the electors when the campaign draws nigh? Gentlemen of the Ink pot, you are burning your bridges after you. We prefer to use these blue books for table weights, they are so heavy.

LIBERAL GOVERNMENT'S POLICY

Never was the policy of the Laurier government more decisively announced than by Mr. E. M, Macdonald, the chief of the famous "Blocker's Brigade," when he told the people of Lethbridge that they could not hope to get a post offfice while they continued to vote Conservative. "The question of the post office itself is of minor concern to the rest of the country however important it may be to the inhabitants of the Alberta town. But what does concern the people as a whole is the cynical declaration made by Mr. Macdonald in the presence of the Premier himself that the expenditure of public money is to be made only in those localities which are loyal to Laurierism. Mr. Macdonald's candor is refreshing. Mr. Macdonald's seem to regard the public monies of Canada as the means with which to bribe constituencies. The taxpayer in their estimation, ranks with the favored contractors in providing the sinews of war with which to wage political campaigns. The people's money is used to debauch the electorate. Really Canada should be grateful to the member for Pictou for his unblushing description of the inner workings of Laurierism.

The barnstorming tour of the west which the Premier and his little band of political comedians have just concluded was not crowned with that success which the party managers confidently expected. Thousands flocked to see Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the same way as they would drive in many miles to see a circus. And the whole thing was, in its way, a travelling show. There was the car of scenery which went ahead in order that when the leading actor did reach a town he might find mottoes of welcome and bunting, and all the accessories to the average western farmer's sense of humor.. Never has such an effort been made to exploit any political leader, and never did the sham and hollowness of fictitious fame be more thoroughly exposed. The Laurier bubble was pricked at the outset. The hard-headed western farmers came to see Laurier, not to hear him, and all they saw was a vain old man, foolishly fond of adulation, feeding on the servile flattery of sycophantic followers, with the ability of being able to pronounce obvious platitudes with the air of a savant proclaiming the very essence of wisdom.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL AND THE MOVING PICTURES

To-morrow little Willie and Mary will go to Sunday school. Mother will brush her hair and put on her best Sunday dress. Willie will be told to keep clean and go straight to school and not to stay away from home too long afterwards. He grows, with his growing he knows that the world is large and Sunday school seems smaller and less inviting. He does not want to go. Sometimes moral suasion or the slat across the rear is necessary to show him that Sunday school is the place for all lads on Sunday afternoon. Mary, little jewel; goes willingly with her Bible under her arm. Willie will put his in his pocket. Now, a Detroit Sunday school has jumped into the gap and is teaching the Bible by the aid of the moving picture. Don't be shocked, "Early Christians" was the title of a lecture by Herbert Booth, given in Peterborough a few weeks ago aided by moving pictures. No more in Detroit will Willie have to be persuaded to go to Sunday school. He will be there rain or shine. The problem has been solved. Make the lesson interesting and the question of holding the Sunday school scholar will be settled in an instant.

WITHOUT THE PALE

A man died in Winnipeg this week from consumption. The poor fellow had tried to secure admittance to a hospital. But he couldn't, and died without the pale. Now, isn't that too bad? They have a place for scarlet fever, for diphtheria in Winnipeg. BUT HERE IS A POOR WRETCH IN THIS YEAR OF OUR LORD, 1910, IN THE GREAT WESTERN METROPOLIS, AFTER A FINE CROP, WHOM THEY SHUT OUT.

In Toronto some years ago, after a vain effort to secure admission to a hospital, and at last, being admitted, a poor woman died on the street, bled to death within the shadow of the City Hall. She, too, had consumption. There was no ambulance. She had no money. For many days the red blotch was silent witness to God of an injustice to humanity, for it was there, a stain within a toss of the three-million-dollar pile erected by the people. How is it that in this land of churches and preachers and church members such things happen? Oh! it is natural—they were hard up, that's all. The poor woman in Toronto was penniless. Had she been rich she would not have had consumption. It would have been called something else.

DO YOU CATCH THE IDEA?

The Round-Up

A Romance of Arizona

Novelized From Edmund Day's Melodrama

By JOHN MURRAY and MILLS MILLER

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

Grasping his friend's hand weakly, he faltered, "Dick—Dick Lane!"

Jack realized he must act quickly. Some way or somehow Dick must be kept out of the house until after the marriage. Then he, Jack, must take the consequences. Dick saw his hesitation. It was not what he had expected. But something dreadful might have happened while he was away, there had been so many changes.

"Why, what's the matter?" he asked anxiously. "You got my letter? You knew I was coming?"

"Yes, yes, I know," lamely answered Jack. "But I expected notice. You know you said"—

"I couldn't wait. Jack, I'm a rich man, thanks to you"—

"Yes, yes; that's all right," said Payson, disclaiming the praise of the man he had so grievously wronged with a hurried acknowledgment of his gratitude.

"And I hurried back for fear Echo"—

"Oh, yes. I'll tell her about it when she's ready to hear it."

"What is the matter, Jack? Are you keeping something from me? Where is she?"

"In there," said Payson feebly, pointing to the door.

Dick eagerly started toward the house, but Jack halted him, saying: "No, you mustn't go in now. There's a party—you see, she hasn't been well; doesn't expect you tonight. The shock might be too much for her."

Jack grasped at the lame excuse. It was the first to come to his mind. He must think quickly. This experience was tearing the heart out of him. He could not save himself from betrayal much longer.

"You're right," acquiesced Dick. "You tell her when you get a chance. Jack, as I was saying, I've made quite a bit of money out of my Bisbee holdings. I can pay back my stake to you now."

"Not now," said Jack nervously.

Would this torture never end? Here was his friend, whom he had betrayed, come back in the very hour of his marriage to the woman who had promised first to marry him. Now he was offering him money, which Jack needed badly, for his prospective mother-in-law was complaining about his taking her daughter to a mortgaged home.

"Sure, now," continued Dick, pulling a roll of bills from his pocket. "It's $3,000. Here it is, all in one bundle."

"Not now. Let that wait," said Jack, pushing the money aside.

"It's waited long enough," cried Dick doggedly. "You put the mortgage on your ranch to let me have the money, and it must be about due now."

"Yes, it will be due, but let it wait."

"What's the use? I'm all right now. I brought the cash with me on purpose. I wanted to square it with you on sight."

Dick pressed the money into Jack's hand, closing his fingers over the roll of bills. With a sigh of relief, as if a disagreeable task was completed, he questioned, "How's Bud?"

Jack replied shortly, "All right; he's inside."

"I didn't write to him," cheerfully resumed Dick. "I didn't want the kid to know. He is so excitable he would have blabbed it right out. I'll sure be glad to see the boy again. He's impulsive, but his heart's all right. I know you've kept a lookout over him."

This trust in him was getting too much for Jack to bear, so the voice of Polly crying to him to hurry up was music to his ears. "I'm coming," he shouted. "I'll see you in a few minutes," he told Dick. "I've something to tell you. I can't tell you now."

"Go in, then," answered Dick. "I'll wait yonder in the garden. Don't keep me waiting any longer than you can help."

Dick turned and walked slowly toward the gate which led to the kitchen garden, a part of every ranch home in Arizona. It was cut off from the house by a straggling hedge, on which Echo had spent many hours trying to keep it in shape.

Jack hesitated about going into the house. Even if Echo married him he knew that she would never forgive him when she learned of his dastardly conduct from Dick Lane's own mouth. It was better to sacrifice the life of one to save three lives from being ruined.

Jack followed Lane up, partly drawing his gun. It would be so easy to shoot him. No one would recognize Dick Lane in that crippled figure. Jack's friends would believe him if he told them the stranger had drawn on him and he had to shoot him in self defense.

Then the thought of how dastardly was the act of shooting a man in the back, and he his trusting friend, smote him suddenly, and he replaced the pistol in its holster. "It is worse than the murder of 'Old Man' Terrill," he muttered.

Dick walked on, entirely unconscious of how close he had been to death, with his friend as his murderer.

So interested had the two men been in their conversation that neither had noticed Buck McKee hiding behind the hedge, listening to their talk and covering Jack Payson when he was following Dick with his hand on his revolver. McKee heard Payson's ejaculation and smiled grimly.

Jack's absence had aroused Jim Allen, who hurried out on the porch, storming. "Say, Jack, what do you mean by puttin' the brakes on this here weddin'?"

"Jim—say, Jim, I—I want you to do something for me!" cried Jack as he rushed toward his future father-in-law, greatly excited.

"Sure," answered Allen heartily.

Neither had noticed Buck McKee

"Stand here at this door during the ceremony and, no matter what happens, don't let any one in."

"But"— interrupted Allen.

"Don't ask me to explain," blurted Jack. "Echo's happiness is at stake."

"That settles it. I've not let any one spile her happiness yet, an' I won't in the few minutes that are left while I'm still her main protector. Nobody gets in."

"Remember, no one, no matter who it is," emphasized Jack as he darted into the house.

Jim Allen lighted his pipe. "Now, what's eatin' him?" he muttered to himself; then, "They're off!" he cried, looking through the window.

The Rev. Samuel Price began to drone the marriage service.

It is the little things of life that count, after all. Men will work themselves into hysteria over the buzzing of a fly and yet plan a battleship in a boiler shop. A city full of people will at one time become panic stricken over the burning of a rubbish heap and at another camp out in the ruins of fire swept homes, treating their miseries as a huge joke.

Philosophers write learnedly of cause and effect. In chemistry certain combinations give certain results. But no man can say, "I will do thus and so; this and that will follow." All things are possible, for few things are probable.

Dick Lane had planned to shield Echo by writing to Jack Payson, letting him break the news of his return. Fate would have it that she would not know until too late of his escape. A letter sent directly to her might have prevented much unhappiness and many heartaches. Not till months later, when happiness had returned, did Jack realize that his one great mistake was made by not telling Echo of Dick's rescue.

Both Dick and Echo might have had a change of heart when they met again. Echo was young. Dick had wandered far. Both had lost touch with common interests. Jack Payson had entered her life as a factor. He was eager and impetuous. Dick was settled and world worn by hardship and much physical suffering. Now Jack was at the altar racked with mental torture, while Dick waited in the garden for his traitorous friend. The innocent cause of the tragedy was sweetly and calmly replying to the questions of the marriage ritual, while Jack was looking, as Allen said to himself, "darned squeamish."

"According to these words, it is the will of God that nothing shall sever the marriage bond," were the words that fell upon Allen's ears as he stooped to look in the window at the wedding party.

"The sky pilot's takin' a long time to make the hitch. Darned if I couldn't hitch up a twenty mule team in the time that he's takin' to get them two to the pole," said Allen, speaking to himself.

Dick had grown impatient at Jack's absence and wandered back from the garden to the front of the house. Spying Allen, he greeted him with, "Hello, Uncle Jim."

"That's my name," answered Allen suspiciously, "but I ain't uncle to every stranger that comes along."

"I'm no stranger," laughed Dick. "You know me."

"Do I?" replied Allen unconvinced. "Who are you?"

"The poor orphan you took from an asylum and made a man of—Dick Lane."

"Dick Lane!" repeated the astonished ranchman. "Come back from the dead!"

"No; I'm not dead yet," answered Dick, holding out his hand, which Allen gingerly grasped as if he expected to find it thin air. "I wasn't killed. I have been in the hospital for a long time. I wrote Jack. He knows."

"My God!" Allen cried. "Jack knows—you wrote to him—he knows!" Over and over he repeated the astonishing news which had been broken to him so suddenly. Here was a man, as if back from the dead, standing in his own dooryard, telling him that Jack knew he was alive. No word had been told him. What would Echo say? This, then, explained Jack's strange request and his distress.

"And Echo?" Dick questioned, glancing toward the house.

"Echo!" The name aroused Allen. He saw at once that he must act definitely and quickly. Echo must not see Dick now. It was too late. The secret of his return on the wedding day must be known only to the three men.

"Look here, Dick," he commanded. "You mustn't let her see you. She mustn't know you are alive."

Dick was growing confused over the mystery which was being thrown about Echo Allen. First Jack had told him he must wait to see her, and now her father tells him he must never see her again or let her know that he is alive. His strength was being overtaxed by all this evasion and delay.

"Dick," said Allen, with deep sympathy, laying his hand upon the man's shoulder, "she's my daughter, an' I want her life to be happy. Can't you see? Don't you understand? She thinks you're dead."

"What are you saying?" cried Dick, trying to fathom the riddle.

"You've come back too late, Dick," sadly explained Allen.

"Too late!" echoed Dick. "There's something back of all this. I'll see her now."

He started to enter the door, but Allen restrained him. "You can't go in!" he shouted to the excited man and pushed him down the steps. It was an easy task for him, for Dick was too weak to offer much resistance. "No, you won't," he gently told him. His heart bled for the poor fellow, whom he loved almost as a son, but Echo's happiness was at stake, and explanations could come later. More to emphasize his earnestness than to indicate intention to shoot, he laid his hand on the butt of his revolver, saying. "Not if I have to kill you."

Dick began to realize that whatever was wrong was of the greatest consequence. It was a shock to him to have his oldest, his best friend in the west treat him in this fashion.

"Jim!" he cried in his anguish.

ST. VITUS DANCE

A Striking Example of its Cure by the Tonic Treatment

St. Vitus dance is the commonest form of nervous trouble which afflicts children because of the great demands made on the body by growth and development, and there is the added strain caused by study. It is when these demands become so great that they impoverish the blood, and the nerves fail to receive their full supply of nourishment, that the nervous debility which leads to St. Vitus dance.

The remarkable success of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in curing St. Vitus dance should lead parents to give their children this great blood-building medicine at the first signs of the approach of the disease. Pallor, listlessness, inattention, restlessness and irritability are all symptoms which early show that the blood and nerves are failing to meet the demands made upon them. Mrs. A. Winters, Virden, Man., says: "When my little girl was six years old she was attacked with scarlatina, which was followed by St. Vitus dance. Her limbs would jerk and twitch. Her speech became affected, and at last she became so weak that she could scarcely walk, and we hardly dared trust her alone. She was under the care of a doctor, but in spite of this was steadily growing worse, and we feared that we would lose her. As Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had cured her older sister of anaemia I decided to try them again. After the use of a few boxes, to our great joy, we found they were helping her, and in the course of a few weeks more her power of speech fully returned, and she could walk and go about as well as any child, and she has been well and healthy since. When illness come to any one of our family now, we never call in a doctor, but simply use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and they never disappoint us."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Understanding Is Reached.

Tokio, Sept. 16.—Asserting that it has the highest authority for denying the report that the visit of Herr Dernberg to Japan presages a German-Japanese convention, The Osaka Mainichi declares that the Japanese Foreign Office believes the German Crown Prince's visit to China is the outcome of an alliance or intimate understanding between Germany, America and China, which will probably be announced in March, 1911.

Tim Candy Will Hang.

Montreal, Sept. 16.—Tim Candy, who shot and killed two constables because they tried to recover some rubber boots he had stolen, was found guilty yesterday afternoon and sentenced by Justice St. Pierre to be hanged on the 18th of November.

Candy made a long plea for mercy, saying that the second-hand man tempted him to steal them. The revolver was pointed low and he did not intend to kill.

Borden Goes Camping.

LADIES' YOKE SKIRT.

All Seams Allowed.

The novel skirt which we show on this page is also very attractive. The popular yoke is, in this case, cut in three pieces, a front and two back sections, with the closing at the left side. The lower part is in two pieces—that is, cut on a fold front and back and the seams on each side; the plaits turn away from center-front and back and meet at the sides. This skirt will look well develeped in broadcloth, serge, cheviot or velveteen. The pattern (5143) is cut in sizes 22 to 30 inches waist measure. To make the skirt in medium size will require 3⅝ yards of material 44 inches wide, or 3½ yards 50 inches wide.

The above pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

ANOTHER WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Gardiner, Maine.—"I have been a great sufferer from organic troubles and a severe female weakness. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but I could not bear to think of it. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash—and was entirely cured after three months' use of them."—Mrs. S. A. Williams, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner, Me.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made exclusively from roots and herbs, a fair trial.

This famous medicine for women has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and renewer of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It cures female ills, and creates radiant, buoyant female health. If you are ill, for your own sake as well as those you love, give it a trial.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

A SERIOUS ILLNESS RELIEVED BY PE-RU-NA.

MRS. WILLIAM HENDERSON, Craik, N. W. T., Can., writes:

"I was troubled with very serious internal weakness, which exhausted me so that I feared I would lose my mind.

"I suffered agony with my back, the pain extending down my left leg. The pain was so severe that I would have welcomed death as a relief.

"Peruna cured me of this trouble,—no wonder I recommend it so highly.

"It will soon be two years since I found relief from the pain and not a sign of it has returned.

"I am glad that there is a way in which I can speak of this, as many a sufferer may read my testimonial, and not only read, but believe."

Had Given Up All Hope.

Mlle. Albina Chauvin, No. 50 Rue Agnes. St. Henri, Montreal, Canada, writes:

"I consider Peruna better than any other remedy, as it cured me when nothing else could.

"I suffered for years and years with heart trouble, headaches and weakness. I never expected to find anything to cure me.

"I tried Peruna and am entirely cured."

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 17.—"Alf" Robertson, formerly of Toronto, fireman, when he was famous as the drum-major of the Toronto Highlanders, and for several years past a member of the Winnipeg police force, shot and killed himself in the ladies' lavatory of the Ottawa express this morning, just as the train was nearing the city.

The suicide followed a night of dissipation, during which the man attempted the lives of two other men.

Robertson had been in Ottawa following a trip to Kingston in connection with a police case.

THE MARKET SOLD OUT EARLY; FARMERS BUSY AT HOME NOW AND THAT IS THE REASON WHY AND IT WAS SMALL TO-DAY

You were on the market square this morning and no doubt noticed the small attendance and wondered what caused it. There were two reasons given by different farmers. One stated that the farmers are very busy just at present, and another that the exhibition was the cause of the meagre attendance. Large numbers of farmers were down at the grounds this morning.

Nearly all produce was quickly bought up this morning, several having sold out by 10.30. An abundance of chickens and tomatoes was noticeable.

IT WAS A DISASTEROUS BLAZE THAT RAZED A HOME LAST NIGHT IN NORTH MONAGHAN

The home of Mr. Andrew Dobbin, two miles out of the Gravel Road in North Monaghan, was razed to the ground last evening by a disastrous fire.

No one but an elderly lady who resides there was near the house when the fire started. She was out in the yard looking after the milking of a couple of cows. Mr. Dobbin was in Norwood at the time.

The fire started in the chimney. The sparks rapidly ignited the roof and in an incredibly short time, the flames through the house. The woman alarmed the neighborhood, who soon arrived at the scene. Their efforts to save the furniture was useless and everything was destroyed.

This is the second occasion on which Mr. Dobbin has been burned out. The first time the house and barn also were destroyed.

MORE SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR CHIMES FUND

Most kind contributions to the chimes fund have been received from Miss Woodgate, formerly superintendent of the Barnardo Home here, and from Miss Gibbs, formerly visitor of the same institution. Both ladies were regular and valued members of St. John's, and they write with warm interest in its work. Miss Woodgate is superintendent of the Village Home at Northern Devonshire, and Miss Gibbs' work has been in the home at Barkingside.

A few kind local donations have also been made in the last few days to the fund, and subscriptions are being paid in. One lady sends one dollar for each of her departed relatives, with the hope that she may be reminded of them when the bells ring.

The subscription list now stands at $4,182.00.

POET AND PEASANT, BUT HONEST

"The next time you find a pocket-book take it to the police station," is what a woman said to Charles Brandon, the Douro poet, this morning. in view of the circumstances the remark was an insinuation, and Mr. Brandon, like most poets, is poor, but honest.

He found the purse on Hunter street this morning, and after he had picked it up a couple of men suggested that he give it to them. Charlie demurred.

A lady came along and said that the purse belonged to Mrs. So-and-So Mr. Brandon surrendered the purse, and as the "lady" accepted it she made the above cutting remark, which Mr. Brandon says was entirely uncalled for, and he requested the Review to say so.

THEATRICAL

Marks Bros. No. A1 Co., played to a capacity house at the Grand last night and the offering "The Princess of Patches," won approval all through the performance. The plot was light, but the comedy was continuous and brezzy at all times. Gracie Marks, as Selma Silverthorn, was immense, and by her work last evening added to her already long list of admirers in this city.

The specialties were strong and each was a hearty applause winner.

The company closes their three nights' engagement with the offering "A Yankee in Ireland," to-night.

TWO LARGE FUR STORES

At Peterborough Ontario and at Regina Saskatchewan

Owing to the big expansion of our Fur business—commensurate with the opening of another large Fur Store in Regina, the Capital City of Saskatchewan, our facilities for giving the public the best Fur service in Central Ontario have greatly increased.

Our Fur factory is larger, better equipped and made thoroughly up-to-date in every regard and our advantages in buying and securing the best Fur Skins, linings and trimmings are better now than ever before as our increased output gives us greater buying power.

A look through our Show Rooms in either Peterborough or Regina will convince anyone that for quality, style, fit and finish our stock of Furs is unexcelled, while our prices show quite a saving on what is ordinarily asked by most Fur Houses.

A PRESIDENTIAL BOOM

President Woodrow Wilson of Princeton Looms Up For Job.

He Has Been Nominated For Governorship of New Jersey For the Coming Year By the Democratic Party and Probability Is That He Is Being Developed as a Candidate For the Position of President.

Princeton, N.J., Sept. 17.—Dr. Woodrow Wilson, who was yesterday nominated for governor of New Jersey by the Democratic state convention, said yesterday afternoon that he would offer his resignation as president of Princeton University to the board of trustees at its next meeting on Oct. 20.

Wilson for governor of New Jersey in 1911 and for President of the United States in 1912. This is said to be the program of New Jersey Democrats and others.

Woodrow Wilson has never been known as a politician, although he has been an educator of prominence, a writer on political and historical subjects, and in his 55th year. For a year he practiced law in Atlanta, Ga. It has been his ambition to become an authority on government, and he has read and written extensively on politics, the science of government and history.

Outlining his views on political questions of the United States and of the commonwealth over which he hopes to preside after next election, he said yesterday:

"What I wish most for the State of New Jersey is a system whereby the haphazard business of the state may be ended and a more thorough and conscientious system devised. I want the state's business done with the thoroughness and honesty that should pervade in a business house. I intend to bring that about if I am elected.

Secondly, I would like to see the taxation of the state equalized. I do not believe that the taxes of the state are equitably adjusted. Property held by citizens is paying an undue tribute to the state, while the corporations—and by that I mean the railroads—are escaping taxes which should be imposed upon them.

"Guilt of corporations is personal and penalties for guilt should be made personal."

RESOLUTIONS PASSED

Labor Congress Censures Order-in-Council Legislation.

Labor Peace Conference, Pensions for the Blind, Care In Building Scaffolding, Calling Out of Troops During Strikes, Immigration, and Eight Hour Day, Are Subjects of Expressions of Opinion at Port Arthur.

Port Arthur, Sept. 17.—Nearly a score of resolutions were rushed through at yesterday morning's session of the Trades and Labor Congress. Among the more important were:

To make arrangements for international peace conference of labor organizations.

To get Government pensions for the blind.

To get legislation requiring greater care in the erection of scaffolds and temporary floors upon which artisans are required to work. (Introduced by Delegate Nicholls, amalgamated carpenters, Toronto.)

Against the practice of using troops in labor disputes.

Approving of the principle of co-operative stores and factories.

To require heating street car vestibules as well as its interiors for the protection of conductors and motormen in winter.

When the settlement of the long-standing strike of the Bucks Stove & Range at St. Louis, Mo., was announced, Delegate J. H. Barnett of Toronto announced that the iron moulders were still on strike at the Bucks Stove Works at Brantford, and that these two firms had no connection with each other.

The report of the special committee on immigration precipitated a discussion of several hours. It entailed the sending of a representative to Britain and the opening of an office there permanently by the Trades and Labor Congress. Most of the delegates were opposed to this, and preferred to spend the money in having the immigration laws enforced in Canada, and this was carried.

In the discussion of this report all legislation by order-in-council was denounced as vicious and inimical to the best interests of the people.

Delegate A. Verville, M.P., was opposed to the Government having power by order-in-council to stay any existing law to the detriment of the wage-earners of this country.

"Just imagine. Here we have a law making it punishable by a fine of $1,000, and then the simple order-in-council sets it aside," said the Labor member.

The importations of men for the Guelph Carpet Works, Montreal building trade, Penman knitting mills, and the Coppley, Noyes and Randall Clothing firm of Hamilton were mentioned in the discussion.

The policy enunciated by Ed. Stephenson of Toronto for the congress, or organized labor in Canada, sending a Canadian to the British House of Commons, has not been mentioned in any way during the convention.

A resolution bearing on the eight-hour day was introduced by President Wm. Glockling of Toronto advocating an eight-hour day campaign.

The congress placed itself on record as favoring the chartering of all trades and labor councils in Canada by the trades congress, in preference to by the American Federation of Labor.

Natural Gas Ring.

Berlin, Ont., Sept. 17.—A meeting of western Ontario municipalities will be held here Sept. 27, to consider organizating a union for the development of the use of natural gas from the extensive fields in southwestern Ontario.

Already London, Guelph, Stratford, Hespeler and Preston have signified a willingness to sit in. It is claimed that natural gas can be piped long distances. For instance, Pittsburg, Pa., utilizes natural gas from West Virginia, 157 miles away.

There are at least half a dozen cases of infantile paralysis in Berlin, Ont.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON TO-MORROW

The manliness of the son of man shines in this lesson at every turn. Think of the grit He showed in stepping out of a carpenter shop without reputation, influence or wealth, and publicly declaring that He was the King who would henceforth rule from heaven. People were amazed at such boldness and called Him the prince of devils, but He was not in the least disconcerted by it. He had and denounced their hypocrisy to their face. He never went behind their back to do it. He knew they were an organized confederacy to capture Him, but He feared nothing. It did not seem to have cost Him a quiver to out of the temple. Without a tremor He carried the war into the very centre of the enemy's ranks when He uttered His judgments of destruction of themselves, their temple and their city.

A PASSION FOR REALITY,

He simply broke loose from a dead, unreal, formal ritualism, and substituted a free, unconventional, real, living evangelism.

From the moment they had challenged Him as to His authority for turning things upside down in the temple the only part they had taken was

TO FIND A VERDICT AGAINST THEMSELVES.

He had denounced them in the parable of the vineyard for failing to meet their responsibilities and told them that the kingdom would be taken from them. He denounced them again for refusing to accept the Gospel invitation and said that none of them would taste of His marriage feast, and they had nothing to say for themselves. They were dumbfounded. At length they sought by cross-questioning to ensnare Him

Observe the manliness of the organized gang in verse 16—"Master, we know Thou art true and teachest the way of God in truth, neither carest Thou for any man. Tell us, is it lawful to give tribute to Caesar?"

Could they get their man on a charge of treason?

Listen to the hypocrites as they seek by flattery to draw Him out. His answer leaves them with absolutely nothing to take hold of, and the gang once more is silenced.

Then came the Sadduces (the rationalists who did not believe in the resurrection) with an absurd question which they wished to present in as absurd a light as possible; "There were with us seven brothers who were married in turn to a certain woman, who died. In the resurrection whose wife will she be?"

He showed that they were

A PRETTY LOT OF THEOLOGIANS

who didn't know their own Scriptures.

Job knew there was a resurrection, so did Ezekiel, so did Daniel. He pointed out that their case had no bearing whatever on the doctrine of the resurrection because there is no marriage in heaven. The joys of the life beyond the grave are pure and spiritual, and arise from the marriage of all to the Bridegroom and not to one another

The rationalistic gang, having failed, the ritualists, or the Pharisees, once more confer together, and decide to secure the services of a clever lawyer to drive Him, if possible into a corner. Their plan was carefully thought out. It was to ask Him a question which would compel Him to admit that some of the commandments were of greater importance than others and then charge Him with lowering moral standards.

Again He used the sword which is the Word of God in a way to gain victory over His enemies.

Yes they tried to get Him.

ENTANGLED IN POLITICS,

in denouncing the system of taxation. They tried to get Him entangled in theology and in law, but had yet to learn that before them stood A MAAN "four square to every wind that blew." A man who had come into the world with a purpose and who couldn't be side-tracked. He had come to solve the problem of the world's greatest need. Romans in His day sought its solution in force, just as Russia is doing to-day. What humanity needs, they say, is a government strong enough to compel men to obey law and all will be well. The church afterwards sought the solution in religligion, and imposed a ceremonialism which, defeating its purpose, produced infidels. The state sought it in education and better environment, but Jesus Christ though recognizing the importance of government, of law, of education, of environment saw that the solution of the problem of humanity was

NEW MEN—TWICE BORN MEN.

To Him sin was the root and branch of human misery. Get humanity saved from sin and the problem of the world's greatest need is solved. From start to finish He kept to His point in revealing God to man and in bringing man back to God.

Robert Speer says "Life is like a stream in which all things that are dead drift down nad only those things work up that possess the power of decisive resistance. Men are caught in the current of sin, the current of cowardice, the current of selfishness and lacking the faculty of quick, sharp, decisiveness are swung away from their moorings and drift before the will is awake and the resistant forces can be summoned into activity." But the Son of Man never.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

(To The Editor of The Review.)

What's the matter with the water in the river? There ain't enough to float a canoe after all the big talk and surely there's been rain enough. The lakes are down to rock bottom and the river is a worthy rival of English's Creek. Yankee Bonnet is sticking up like a monument to High Water Joe. The canal water powers and navigation will all be killed if some sensible man doesn't get a move on. Where's the Board of Trade?

BUMPITY-BUMP.

To the Editor of the Review.

"Not only washing," should have been the reading.

Righteous, a just, religious, virtuous. Righteously, adjustly, religiously, honestly. Righteousness in justice, virtue, holiness. I think there are many righteous, many children especially, but the more just and honest you are the less chance you will have from the asylum ruffians.

$450 MORE THAN ON THE SECOND DAY OF LAST YEAR

Chimes annexed the major money. Lulu looked anything but like a winner at the end of the first mile, when she finished fifth, but in the next heat she worked in stellar fashion and finished second. In the third mile she won the heat, the pace he set when he took the first two apparently being too much for Harry Mack, who couldn't make any better than third place for the third and fourth heats, and in the fifth and final heat of the race he was drawn.

Lew Jean, who finished third in the first two heats, came second in the concluding three heats.

The money divisions were: Lulu Chimes, Lew Jean and Tom Tariff.

The first heat of the 2.35 saw a nice finish, Harry Mack poking his nose under the wire in advance. The second heat was anybody's up to the last turn. Harry Mack again got by the stand in the leading position with Lulu Chimes giving him such a call for the place that the finish brought the crowd to its feet. The horses swept by in a cluster at the half in the third heat, and the leaders clung together in a sizzling finish. Lulu Chimes showed the way under the wire, but had nothing to spare on Lew Jean, who chased hard all the way. Curtis' colt was drawn in the fourth heat, and Picket Box and Percy H. were taken out in the fifth one.

An unfortunate accident occurred in the fifth heat, when Harry Mack, with "Gilly" Kearns up, bumped into the fence on the first turn, and the driver was jolted on to the track. He was not hurt, however, but the field was too far ahead for Harry to resume the race, and he was practically assured of third position at that.

Third money, therefore, went to Tom Tariff, who had finished behind Harry Mack in all the previous heats.

The summary:

2.35 TROT OR PACE.
Purse $150.

Lulu Chimes, T. McKiver, Peterborough	5	2	1	1	1
Lew Jean, T. Hodgson, Orillia	3	3	2	2	2

2.22 RACE.

The racing was sharp and decisive in the 2.22 class, and Bourbon Brook, who trotted a fast and steady race, won in three straights. He wasn't napping what you'd notice, though, at any stage. and eyelash finishes were the order of the race, Planet and Paterson proving hard pluggers for the money.

There was a little daylight between the money trio in the first heat, but in the second they finished in such brotherly fashion that the judges had to look alive to watch the numbers and figure out which horse really did win the heat. However, it was Bourbon's by a hair.

The driver of Paterson complained of the unfair driving of Planet, saying he was crowded and not permitted to pass. The judges saw it that way, too, and although he finished second. Planet was carded at fifth place on account of the tactics of the driver. The latter complained in the stand, but the decision went.

Although the third heat was a good race, Bourbon Brook won with a fair margin to the good.

The summary:—

2.22 TROT OR PACE.
Purse $200.

Bourbon Brook, H. Elmhirst, Keene	1	1	1
Planet, J. McDowell, Toronto	2	5	2
Paterson, E. W. Jones, Peterborough	3	2	3
Ned Wilkes, W. A. Fanning, Lindsay	5	3	4
Holland Boy, Dr. Leach, Peterborough	4	4	5

Time—2.18 3-4, 2.18 1-2, 2.18.

WELL MATCHED PAIR.

Talk about nothing to spare finishes, but the colt race, in which there were only two entries, Fred. Jones and Hazel Brook provided some of the liveliest sport of the afternoon. It would have been impossible to have found a more equally matched pair.

The first heat went to Fred Jones and the second to Hazel Brook. Fred Jones took the rubber, but both horses finished like a pair of Siamese twins with bikes locked at the wire.

The summary:—

COLT RACE—PURSE, $35.

Fred Jones, R. Cleghorn, Otonabee	1	2	1
Hazel Brook, H. Elmhirst, Keene	2	1	2

Time—1.16, 1.18, 1.16 1-2.

The judges for the races were Dr. Sinclair, Cannington, starter; John Carew, Lindsay; D. B. Denison, R. J. Munro and Dr. King.

BOY SCOUTS.

A feature of the afternoon was the parade of the Peterborough Boy Scouts under the direction of Scoutmaster Waring. They marched past the grandstand to the strains of "The Maple Leaf," and made an excellent impression. They were loudly applauded.

President Leary thanked Scoutmaster Waring and the scouts for their presence at the fair, commended them on their excellent appearance and congratulated them on the fact that Baden Powell had complimented them on being th eneatest Boy Scouts at the Toronto Fair.

He then presented them with a British ensign, amid loud cheering and was thanked by Scoutmaster Waring, who made appropriate acknowledgement.

Hon. J. R. Stratton's horses, which have swept the province, were shown in attractive array and evoked high-appreciative comment.

A FINE BILL.

The grandstand performance was certainly of a superior calibre, and the quality of the acts presented was away above the standard. Both the Malvern troupe of comedy and straight acrobatic performers and acrobats and balancers were worthy of a place in any three ring circus.

FIREWORKS DISPLAY.

The grounds were again crowded at night, when an elaborate and briligiant display of fireworks was the feature.

GOOD MUSIC.

The 57th band played up to their usual high standard of excellence. The music made the vaudeville go with a swing and brightened things up generally.

Special Exhibits

BRINTON'S FINE CARPETS.

An exhibit is made by a local industry, the Brinton Carpet Co., that is much admired. Of course the space allotted for this display is altogether inadequate to make even a fair showing of the admirable goods, and space is allowed for only a few samples. These include Axminster and other handsome rugs in the new patterns. Samples of carpets in regular width are also shown, as well as borders, mats and single pieces. The beauty and quality of the goods brought very general and favorable comment. Illustrations are given of the preparatory work in the making of the reproduction of Parisian rugs, showing the drawings and designs from which the goods are made. The exhibit was in charge of Mr. W. S. Price, of the company's sale staff, and who was most obliging in explaining the details of manufacture and relative qualities and points in the goods of the exhibit.

J. J. TURNER & SONS.

J. J. Turner & Sons are on hand again with a showy exhibit of campers' outfits. Each year sees some new line by this firm and included in the array of goods on this occasion is a cottage tent, which was shown at the Toronto Fair. This outdoor home, won unstinted approval, at the Canadian Industrial, and could have been disposed of, had the firm so desired. They preferred, however, to retain it for show purposes at Peterborough's Fair and elsewhere. The interior is divided into four rooms, and each contains all necessary furniture, cots, etc. A kitchen is attached and a verandah, at the front and on either side. Two doors allow of a clear passageway of fresh air and this special exhibit, was decidedly in keeping with the prevailing weather.

The hunter's tent and those for other uses, were also shown to good advantage and the entire exhibit was in keeping with the enterprising and progressive spirit, shown by J. J. Turner & Sons.

J. T. C. LANG & CO.

The clothing firm of J. T. C. Lang & Co., the Daylight store, is very conspicuous about the grounds, Lang and Maher have the only clothing exhibit and it is particularly natty, and possesses that attractiveness which brings the crowd. The exhibit is placed immediately inside the grounds at the second entrance. Fall and winter styles of clothing are shown to good advantage and every one is a leader. The different brands handled by the firm are right up to the minute and are made to fit correctly and give the value and a little more in wear. The prize list includes a suit of clothes given by J. H. C Lang & Co. Yesterday every visitor was given a handy yard stick.

F.R.G. MACPHERSON CO., LTD.

Now is the time to place your order for that new range. The line of Supreme ranges displayed by the F. R. G. MacPherson Co., Ltd., on the first floor of the exhibit building was inspected by the crowds and the demonstrator was kept busy explaining the many merits of this range, which would be an ornament to any room. The outstanding feature, is the saving of fuel and yet at the same time, just the proper amount of heat is obtained for cooking and heating purposes. The display of electric fixtures was something out of the ordinary. The very latest ideas show out prominently amidst the firm's display and in the background the newest in mantles was a prize winner.

WESLEY BROS.

In their display of doctored clothes Wesley Bros. show a number of high-class specimens of work done by them. The clothes doctors guarantee satisfaction when it comes to making old clothes look new. All kinds of cleaning, pressing and repairing is done at their premises at the corner of George and Brock streets.

G. A. GILLESPIE AT HOME.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, surrounded by an able staff of assistants, was at home to his customers and friends in a large tent, in which practical information concerning dairy and farm produce matters was cheerfully given, verbally or by means of phamplets. The latest and approved of inventions by which the son and daughter of the soil can secure better results with milk, butter, eggs, etc., are handled at Gillespie's, on Simcoe street.

Dragged Two Hundred Yards

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Batten, of Hall's Glen, met with an exciting experience early this week. They were driving to Peterborough, and just at the turn in the road at Nassau the horse took fright at an object on the roadside and shied, falling on its side on the road. Mr. Batten got out of the rig and unhitched the horse, when it suddenly bolted and started for Lakefield at a furious pace. Mr. Batten started on the run after the horse, and had only gone a short distance when he met Mr. Roland Johnson going to Peterborough in his auto. The car was pressed into service and started after the fleeing animal. About two miles up the road the party came up with the horse and Mr. Batten quickly secured the exhausted animal, led it back to the buggy, hitched it up and started on his way again, no damage having been inflicted. Mr. Batten states that the horse was the first one that ever got away from him, and then only after dragging him for about two hundred yards.—Lakefield News.

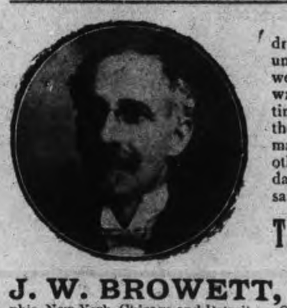
It Saves You Waiting



On Saturdays we have so many persons who drive long distances or come by train, that we are unable to promise appointments for that day, but we wait upon persons in turn. Many persons call write or phone for appointment, we then reserve time for such and it saves them much waiting, as the time so given is kept open for them. We make such appointments for any day or evening other than Saturday. Evening is quite as good as day time for the eye examination, but it is necessary to arrange for this a day or two in advance.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

(To The Editor of The Review.)

What's the matter with the water in the river? There ain't enough to float a canoe after all the big talk and surely there's been rain enough. The lakes are down to rock bottom and the river is a worthy rival of English's Creek. Yankee Bonnet is sticking up like a monument to High Water Joe. The canal water powers and navigation will all be killed if some sensible man doesn't get a move on. Where's the Board of Trade?

BUMPITY-BUMP.

$450 MORE THAN ON THE SECOND DAY OF LAST YEAR

Chimes annexed the major money. Lulu looked anything but like a winner at the end of the first mile, when she finished fifth, but in the next heat she worked in stellar fashion and finished second. In the third mile she won the heat, the pace he set when he took the first two apparently being too much for Harry Mack, who couldn't make any better than third place for the third and fourth heats, and in the fifth and final heat of the race he was drawn.

Lew Jean, who finished third in the first two heats, came second in the concluding three heats.

The money divisions were: Lulu Chimes, Lew Jean and Tom Tariff.

The first heat of the 2.35 saw a nice finish, Harry Mack poking his nose under the wire in advance. The second heat was anybody's up to the last turn. Harry Mack again got by the stand in the leading position with Lulu Chimes giving him such a call for the place that the finish brought the crowd to its feet. The horses swept by in a cluster at the half in the third heat, and the leaders clung together in a sizzling finish. Lulu Chimes showed the way under the wire, but had nothing to spare on Lew Jean, who chased hard all the way. Curtis' colt was drawn in the fourth heat, and Picket Box and Percy H. were taken out in the fifth one.

An unfortunate accident occurred in the fifth heat, when Harry Mack, with "Gilly" Kearns up, bumped into the fence on the first turn, and the driver was jolted on to the track. He was not hurt, however, but the field was too far ahead for Harry to resume the race, and he was practically assured of third position at that.

Third money, therefore, went to Tom Tariff, who had finished behind Harry Mack in all the previous heats.

2.22 RACE.

The racing was sharp and decisive in the 2.22 class, and Bourbon Brook, who trotted a fast and steady race, won in three straights. He wasn't napping what you'd notice, though, at any stage, and eyelash finishes were the order of the race, Planet and Paterson proving hard pluggers for the money.

There was a little daylight between the money trio in the first heat, but in the second they finished in such brotherly fashion that the judges had to look alive to watch the numbers and figure out which horse really did win the heat. However, it was Bourbon's by a hair.

The driver of Paterson complained of the unfair driving of Planet, saying he was crowded and not permitted to pass. The judges saw it that way, too, and although he finished second, Planet was carded at fifth place on account of the tactics of the driver. The latter complained in the stand, but the decision went.

Although the third heat was a good race, Bourbon Brook won with a fair margin to the good.

The summary:—

2.22 TROT OR PACE.
Purse $200.

Bourbon Brook, H. Elmhirst, Keene	1	1	1
Planet, J. McDowell, Toronto	2	5	2

WELL MATCHED PAIR.

Talk about nothing to spare finishes, but the colt race, in which there were only two entries, Fred. Jones and Hazel Brook provided some of the liveliest sport of the afternoon. It would have been impossible to have found a more equally matched pair.

The first heat went to Fred Jones and the second to Hazel Brook. Fred Jones took the rubber, but both horses finished like a pair of Siamese twins with bikes locked at the wire.

The summary:—

COLT RACE—PURSE, $35.

Fred Jones, R. Cleghorn, Otonabee	1	2	1
Hazel Brook, H. Elmhirst, Keene	2	1	2

Time—1.16, 1.18, 1.16 1-2.

The judges for the races were Dr. Sinclair, Cannington, starter; John Carew, Lindsay; D. B. Denison, R. J. Munro and Dr. King.

BOY SCOUTS.

A feature of the afternoon was the parade of the Peterborough Boy Scouts under the direction of Scoutmaster Waring. They marched past the grandstand to the strains of "The Maple Leaf," and made an excellent impression. They were loudly applauded.

President Leary thanked Scoutmaster Waring and the scouts for their presence at the fair, commended them on their excellent appearance and congratulated them on the fact that Baden Powell had complimented them on being the neatest Boy Scouts at the Toronto Fair.

He then presented them with a British ensign, amid loud cheering and was thanked by Scoutmaster Waring, who made appropriate acknowledgement.

Hon. J. R. Stratton's horses, which have swept the province, were shown in attractive array and evoked high-appreciative comment.

A FINE BILL.

The grandstand performance was certainly of a superior calibre, and the quality of the acts presented was away above the standard. Both the Malvern troupe of comedy and straight acrobatic performers and acrobats and balancers were worthy of a place in any three ring circus.

FIREWORKS DISPLAY.

The grounds were again crowded at night, when an elaborate and briligant display of fireworks was the feature.

GOOD MUSIC.

The 57th band played up to their usual high standard of excellence. The music made the vaudeville go with a swing and brightened things up generally.

Special Exhibits

BRINTON'S FINE CARPETS.

An exhibit is made by a local industry, the Brinton Carpet Co., that is much admired. Of course the space allotted for this display is altogether inadequate to make even a fair showing of the admirable goods, and space is allowed for only a few samples. These include Axminster and other handsome rugs in the new patterns. Samples of carpets in regular width are also shown, as well as borders, mats and single pieces. The beauty and quality of the goods brought very general and favorable comment. Illustrations are given of the preparatory work in the making of the reproduction of Parisian rugs, showing the drawings and designs from which the goods are made. The exhibit was in charge of Mr. W. S. Price, of the company's sale staff, and who was most obliging in explaining the detsils of manufacture and relative qualities and points in the goods of the exhibit.

J. J. TURNER & SONS.

J. J. Turner & Sons are on hand again with a showy exhibit of campers' outfits. Each year sees some new line by this firm and included in the array of goods on this occasion is a cottage tent, which was shown at the Toronto Fair. This outdoor home won unstinted approval, at the Canadian Industrial, and could have been disposed of, had the firm so desired. They preferred, however, to retain it for show purposes at Peterborough's Fair and elsewhere. The interior is divided into four rooms, and each contains all necessary furniture, cots, etc. A kitchen is attached and a verandah, at the front and on either side. Two doors allow of a clear passageway of fresh air and this special exhibit, was decidedly in keeping with the prevailing weather.

The hunter's tent and those for other uses, were also shown to good advantage and the entire exhibit was in keeping with the enterprising and progressive spirit, shown by J. J. Turner & Sons.

J. T. C. LANG & CO.

The clothing firm of J. T. C. Lang & Co., the Daylight store, is very conspicuous about the grounds, Lang and Maher have the only clothing exhibit and it is particularly natty, and possesses that attractiveness which brings the crowd. The exhibit is placed immediately inside the grounds at the second entrance. Fall and winter styles of clothing are shown to good advantage and every one is a leader. The different brands handled by the firm are right up to the minute and are made to fit correctly and give the value and a little more in wear. The prize list includes a suit of clothes given by J. H. C Lang & Co. Yesterday every visitor was given a handy yard stick.

F.R.G. MACPHERSON CO., LTD.

Now is the time to place your order for that new range. The line of Supreme ranges displayed by the F. R. G. MacPherson Co., Ltd, on the first floor of the exhibit building was inspected by the crowds and the demonstrator was kept busy explaining the many merits of this range, which would be an ornament to any room. The outstanding feature, is the saving of fuel and yet at the same time, just the proper amount of heat is obtained for cooking and heating purposes. The display of electric fixtures was something out of the ordinary. The very latest ideas show out prominently amidst the firm's display and in the background the newest in mantles was a prize winner.

WESLEY BROS.

In their display of doctored clothes Wesley Bros. show a number of high-class specimens of work done by them. The clothes doctors guarantee satisfaction when it comes to making old clothes look new. All kinds of cleaning, pressing and repairing is done at their premises at the corner of George and Brock streets.

G. A. GILLESPIE AT HOME.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, surrounded by an able staff of assistants, was at home to his customers and friends in a large tent, in which practical information concerning dairy and farm produce matters was cheerfully given, verbally or by means of phamplets. The latest and approved of inventions by which the son and daughter of the soil can secure better results with milk, butter, eggs, etc., are handled at Gillespie's, on Simcoe street.

Dragged Two Hundred Yards

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Batten, of Hall's Glen, met with an exciting experience early this week. They were driving to Peterborough, and just at the turn in the road at Nassau the horse took fright at an object on the roadside and shied, falling on its side on the road. Mr. Batten got out of the rig and unhitched the horse, when it suddenly bolted and started for Lakefield at a furious pace. Mr. Batten started on the run after the horse, and had only gone a short distance when he met Mr. Roland Johnson going to Peterborough in his auto. The car was pressed into service and started after the fleeing animal. About two miles up the road the party came up with the horse and Mr. Batten quickly secured the exhausted animal, led it back to the buggy, hitched it up and started on his way again, no damage having been inflicted. Mr. Batten states that the horse was the first one that ever got away from him, and then only after dragging him for about two hundred yards.—Lakefield News.

It Saves You Waiting

On Saturdays we have so many persons who drive long distances or come by train, that we are unable to promise appointments for that day, but we wait upon persons in turn. Many persons call write or phone for appointment, we then reserve time for such and it saves them much waiting, as the time so given is kept open for them. We make such appointments for any day or evening other than Saturday. Evening is quite as good as day time for the eye examination, but it is necessary to arrange for this a day or two in advance.

GAYNOR BLAMES YELLOW PRESS FOR HIS INJURIES

Lays Fault at Hearst's Door.

In Letter to His Sister, Mayor of New York Charges Proprietor of New York American With Inflaming Minds of His Enemies.

New York, Sept. 20.—Mayor Gaynor's own story of the attempt upon his life was published yesterday in the form of a letter written on Sept. 2 by the mayor to his sister, Miss Mary Gaynor of Utica, N.Y. It is a remarkable human document, in which the mayor describes in detail his feelings following the shooting.

The mayor directly accuses the Hearst newspapers of instigating the attack, in which Gallagher was the active agent. False articles, he says, worked upon people of wicked or disordered minds to such an extent that these persons flooded his mail with clippings from the Hearst papers, and caused him to abandon his habit of walking across the Brooklyn Bridge.

"I was not surprised when I was shot," wrote the mayor to his sister. "I had been expecting an assault."

Miss Gaynor, in giving out the letter, said that she did so because she felt it belonged to the whole public, and that the publication would do much good.

Mayor Gaynor, in referring to the pictures of the Reno prize fight, said he had no way to stop the threatres from showing them.

That was the beginning of the attack on him by the Hearst papers. "But the Hearst newspapers kept on denouncing me for not stopping them," says the mayor.

"Finally," continues the mayor, "one day they printed in large type an officer of the Christian Endeavor Society who had called on me and asked me on behalf of that society to stop the pictures, and stated that I told him he was a fool, and was sent by fools. I had never said such a thing.

"Meanwhile, people of wicked or disordered minds would cut these articles out and send them to me with abuse and threats.

"Finally they printed that terrible cartoon of me, entitled 'The Barker.' I was dressed up as a ruffian, standing outside of a prison fight with a cane and barking for people to go in and see the sport. Two men slugging each other, one of them down and bleeding, were exposed in the ring."

The mayor says that he has not read a line of what has been published of the shooting, nor does he now remember the name of the man who shot him. Mayor Gaynor wrote that after the shot was fired:—

"My next consciousness was of a terrible metallic roaring in my head. It filled my head, which seemed as though it would burst open. It swelled to the highest pitch, and then fell and then rose again, and so alternated until it subsided in a continuous buzz. It was sickening, but my stomach did not give way. I was meanwhile entirely sightless.

"I do not think I fell, for when I became conscious I was on my feet. I supposed they saved me from falling, and they were supporting me. My sight gradually returned, so that after a while I could see the deck and the outlines of the crowd around me. I became conscious that I was choking. Blood was coming from my mouth, and I tried all I could to swallow it, so those around me would not see it.

"Though the thing had not entered my head that morning, I was not surprised when I realized that I was shot. I had had a feeling for some weeks that I might be assaulted, on account of anonymous threats I was getting by mail. I had not received so many nor so regularly since I was opposing the ring corruptions and the McKane conditions in Brooklyn and Gravesend when I was a young man."

Robert Adamson, the mayor's secretory, said last night that the mayor's condition continues to improve. "It is true," he explained, "that he has had pains on the right side of his head since he was shot, but they are due to neuralgia. It is true also that his voice is husky and low. This is because he has been compelled to do too much talking since he left the hospital. The mayor plans to return to his desk at the city hall on Oct. 3, and in the meantime to do as little talking as possible."

ARCHBISHOP MACLAGAN DEAD

London, Sept. 20.—Dr. MacLagan, the former Archbishop of York, is dead.

Most Rev. Wm. Dalrymple MacLagan, P.C., D.D., D.C.L., LL.D., was born at Edinburgh in 1826, and was the fifth son of David MacLagan, M.D. He served in the Indian army 1847-52, retiring as lieutenant. He left the army for the church, and was ordained a deacon in 1856. He became Bishop of Lichfield in 1878, and Archbishop of York in 1891. It was he who crowned Queen Alexandra in 1902. He retired from the archbishopric in 1909, and was succeeded by Dr. Cosmo Gordon Lang, Bishop of Stepney, who had a short time before declined to become Bishop of Montreal.

Insane Woman is Cured by Hypnotism; Mind Over Matter

Berlin, Sept. 17—Hypnotism is being successfully used to restore to sanity Frau von Schonebeck-Weber, the notable figure of the Allenstein Garrison tragedy.

It was during her long-drawn-out trial on a charge of complicity in the murder of her first husband, Major von Schonebeck, by her lover, Captain von Goben (who committed suicide in prison), that the woman became insane.

She has been living in a private nursing home during the last month, and under the supervision of a leading German nerve physician, Professor Eulenburg, she has been daily hypnotized. The result of the "suggestion" to which she has been subjected is remarkable, and the physicians state that after twelve months' complete rest they have no doubt that the formerly demented woman will be completely cured.

WENT FISHING ON SUNDAY

Whitby, Sept. 20.—The Lord's Day Alliance is actively responsible for a large party from Toronto being arrested in Frenchman's Bay Sunday afternoon.

The party were in half a dozen boats busily engaged hauling in bass and perch, with plenty of bait on board, when the officers appeared during the afternoon in another boat. One boatload containing two young ladies and a male escort escaped by landing on shore. The fair ones waved their handkerchiefs in a farewell to the constables and disappeared amongst the shrubbery.

Those arrested will be tried here on Friday before the police magistrate, and are: R. W. Fraser, Alf. Vigo, G. A. McDonald, Mrs. Fitter, Pat Hare, Mrs. Johnson, Wm. Fox, Geo. Sheppard W. London, C. Swinson and James Corbett.

FATHER KILLED BY SON

Gull Lake, Sask., Sept. 20.—Lewis McBride murdered his father Friday evening in a drunken frenzy. Both occupied a homestead ten miles from the city.

McBride and his son had been in town drinking freely. They returned to their homestead shack and engaged in a drunken brawl, during which Lewis grabbed a double-barrelled shot gun, and discharged the contents of one barrel into his father's stomach.

The shot brought the younger man to his senses, and, realizing what he had done, he immediately set out to town for medical aid, but it was too late. Upon explaining what had occurred at the homestead, he was arrested by Constable Fisher of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police.

EIGHTEEN MONTHS FOR BURGLAR

Owen Sound, Sept. 20.—A series of petty burglaries which have been perpetrated during the past fortnight, in which entrance was forced into several business houses, and small amounts of money taken, came to an end on Saturday night, when Sidney Hope, a young Englishman, was arrested. This morning he confessed to having committed the burglaries when he was confronted by the owners of the articles found in his room in connection with a Chinese restaurant.

The prisoner is an undersized man and was able to force his way through very small openings. Eighteen months in the Central Prison was the sentence he received.

INVESTIGATING UNEMPLOYMENT

Paris, Sept. 20.—Former Premier Bourgeois, in opening yesterday the first international conference on unemployment, said that the purpose of the congress was to investigate the scientific causes of unemployment, with the object of organizing methods for conserving human resources. Besides discussing means of combatting unemployment, the delegates will attempt to lay the basis for a labor legislation between the city and the country districts, and between different countries.

BAD FIRE IN WINNIPEG

Apartment House Burns and Many Narrowly Escape —Loss $125,000.

Winnipeg, Sept. 20.—Fire, which broke out at 2.30 yesterday afternoon in the fashionable residential district of Fort Rouge, and which was not under control till night, did damage roughly estimated at $125,000, while thirty men working on the roof of the unfinished apartment block in which the fire started had a narrow escape.

It broke out in the apartment house of Hicks & Patterson, being erected at a total cost of $150,000, totally destroying it, and then jumped back to McMillan Block, where seven frame houses were speedily licked up. The apartment house was brick and stone, wood finished, and the fire started from an explosion of the plumber's gasoline furnace. A high wind was blowing, and the unfinished structure, being not closed in, the flames spread so rapidly that the men working on the roof were cut off before they recognized their predicament.

Some jumped, others slid down by ropes, and all escaped with a few minor injuries. Forty-five men working inside escaped uninjured.

The $80,000 so far expended on the building is represented by $20,000 insurance.

Racing from house to house, the occupants of the burned residences on McMillan avenue had no time to save even their personal belongings.

Seventy-five firemen and five engines battled with the flames, and F. H. Ireton, engineer of Fire Station No. 4, stoically watched the conflagration lick up his own home.

CONFERENCE OF CATHOLIC CHARITIES

Washington, Sept. 20.—Everything is in readiness at the Catholic University of America for the first national conference of Catholic Charities, which will begin a four days' session next Sunday. At least 300 prominent churchmen from all parts of the United States and Canada, who are interested in this first movement to perfect a permanent national organization of the charitable work of the Catholic Church of the continent, will be in attendance.

Will Send Big Delegation.

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—Orangemen here will send a big delegation to Toronto if any demonstration is planned there for July 12th. They are entirely in sympathy with the proposal to have an Orange demonstration there on a large scale to offset the remarks of Roman Catholics in the recent Eucharistic Congress at Montreal.

OBLIGATORY ARBITRATION

Peace Society Hopes to Effect Treaty Between Britain and U.S.

Boston, Sept. 20.—An unlimited treaty of obligatory arbitration between the United States and Great Britain is the hope of the American Peace Society, as a result of the proposal that the two countries join in 1914 in a celebration to observe the completion of 100 years of peace between them.

The plans for a celebration commensurate with the position among nations of the countries directly interested, and with the occasion, have not yet approached the point, it is said, where details have been definitely discussed, but it is proposed that the observance of the centenary be exclusively along the lines of peace without military forms of demonstration, and that it include a parade of the merchant marine of both nations, as well as features to commemorate the growth and mutual assistance of educational institutions of Canada and the United States.

CRIPPEN WAS WAITING FOR CAUSE FOR DIVORCE

Landlady Tells of Girl's Jealousy.

In Outburst of Depression Crippen's Paramour Told Witness of Her Hopes an Fears.

London, Sept. 20.—Something of what Ethel Claire Leneve suffered as half mad with jealously, she impatiently awaited the fulfilment of Dr. Hawley H. Crippen's promise to make her his wife, was revealed at yesterday's session of the inquest into the death of Belle Elmore, with the murder of whom the doctor and his typist are jointly charged.

In her distress, Miss Leneve confided in her landlady, Mrs. Jackson, and the story that the latter told on the witness stand rivaled the most sensational evidence introduced at the murder trial.

Mrs. Jackson said that the accused girl gave up the room which she had occupied at the home of the witness on March 12, explaining that she was leaving to be married to Dr. Crippen.

Until the first week in February Miss Leneve had slept regularly at Mrs. Jackson's. After that she stopped at the house only occasionally. She said that she spent the other nights at the homes of friends. On one occasion Miss Leneve mentioned having been at the Hilldrop Crescent home of the Crippens, early in February, to help the doctor in a search for a bank book which showed an account for $1,000. She added that a diamond tiara and rings had been found in the house and that the doctor had raised $850 on these.

About the middle of February the witness said Miss Leneve appeared most miserable and depressed. The landlady insisted upon an explanation, telling the girl that she must have something awful on her mind to be in such a condition. The witness testified that the other replied:

"Would you be surprised if I told you that it was the doctor and Miss Elmore? He was the cause of my trouble when you first knew me. She is his wife, and when I see them go away together it makes me realize my position, as to what she is and what I am."

Mrs. Jackson asked: "What is the use of worrying about another woman's husband?"

To this Miss Leneve answered: "Miss Elmore has been threatening to go away with another man. Dr. Crippen has been waiting for her to do so when he would divorce her."

Solicitor Newton, who is looking out for the interests of Dr. Crippen and Miss Leneve, suggested that her lodger's excitement was due to the landlady having resurrected a trouble which the girl experienced during her earlier association with Crippen, but the witness maintained the correctness of her evidence as given.

Another blow was given to Dr. Crippen's fight for liberty when the wife of Dr. T. H. Burroughs, Crippen's closest friend in London, identified a lock of hair, which was disinterred with portions of the human body, in the cellar of the Crippen Hilldrop Crescent home, as being from the head of Belle, as Mrs. Crippen was known on the stage.

Prof. Pepper, the pathologist, repeated the testimony which he had given at the trial in the Bow street police court. In response to questions by the coroner he said:

"I can form no definite opinion as to whether the parts found were those of a male or female. If I take the hair discovered into consideration there is a strong presumption, almost conclusive evidence, that the parts were those of a woman."

Reads Like a Romance; The Story of a Lottery Ticket Across the Sea

Brussels, Sept. 19.—An extraordinary story is just made public in respect of the chief prize of $40,000 in the exhibition lottery. It was long unclaimed, and the identity of the possessor of the winning ticket has only just been established in a curious way. A young Belgian miner, who had purchased a ticket for the lottery, was killed at work through a stone falling on his head some days before the results were announced. According to custom he was buried in his best suit of clothes.

When the weeks passed and the $40,000 remained unclaimed the young man's relations remembered that he had a lottery ticket in his waistcoat pocket, and applied to the authorities for permission to exhume the body.

After some delay this was granted, and the winning ticket was found. The miner was only nineteen years of age.

WILL BE WORLD'S LARGEST CHEESE

Appleton, Wis., Sept. 20.—The largest single cheese ever made in the world will be constructed on a flat car at the John L. Jacquot cold storage plant in this city this week, for exhibition at the National Dairy Show at the Coliseum in Chicago, Oct. 20 to 29.

The cheese will weigh 4,000 pounds. It will take from 40,000 to 50,000 pounds of milk to produce the curd. That will mean all the milk for one day from 2,100 of the best dairy cows in the county, and it will take the entire output from 2,500 dairies in the county for that day. From 400 to 500 men will be required to do the milking, but the entire cheese will be made in one day by N. Simon of Neenah, assisted by six of the most expert cheese makers in this county, and six helpers. It will cost over $800 to produce the big cheese, which will be valued at from $1,000 to $1,200.

Captive of Another Sort.

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—Joseph Brisbois was to get married yesterday, but upwards of a dozen charges of theft interfered. He is under arrest. He was building a house, and, it is alleged, stole the lumber and all of the material for building, not forgetting the tools.

PAPAL LEGATE AT WINNIPEG

Winnipeg, Sept. 20.—Cardinal Vannutelli, papal legate, spent a busy day in Winnipeg, beginning his work at an early hour. At 7 o'clock he said mass at the chapel of the Grey Nuns, and took breakfast there. At 8.30 he was at the Hospice Tache, where an entertainment was presented by the orphan boys and girls under the care of the church. He then attended, in company with the Archbishop of St. Boniface, the reception at St. Mary's Academy, and also visited the Ruthenian, German and Polish schools. At noon he was at the St. Boniface Hospital, which he inspected, and where he took lunch. In the afternoon he was present at a public reception at Government House. He left yesterday afternoon for St. Paul.

GRABBED GUN WRONG WAY

Langham, Sask., Sept. 20.—A. S. C. Latchford, accountant of the Northern Crown Bank, died as the result of a wound received in a goose-hunting expedition near here. He grabbed the gun by the muzzle and received the charge in his neck. He came west from Toronto in 1908. A. J. Wells, manager of the same branch, who also hailed from Ontario, was drowned a short time ago.

THE BELMONT MURDER

The Finger of Investigation is Tracing the Evidence In Belmont Murder Mystery—Deline An Epileptic—Acted Queerly—Developments Are Expected

From Our Own Correspondent.

Havelock, Ont., Sept. 20.—Developments are expected in the Belmont murder case before long, but in exactly what direction it is not known just now. The police are making vigorous attempts to have something substantial to work on before the inquest is resumed on Friday. The difference in time is as yet unaccounted for. It will be remembered that Deline stated himself that he arrived home about 8.30 o'clock in the evening. He left the home of Mr. Wm. McMillan, about fifteen minutes' walk, at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Newel says he did not arrive at her home until about ten o'clock. Here is an hour and a half of time to be accounted for. It is believed that Deline is epileptic. He has shown symptoms of it, and he has always been regarded a little queer by his neighbors. He has some nervous trouble that effects his speech, and when he is aroused his lips will emit frothy saliva. Many queer actions on Deline's part have been noticed by neighbors. Sometimes he would halt in his work in the field and shout, apparently for no reason. He would then continue his work.

Provincial Detective Reburn and County Constable Williams, of town, are working on the case to-day, although there is very little evidence on which to work. The one thing that is clear is, that some time between 8 and 10 o'clock p.m. on Thursday Mrs. Deline was attacked in the back shed of her home by an unknown assailant and in the desperate struggle which seems to have ensued she received a shock which caused her death.

Although several theories have been set forth there is very little evidence to justify an arrest as far as the public know.

A despatch from Toronto says;—Provincial Detective Henry Reburn has been despatched to Havelock by Superintendent J. E. Rogers to investigate the death of Mrs. Deline, the woman who was found dead in her house on concession twelve of Dummer township, Hastings county.

The unfortunate woman was badly bruised and lacerated when found, but the physicians ascribed her death to fright.

The provincial police are satisfied, from the report of the crown attorney, received yesterday, that death was due to a shock resultant from an attempted assault by someone yet unknown.

DELINE PROBABLY UNDER SURVEILLANCE

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Sept. 20.—Another interesting situation in Belmont township mystery developed this afternoon while Provincial Constable Reburn and County Constable Williams were at the home of Hugh Deline. Reburn, bent on an interview, Deline appeared in town unattended and apparently unaware of what was pending. He was at once showed by Village Constable Bennett, who is helping Williams on the case, though he was not molested nor interfered with in any way. Bennett kept an eye on Deline, waiting the re-appearance of the other officials, who obviously hunt in vain for their man.

BIG MERGER OF POWER

Montreal, Sept. 20.—The advance of Montreal Power to 150 and over, and the calling of a meeting to-day by that company, leads to the belief that there is a grand merger of the Montreal Street Railway, Montreal Power and Shawinigan Power Companies on the tapis.

It is stated "on the street" that the Street Railway will go in at 250, Power at 170 and Shawinigan at 125, with a working understanding with Canadian Power, whose friends have captured, perhaps, the absolute control of Street Railway.

AFFAIRS IN PORTUGAL

Lisbon, Sept. 20.—It is believed that King Manuel's appointment of sixteen peers, all supporters of the present Liberal Cabinet, will afford sufficient new strength to the Government to avoid the necessity of a dissolution of Parliament and new elections, which the Republicans declare would mean revolution.

The Government continues its campaign again the Jesuits, and is proceeding with the expulsion of other religious orders, which re-entered Portugal after the issuance of the decree of 1901.

THANKSGIVING DAY

Monday, October 31st, is to be Thanksgiving Day. Years ago our Puritan Fathers to the south held Thanksgiving Day with prayers and fasting. So did our ancestors. Now its games and feasting, crowded theatres and reduced rates on the railroads. Yes the churches are open and the preachers preach and a few attend, a few who hold life lightly and whose Hope is Beyond. But what of the thousands who attend the football games, who watch the road races, who feast and gorge, who get drunk and get out on a tear. The spirit of Thanksgiving Day is almost utterly lost.

E. KING DODDS

E. King Dodds is dead. The last eulogy we wrote was over the remains of that very live corpse—Walt Mason. Mason is not dead, but still grinding out his yard of poetry daily. But E. King Dodds is dead and buried, for the funeral took place to-day. He was a live member in his palmy days, a reporter, editor, advertising manager, and magazine publisher. Yes, and he was an orator too. E King Dodds was a stump speaker of more than ordinary ability. Sir John A. Macdonald counted him as one of his best right-hand men on the platform. He was active in the times of the Dunkin Act, and later in the days of the Scott Act. Blindness came and his voice was seldom heard on the platform and the liquor interests lost a good man to urge their cause against local option. But blindness did not kill the spirit of E. King Dodds, nor did his incurable disease, dropsy. He was game to the last. But death won out and this afternoon the remains were buried in Mount Pleasant cemetery.

THE GREAT PROMISER

Sir Wilfrid Laurier knows quite well that the Hudson Bay route could could never be a success commercially, and the building of a railway to Fort Churchill through the muskegs and bogs would be enormously expensive. There would not be enough traffic over the road to keep the steel from rusting. And yet, in order to catch a few paltry western votes the Premier is willing to pledge the credit of Canada for the construction of the road. Other provinces, which require much in the way of public works, have their needs brushed aside because a band of western voters have clubbed the Government into binding itself to the Hudson Bay railway. To saddle the Maritime Provinces, the great province of Quebec and the banner province of Ontario, with an increased burden of debt for this fanciful undertaking is a piece of crowning folly. But it was ever thus under the regime of Laurierism. The National Transcontinental was born prematurely because its parents came to the sudden conclusion that "time cannot wait." Now, before the Transcontinental with its enormous expenditures, is finished, Sir Wilfrid Laurier has pledged himself to build another road up to that frozen northern sea. With the Georgian Bay problem to be solved, the deepening of the St. Lawrence canals imperatively demanded, and the many necessary works which are clamoring for recognition, it would have been thought that the Premier would have permitted business judgment to supersede the desire for votes to rule in this Hudson Bay railway project. It is perhaps too much, however, to suggest that anything pertaining to business could ever occupy the mind of a man whose senses have been dulled by the insense of idolatory swung by financial followers. And, as of old, Canada's interests are sacrifices on the alter of opportunism.

THE TIES THAT BIND

To Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Feeley, 271 Romaine street, we approach in silent sympathy. Death has had its heavy hand upon their home and there are three vacancies now where once was living flesh and blood. In hours like this, words are cold and dumb and only those who have the Ties That Bind can, appreciate the blow that has fallen upon this Romaine street home. And where is this somewhere? We look to the stars in their silent twinkling, we search the skies in a glance. But we know not. Yet some where we know they are, and they are the ties that bind.

THE FARMER SUFFERS ALSO

The price of timothy seed has nearly doubled during the past three months, outrunning the advance in clover seed.—Farmers' Avocate.

We have to pay more for our beefsteak and our chickens, our eggs and our butter. The farmer also has to pay more. He has to pay more for his help and for his incidentals about the farm. Who gets the cream. Do we, the common people? Does the farmer who rises early and works till late? Not on your life. Who gets it then? The combine, the trusts and the corporations. These fellows who live in the big houses, ride in expensive automobiles and private cars. and whose names are familiar ones. They get the cream, my boy—ours the skim milk.

NOT WELL POSTED

An American Associated Press despatch from Beverley, Mass., yesterday stated that the British ambassador at Washington had had given his consent to Canada entering into direct negotiations with Washington relative to a treaty of reciprocity.

This is illustrative of some United States press agencies' ignorance of the constitution of the British Empire and the mother country.

The American Associated Press ought to know that a British ambassador at Washington has as much right to give such consent as a cigar store wooden Indian. —Kingston Standard.

Our American cousins are great. Hurrah for the eagle and its screech. But their ignorance of things Canadian is sublime. This is a sample. There are thousands of Americans who have never heard of Toronto. The writer met one once in Reno, Nevada. Soon after he met a lawyer in Lincoln, Nebraska, who, on having the incident of the Reno man's ignorance related to him, laughed loudly and spoke of his high opinion of Toronto (the Capital of Canada). Wouldn't that jar you, and he a lawyer. However, Uncle Sam, the day is coming when you will know all about us, and your daughters will come here to live. We are not a bad people even if it does get cold in the winter time. We have lots of big things beside the wheat crop, and out faith in our future is sure. And say, we are not anxious about reciprocity.

PRESCOTT'S PROGRESSIVE PAPER

Why did——stay behind the scenes so long the other night?—Prescott Messenger.

Now, this is what one would call personal journalism. The Prescott Messenger is enterprising. It would be hardly safe in Peterborough. We might have to write something like this; Mr. ——, it is too bad you lost at poker on Sunday night. Mr. A——, you are a liar. Miss B—— what were you doing in the park last night? We cannot afford to adopt these tactics. It might land us in jail.

THE LICENSE LAW

The town of Prince Rupert has from the start been a no-license town. Under local prohibition the illicit sale of bad liquor has proceeded almost unchecked, and drunkenness abounds. The P. R. Empire, which has vainly striven for the enforcement of the law, now comes out boldly in favor of a license system as the only remedy for the existing evil conditions.—Hamilton Herald.

There is a man in Peterborough from Maine. Maine is a prohibition State. This man neither drinks, smokes, chews or swears. He is a good living man. To the writer he stated that prohibition was a farce. He said that in Maine, in his home town, drunkenness was very common. This man has come to Peterborough to assume a responsible position. He is not talking through his hat. He is not talking for a purpose. The Ontario license law is good, as good as can be framed. The law says that under certain conditions liquor can be sold as legally as tea or milk or sugar. The hotel man should be made keep the law. Then there would be no need of the Indian list, no need for many of the tragedies that happen daily all over the country as the result of too much booze. When the hotel man breaks the law, why, soak him.

SIDE LIGHTS

FROM THE PERSIAN.

Edward Fitzgerald.

Alas for those who having tasted once
Of that forbidden vintage of the lips
That, press'd and pressing, from each other drew
The draught that so intoxicates them both,
That, while upon the wings of Day and Night,
Time rustles on, and Moons do wax and wane,
As from the very Well of Life they drink,
And, drinking, fancy they shall never drain,
But rolling Heaven from his ambush whispers,
"So, in my license is it not set down;
Ah for the sweet societies I make
At Morning, and before the Nightfall break;
Ah for the bliss that coming Night fills up,
And Morn looks in to find an empty cup!"

Sarnia Canadian.

Britannia still rules the waves, so far as the mercantile marine is concerned. More than one half the mercantile marine of the world world flies the British flag. Fifty years ago the proportion was 56.4 per cent. to-day it is 59.2 per cent. There were times during the intervening period when it was much greater but the remarkable fact that all the other nations of the earth can only muster 40 per cent. of the world's shipping between them makes a marvellous showing for Great Britain.

WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

Kansas Issue.

The following letter was received the other day by the editor, written by a woman who signs her name and gives her address;—

Dear Sir,—Will you please tell me what to do with a man that drinks three days straight, while he has scarlet fever in his family, everything eaten up and no money in the house. I have four children to feed and a baby nine months old to nurse. When he gets a few dollars it is nothing but the saloon, and I get what is left. There is even no money to pay for the doctor, and I had to stop taking in washing on account of scarlet fever in the house.

"Let whiskey alone and it will let you alone." What a contemptible lie. This poor woman and her children never touch it. Here is a situation that we would commend to the personal liberty advocates.

ACCIDENTS IN LONDON.

Montreal Gazette.

The British Home Office has published a statement which shows that in London streets in 1909 there were 303 fatal and 13,388 other accidents. Of those with fatal results, 86 were ascribed to motor cars and cycles, and 59 to motor omnibuses, 26 to mechanical tramways, 3 to horse tramways, 9 to horse omnibuses, and 120 to other horse vehicles. The proportion due to accidents to horse vehicles seems large, and that due to tramways small. There may in the latter connection be opportunity for people on this continent learning some lessons from the English city.

WORTH OF HIS MONEY.

St. Louis Mirror.

This is a jury room secret that has come into circulation in some mysterious way; "Look here," said one of the jurymen, after they had retired, "If I understand aright, the plaintiff doesn't ask damages for blighted affections or anything of that sort, but only wants to get back what he has spent on presents, pleasure trips, and so forth."

"That is so," agreed the foreman.

"Well, then, I vote we don't give him a penny," said the other hastily. "If all the fun he had with that girl didn't cover the amount he expended. it must be his own fault. Gentlemen, I courted that girl once myself."

HOW THEY GET RICH

Winnipeg Tribune

As an illustration of the way the cost of the eastern end of the G. T. P. R. has more than doubled the original estimates, the land dealt at St. Boniface may be quoted. A piece of land was offered at $99,000, but a couple of middlemen came into the game, secured an option, and the commission bought from them at $222,000, leaving $23,000 rake-off. It's the same all along the line.

EXPERT OPINION

Henry Clews & Co., Sept. 17.

The most disturbing feature in the market at present is the political situation. All indications point to liberal Democratic gains in November, and possibly a Democratic Congress after the next session. The present strong drift towards radicalism is not much relished in financial circles, especially as there is every propect of more or less radical legislation when members elected next November take their seats. It is to be hoped that the present wave of radicalism will later on be checked; for the political outlook is anything but assuring, and is regarded with some apprehension in high financial circles. General trade continues quiet. Our iron and copper industries are still suffering fro moverproduction and the textile markets from the abnormal price of cotton. Nevertheless, there is no unsoundness in the business outlook which a period of quiet and moderate liquidation will not effectually cure.

"Jack ain't back yet?" Polly put the question.

"No; he rode over for the mail."

Polly rearranged the chairs in the room, picking up and replacing the articles on the table to suit her own artistic conceptions. She straightened out a war bonnet on the wall. She was flicking off a spot of dust on the gilt chair that Jack had got as a wedding present for Echo on the day of the station agent's murder, and, being reminded of the tragedy, she asked, "That posse didn't catch the parties that killed Terrill, did they?"

"Not that I hear on. Slim Hoover he took the boys that night an' tried to pick up the trail after it entered the river, but they couldn't find where it come out."

"One of them fellers, the man that left the station alone and probably done the job, rode a pacin' horse," answered Jim between puffs of his pipe.

"Then he's a stranger to these parts. Jack's pinto paces. It's his regular gait. It's the only pacin' hoss around here."

"That's so," he assented, but made no further comment. The full force of the observation did not strike him at the time.

Polly began to pump Colonel Jim. There were several recent happenings which she did not fully comprehend. At the inquisitive age and a girl, she wanted to know all that was going on.

"Jack's been actin' mighty queer of late," she ventured, "like he's got somethin' on his mind."

Jim smiled at her simplicity and jokingly replied, "Well, he's married."

The retort exasperated Polly. She was not meeting with the success she desired. "Do hush!" she cried in her annoyance.

"That's enough on any man's mind," Jim laughed as he sauntered out of the door.

"Somethin' queer about Jack," observed Polly, seating herself at the table. "He ain't been the same man since the weddin'. He's all right when Echo's around, but when he thinks no one is watchin' him he sits around an' sighs."

Jack entered the room at this moment. Absentmindedly he hung his hat and spurs on a rack and leaned his rifle against the wall, sighing deeply as he did so. So engrossed was he in his thoughts that he did not notice Polly until he reached the table. He started in surprise when he saw her. "Hello, Polly!" was his greeting. "Where is Echo?"

Polly rose hastily at the sound of his voice.

"Didn't you meet her?" she asked. "We got her to ride over toward Tucson this mornin' to get her out of the way so's to snake the pianny in without her seein' it." Polly glided over to the instrument and touched the keys softly.

With admiration Jack gazed at the instrument.

"I came around by Florence," answered Jack, with a smile.

Eagerly Polly turned toward him. "See anything of Bud Lane?" she queried.

"No." Again Jack smiled, this time at the girl's impetuosity.

"He'll lose his job with me if he don't call more regular," she said. "Say, Jack, you ain't fergettin' what you promised—to help Bud with the money that you said was comin' in soon as Dick's share of a speculation you and him was pardners in? I'm powerful anxious to get him away from McKee."

Jack had not forgotten the promise; but, alas, under the goading of Mrs. Allen that he should clear off the mortgage on his home, he had used Dick Lane's money for this purpose. In what a mesh of lies and broken promises he was entangling himself! Now he was forced further to deceive trusting little Polly in the matter that was dearest to her heart.

"No, Polly, but the fact is—that speculation isn't turning out so well, after all."

The disappointed girl turned sadly away and went out to Mrs. Allen in the kitchen.

Jack removed his belt and gun and hung them on the rack by the door. Spying Echo's father at the corral, he called to him to come into the house.

"Hello, Jack!" was Allen's greeting as he entered, shaking the younger man's hand.

"When did you come over?"

"This mornin'," Allen told him. "Echo's birthday, you know, an' the old lady allowed we'd have to be here. Ain't seen you since the weddin'. Got things lookin' fine here." Allen slowly surveyed the room.

Jack agreed with him with a gesture of assent. A more important topic to him than the furnishing of a room was what had become of Dick Lane. After the wedding ceremony no chance had come to him to speak privately to Allen.

The festivities of the wedding had been shortened. Slim had gathered a posse and taken up the trail of the slayers. Jim Allen had joined them. The hazing of Jack and the hasty departure of the bridal pair on horseback in a shower of corn, shelled and on the cob, prevented the two men from meeting.

The older man had volunteered no explanation. Jack knew that in his heart Allen did not approve of his actions, but was keeping silent because of his daughter.

Jack could restrain himself no longer. "Jim, what happened that night?" he asked brokenly.

Allen showed his embarrassment. "Meanin'"— Then he hesitated.

"Dick," was all Jack could say.

"I seed him. If I hadn't he busted up the weddin' some," was his laconic answer.

"Where is he?"

Allen relighted his pipe. When he got the smoke drawing freely he gazed at Jack thoughtfully and answered, "He's gone, back where the come from—into the desert." Jim puffed slowly and then added, "Looks like you didn't give Dick a square deal."

Allen liked his son-in-law and was going to stand by him, but in Arizona the saying "All's fair in love and war" is not accepted at its face value.

"I didn't," acknowledged Jack. "I was desperate at the thought of losing her. She loved me and had forgotten him. She's happy with me now."

"I reckon that's right," was Jim's consoling reply.

To clinch his argument and soothe his troublesome conscience Jack continued, "She never would have been happy with him."

"That's what I told him," declared Allen. "He knew it, an' that's why he went away, an' Echo, no matter what comes, she must never know. She'd never forgive you—an', fer that matter, me neither."

Jack looked long out of the window toward the distant mountains, the barrier behind which Dick was wandering in the great desert, cut off from the woman he loved by a false friend.

"How I have suffered for that lie!" uttered Jack in tones full of anguish. "That's what hurts me most—the thought that I lied to her. I might have killed him that night," pondered Jack. He shuddered at the thought that he had been on the point of adding murder to the lie. He had faced the same temptation which Dick had yet to overcome.

"Mebbe you did. There's more'n one way of killin' a man," suggested Allen.

Jack swung around and faced him. The observation had struck home. He realized how poignantly Dick must have endured the loss of Echo and the thought of his betrayal by Jack. As he had suffered mentally so Dick must be suffering in the desert. In self justification he returned to his old argument.

"I waited until I was sure he was dead. Six months I waited after we heard the news. After I had told Echo I loved her and found that I was loved in return—then came this letter. God, what a fight I had with myself when I found that he still lived—was thinking of returning home to claim her for his own! I rode out into the hills and fought it out all alone, like an Indian. Then I resolved to hurry the wedding—to lie to her—and I have been living that lie every minute, every hour."

Jack leaned heavily on the table. His head sank. His voice dropped almost to a whisper.

Allen slapped him on the back to cheer him up. Philosophically he announced: "Well, it's got to be as it is. You'll mebbe never hear from him again. You mustn't never tell her. I ain't a-goin' to say nothin' about it. Her happiness means everything to me."

Jack grasped his hand in silent thankfulness.

The two men walked slowly out of the room to the corral.

CHAPTER XI.

As Echo galloped across the prairie in the glorious morning air the sunshine, the lowing of the cattle on the hills and the songs of the birds in the trees along the Sweetwater had banished all depressing thoughts, and her mind dwelt on her love for Jack and the pleasantness of the lines in which her life had fallen.

Only one small cloud had appeared on the horizon. Jack had not shared with her his confidences in the business of the ranch. He told her he did not want to worry her with such cares. True, there were times when he was deeply abstracted, but in her presence his moroseness vanished quickly. Carefully as he had tried to hide his secret, she had, with a woman's intuition, seen beneath the surface of things and realized that something was lacking to complete her happiness.

As Echo turned toward home a song sprang to her lips. Polly spied her far down the trail.

"Boys, she's comin'," she shouted to the men, who were at the bunk house awaiting Mrs. Payson's return. As they passed the corral they called to Jack and Allen to join them in the living room to prepare for the surprise for Echo.

The party quickly reassembled.

"Good land," shouted Allen, "get somethin' to cover the pianny with!"

The punchers rushed in confusion about the room in a vain search.

"Ain't there a plagued thing we can cover that pianny with?" cried the demoralized Allen, renewing his appeal.

Polly came to the rescue of the helpless men by plucking a Navajo blanket from the couch. Tossing one end of it to Show Low, she motioned to him to help hold it up before the instrument like a curtain.

"Stand in front of it, everybody," ordered Mrs. Allen, who had left her cake baking and hurried in from the kitchen. "Polly, spread your skirts—you, too, Jim."

Allen ran in front of the piano, holding out an imaginary dress in imitation of Polly. "Which I ain't got none," he cried.

Parenthesis jumped in front of the piano stool, trying vainly to hide it with his legs.

"Parenthesis, put your legs together," Mrs. Allen cried.

"I can't, ma'am," wailed the unfortunate puncher. He fell on his knees before the stool, spreading out his waistcoat for a screen. Mrs. Allen helped him out with her skirts.

"Steady, everybody!" shouted Jack.

"Here she is!" yelled Sagebrush as the door opened and the astonished Echo faced those she loved and liked.

Echo made a pretty picture framed in the doorway. She wore her riding habit of olive green, from the hem of which peeped her soft boots. Her hat, broad, picturesque, typical of the southwest, had slipped backward, forming a background for her pretty face. An amused smile played about the corners of her mouth.

"Well, what is it?" she smiled inquiringly.

The group looked at her sheepishly. No one ventured to answer her question.

"What's the matter?" she resumed. "You're herded up like a bunch of cows in a norther."

Sagebrush began gravely to explain. He got only as far as "This here bein' a birthday" when Echo interrupted him: "Oh! Then it's a birthday party?"

Once stopped, Sagebrush could not get started again. He cleared his throat with more emphasis than politeness. Striking the attitude of an orator, with one hand upraised and the other on his hip, he hemmed and hawed until beads of perspiration trickled from his temples.

Again he nerved himself for the ordeal.

"Mebbe," he gasped.

Then he opened and closed his mouth, froglike, several times, taking long, gulping breaths. At last, looking helplessly about him, he shouted, "Oh, shucks, you tell her, Jack!" He pushed him toward Echo. Jack rested his hand on the table and began, "We've a surprise for you—that is, the boys have"—

"What is it?" asked Echo eagerly.

"You've got to call it blind," broke in Sagebrush.

"Guess it," cried Fresno.

"A pony cart," hazarded Echo.

"Shucks, no!" said Show Low at the idea of presenting Echo with anything on wheels.

Echo then guessed, "Sewing machine."

Sagebrush encouraged her. "That's somethin' like it. Go on, go on."

"Well, then, it's a"—

Sagebrush grew more excited. He raised and lowered himself on his toes, backing toward the piano. "Go it; you're gettin' there," he shouted.

"It's a"—

Again she hesitated, to be helped on by Sagebrush with the assurance: "She'll do it. Fire away. It's a"—

"A"—

"Go on."

Sagebrush in his enthusiasm backed too far into the blanket screen. His spurs became entangled. To save himself from a fall he threw out his hand behind him. They struck the polished cover of the instrument, slid off, and Sagebrush sat down on the keys with an unmistakable crash.

"A piano!" cried Echo exultantly.

"Who done that?" demanded Show Low angrily.

Parenthesis from his place on the floor looked at the mischief maker in disgust. "Sagebrush!" he shouted.

"Givin' the hull thing away," snarled Fresno.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Belleriver, Que.—"Without Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I would not be alive. For five months I had painful and irregular periods and inflammation of the uterus. I suffered like a martyr and thought often of death. I consulted two doctors who could do nothing for me. I went to a hospital, and the best doctors said I must submit to an operation, because I had a tumor. I went back home much discouraged. One of my cousins advised me to take your Compound, as it had cured her. I did so and soon commenced to feel better, and my appetite came back with the first bottle. Now I feel no pain and am cured. Your remedy is deserving of praise."—Mrs. EMMA CHATEL, Valleyfield, Belleriver, Quebec.

Another Operation Avoided.

Adrian, Ga.—"I suffered untold misery from female troubles, and my doctor said an operation was my only chance, and I dreaded it almost as much as death. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me without an operation."—LENA V. HENRY, R.F.D. 3.

Thirty years of unparalleled success confirms the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases.

What the Knife Said.

"Some folks want funny inscriptions engraved on their silver," said the jeweler. "Takes wedding knives. Many wedding cakes are such mountainous affairs that a special knife is required to cut them. One of last month's brides cut her cake with a knife that was a present from her aunt. I guess not many of the guests got to read the inscription; if they had they would be talking about it yet. Those knives are supposed to be used for cutting the bride's cake and then laid on the shelf for the rest of time, but the aunt couldn't distinguish, apparently, between wedding and birthday cakes, for she made us engrave on the knife, 'May I serve thee well and often'."

The Educated Chinaman.

To the ordinary Chinaman one talks pigeon English, but it is not always possible to know who is an ordinary Chinaman. I was once in Shanghai and saw two English sailors who wanted to be directed to the quay. One of them said, "Here, ask that old chink walking along there." So the other went up to a stately looking Chinaman and said, "Hi, Johnny, you telle me chop-chop which way velly good water is?" The Chinaman stared at him in cold scorn. "If," he said, "you will speak to me in proper English I will answer you."—London Mail.

How Far the Blood Travels.

The mileage of the blood circulation reveals some astonishing facts. It has been calculated, for instance, that, assuming the heart to beat sixty-nine times a minute at ordinary pressure, the blood goes at the rate of 207 yards in a minute, or nine miles an hour, 220 miles a day and 80,000 miles a year. If a man eighty-four years old could have had one single blood corpuscle floating in his blood all his life it would have traveled in that time nearly 7,000,000 miles.
